On the report of Comrade Zinoviev the Fifth Congress passed a resolution on tactics. What was the essential feature of the analysis of the resolution? The principal point stressed in that resolution was the existence of a "pacifist-democratic

Thus, as a result of the analysis we made of the situation at that time we declared that world economy was in a state of collapse, that European economy was in a state of permanent crisis; and the political superstructure of that analysis was the "era of democratic pacifism." It has been said that there is no difference between the second and the third periods. But if that is the case then I ask, why have we modified our estimate of the general situation? Not because we are cleverer than we were, but because the situation has changed. In the beginning of the process we had rudimentary manifestations of stabilization and we had very serious grounds for believing that these were only of a casual character. Now we have no grounds for believing that. The situation has become much clearer; the facts speak much more eloquently. That is why we have modified our estimate of the

Is this attitude correct? No, it is not. It is the reflection of bility of revolution in either of these an underestimation of the war danger. From the objective point of view it is the reflection of right wing dangers in the Communist International. The principal danger that threatens us is the under-estimation of the war danger. In view of the fact that this question is by no means a simple one, on the contrary, it is a very complicated one, I think it is my duty to explain it in the most elementary manner possible, in order to avoid any possible misunderstandings and in order to obtain a clearest possible picture of

You know, comrades, that in his article on the Hague Conference, Lenin wrote, that in time of war or immediately on the eve of war a section of the Communist press will undoubtedly disgrace itself. Of course, it may be said that Lenin was a "pessimist." But the fact is, we have these words written in black and white by Lenin. Shall we say that this was an "incautious" expression to use? I do not know whether this forecast will be realized, but I do know that such a danger exists in view of the underestimation of the war danger. I ask you what other danger is there to compare with this one? Almost none, for this is the fundamental question of the whole situation.

How the Question of External and Internal Contradictions Should be Presented

I ask you to verify the question as to whether this is the fundamental question or not. If you decide that this is the fundamental question then it will be easy for you to draw the necessary conclusions. In my opinion, attempts to transfer the center of gravity from the question of the war danger to that of the internal contradictions or to some other, imply a failure to understand the seriousness of the situation. This question is closely connected with the under-estimation of the intervention which has already commenced in China. I think also that it is connected with what I referred to in my speech: the inadequate internationalism of our Communist

The question of the internal contradictions and the connection these have with the external contradictions is a very complicated one.

I have already pointed out that ome comrades, as it were, put the internal contradictions in one pocket and the external contradictions in the other. Such an attitude does not correspond to the objective state of affairs and must inevitably lead erroneous tactical conclu Let us examine the question. First of all I ask you: is revolution pos-sible without war? This is quite a legitimate question. The answer is: of course it is possible. It would be absurd to suggest that an im-
