Municipal coal, yards and ice plant are the first thing which he sees as the immediate result of his election.

The Socialists have three aldermen and two lubor party aldermen are likely to wote with them on important measures, and this, with Kirkpatrick's right to vote in case of a tie, gives more power than might at first appear.

Kirkpatrick is a native of Indiana by birth, is '25 years old, unmarried, and was led to study Socialism by reading Upton Sinclair's "Jungle."

He is a baseball fan, and not only that, but plays right field on the Granite City team, and his election as mayor will not keep him from taking that position in a game on Sunday.

This, however, may not be possible in the two-year term ahead of the Socialist chief executive, because of limitations on the city's right to issue bonde for the purchase of the blant, or its replacement.

A municipal coal yard will be one of the first objects undertaken. This will be followed by a municipal ice plant. An extension of public ownership as it becomes possible will be the new

An extension of public ownership as it becomes porsible will be the new mayor's goal.

The new mayor, subject to the approval of the city council, will have the appointment of a chief of police, to conduct a department employing eleven police officers, two fire wardens, a city attorney, a city physician and some minor officials.

Work's for Less

The new mayor is pledged to see that the city money purchases what it is paid out for. He has resigned his job at the steel mills to give his time to the city. The office of mayor pays $75 n month. In the steel mill, one of the trust he trust he

May Cancel Bonds in SAFER CITY IS Spring Cleaning Campaign

Are you going to cancel your bond to help clear up the old debt against the DAILY SOCIALIST? While this is not the same as cash, it is, nevertheless, a great help, as it places the paper on a sounder financial basis.

Bonds are being returned from many who have the welfare of the paper at heart. In returning these bonds they render unbounded service to the DAILY SOCIALIST and the SOCIALIST MOVE-

Every bond of $10 means $10 worth of old debt cleared away. We want to dig out and root out this old, accumulated weight against

With the most hearty thanks and appreciation to all the com-rades who have responded to our effort in this campaign—this long, determined attempt—to remove the very weight that has prevented the paper from forging ahead, we again ask the many others who still hold bonds to help us at this time.

You have the paper at heart. You want us to succeed in getting in money enough to place it on a safe basis for all time to come. Hundreds of you have written us wishing us success in our effort to make end of the struggle. We like that. It does us a heap of good—but—

Comrades, we must have your co-operation, for we can't be as successful without it as with it.

Your pleasant recollections of having at one time aided in build-ing up the DAILY SOCIALIST will be increased a hundredfold this last stroke in helping to guarantee its future.

Ten Democrats voted against the bill on its passage, while 197 Democrats voted for it. As in the case when the bill passed at the preceding session of congress, a majority of the Republicans were found against it, the party vote being 67 for and 78 opposed.

Representative Victor L. Berger of Wisconsin, the Socialist member, voted for it, and Representative Akin of New York, who ranks as an independent, voted against it.

WAR ON WAR

A New Weapon for Socialists

Nothing in our Anti-War propaganda has ever equaled the May International Socialist Review. The cover is a beautiful reproduction of the great painting by Franz Stuck, showing WAR as a horseman trampling on the prostrate bodies of workers. And the contents of the REVIEW are worthy of the cover: There are notable articles by Haywood and LaMonte, with the usual variety of industrial news and photographs.

Over 46,000 copies have been printed. Most of these are needed to supply subscribers and those who have ordered in advance, but a few thousand are ready for new hustlers.

Sixty-four large pages, 10 cents a copy, $1.00 a year. For ONE DOLLAR sent AT ONCE we will mail YOU twenty copies of the May REVIEW, together with the following:

1 Communist Mani esto, Marx and Engels.
1 The Question Box, Eastwood.
1 The Wolves (illustrated), Wason. 1 Unionism and So isliam, Debs.
1 Unionism and So isliam, Debs.
1 One Big Union, Trautmann.
100 Socialist Stickers, assorted.
100 Center Shot Leafists, assorted.
50 Socialist Post Cards, assorted.

The Review and books will sell for $2.50, so that you will get back your dollar and $1.50 with it, while the post cards, stickers and leaflets will cost you nothing. We want your help in scattering Socialist literature. We don't need to make profit, as we have no dividends to pay.

Ask for WAR ON WAR COMBINATION, and enclose $1.00. If you prefer to take 5 copies of the Review 4 months on this offer instead of 20 of the May issue, say so in your order.

Beloit, Wis., April 22.—Striking painters of this city scored a victory in the battle against the employing contractors, when one of the employers capitulated and took back ten union painters. The scale demanded by the union was signed and the painters are now at work.

The painters' local in charge of the strike is No. 524, and has been organized since Jan. 7, 1902, being one of the oldest locals in this part of the state. The strikers are standing pat and everything points to a complete victory for the men. Following the break in the contractors' ranks, it is expected that others of the employers will soon sign up. There will no other alternative but defeat and loss of their business and contracts.

ing it, as they had promised.

In 1906 they wanted to again enlarge their factory, but were too poor to furnish the capital, so they came begging to the city once more, setting their mark at $40,000. "Milked Again

To show how well the people liked it they royally responded with a little more than $40,000. This time they not only donated enough sand to put up the building, but also donated a 100-foot strip for a park between the old and new buildings. new buildings. In the years following several attempts were made to unionize the shops out all attempts failed, as the company refused to employ any union men in their factory.

At the beginning of the present year

At the beginning of the present year, the men started to organize and called a meeting in one of the theaters. The firm was notified in advance and when the men cutered the theater the bosses stood at the foor and took down their names. The police were called and tarbosses had to disperse on the grounds that they were only there to intimidate. that they were only there to intimidate the men.

The concern seems to have been nothing but a gigantic swindle on a level with that of the Globa company, which was exposed by the Chicago Daily Socialist and the head of which is now under federal indictional. under federal indictment.

If here are any more of our reacars who have been swindled out of their money by this concern, they are re-quested to lay the matter before the postal authorities for prosecution as there is no hope of the money ever being returned.

GRAND RAPIDS STRIKE GROWING

By United Press.
Grand Rapids, Mich., April 22.—The fourth day of the strike witnessed many non-union men who had continued a work in the furniture factories quit-ting their work and joining the ranks of the striking union workers. More factories closed today and others which have been trying to run short-which have been trying to run shorthanded are further embarrassed by additional desertions by the workers.

Trouble occurred at the Imperial Furniture company's plant when two strikers were arrested for picketing.

Friday afternoon the citizens' inquiry commission held a session. No attempt was made at arbitration. Bishop Joseph Schrembs, a member of the commission who fought for arbitration, tendered his resignation, believing that the commission had accomplished all the commission had accomplished all could. The manufacturers held a session to devise plans to cope

BURNING DAYLIGHT BY JACK LONDON

Again they were convulsed. Joe Hines rolled o on his sleeping robe holding his sides. "And after them will come the big mining sharks that buy whole creeks where you-all have been scratching like a lot of picayune hens and they-all will go to hydraulicking in summer and steam thawing in Steam thawing! That was the limit! Daylight was certainly exceeding himself in his consummate funaking. Steam thawing—when even wood burning was an untried experiment, a dream in the air! Feeding the Dogs. . (Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.) SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS. URNING DAYLIGHT"-Elam Harnish-is intro-duced to the reader as he enters a Circle City dance hall, saloon and gambling house like the through the rim of ice.

It was a hard and simple life. Breakfast was over and they were at work by the first gray light, and when night descended they did their cooking and camp chores, smoked and yarned for a while, then rolled up in their sleeping robes and slept while the aurora borealis flamed overhead and the stars leaped and danced in the great cold. Their fare was monotsour dough bread, bacon, beans and an occasional dish of rice cooked along with a handful of prunes. Fresh meat they failed to obtain. There was an unwonted absence of animal life. At rare intervals they chanced upon the trail of a snowshoe rapbit or an ermine, but in the main it seemed that all life had fied the land. It was a condition not unknown to them, for in all their experience, at one time or another, they had travelled one year through a region teeming with game, where a year or two or three years later no game at all would be found.

Gold they found on the bars, but not in paying quantities. Elijah while on a hunt for moose fifty miles away had panned the surface gravel of a large creek and found good colors. They harnessed their dogs and with light outfits sledded to the place. Here, and possibly for the first time in the history of the Yukon, wood burning in sinking a shaft was tried. It was Daylighe's initiative. After clearing away the moss and grass a fire of dry spruce was built. Six hours of burning thawed eight inches of muck. Their picks drove full depth into it, and when they nad shovelled out another fire was started. They worked early and late, excited over the success of the experiment. Six feet of frozen muck brought them to gravel, likewise frozen. Here progress was slower. But they learned to handle their fires better and were soon able to thaw five and six inches at a burning. Flour gold was in this gravel and after two feet it gave away again to muck. At seventeen feet they struck a thin

"I'll go," said Finn.

They considered a while longer.

"But how are we going to feed the other team and three men till he gets back?" Hines demanded.

"Only one thing to it," was Elijah's contribution.

"You'll have to take the other team, Joe, and pull up the Stewart till you find them Indians. Then you come back with a lond of meat. You'll get here long before Henry can make it from Sixty Mile, and while you're gone there'll only be Daylight and me to feed, and we'll feed good and small."

"And in the morning we-all'il pull for the cache and pan snow to find what grub we've got." Daylight lay back as he spoke and rolled in his robe to sleep, then added:—"Better turn in for an early start. Two of you can take the dogs down, Elljah and me'll skin out on both sides and see if we-all can scare up a moose on the way down."

CHAPTER VIII.

O time was lost. Hines and Finn, with the dogs, already on short rations, were two days in pulling down. At noon of the third day Elijah arrived, reporting no moose sign. That night Daylight came in with a similar report.

As fast as they arrived, the men had started careful panning of the snow all around the cache. It was a big task, for they found stray beans folly a hundred yards from the cache. One more day all the men toiled. The result was pitful and the four showed their calibre in the division of the few pounds of food that had been recovered.

Little as it was, the lion's share was left with Daylight and Elija. The men who pulled on with the dogs, one up the Stewart and one down, would come more quickly to grub. The two who remained would have to last out till the others returned. Furthermore, while the dogs, on several ounces each of beans a day, would travel slowly, nevertheless the men who travelled with them, on a pinch, would have the dogs themselves to eat. But the men who remained, when the pinch came, would have no dogs. It was for this reason that Daylight and Elijah took the more desperate chance. They could not do less, nor did they care to do less. The days passed and the winter began merging imperceptibly into the northland spring that comes like a thunderboit of suddenness. It was the spring of 1896 that was preparing. Each day the sun rose farther east of south, remained longer in the sky and set farther to the west. March ended and April began, and Daylight and Elijah, lean and hungry, wondered what had become of their two comrades. Granting every delay, and throwing in generous margins for good measure, the time was long since past when they should have returned. Without doubt they had met with disaster. The party had considered the possibility of disaster for one man and that had been the principal reason for despatching the two in different directions. But that disaster should have come to both of them was the final Little as it was, the lion's share was left with Daying the two in different directions. But that di the meantime, hoping against hope, and Elijah eked out a meagre existence. The thaw had not yet begun, so they were able to gather the show about the ruined cache and melt it in pots and palls and goldpans. Allowed to stand for a while, when poured off a thin deposit of allime was found on the bottoms of the vessels. This was not flour, the infinitesimal trace of it scattered through thousands of cubic yards of snow. Also, in this slime occurred at intervals a watersoaked tea leaf or coffee trough and they were left to the party of the coffee trough and they were left to the contract of the contract of sands of cubic yards of snow. Also, in this slime occurred at intervals a watersoaked tea leaf or coffee ground; and there were in it fragments of earth and litter. But the further they worked away from the site of the cache the thinner became the trace of flour, the smaller the deposit of slime.

Elliah was the older man and he weakened first, so that he came to lie up most of the time in his furs. An occasional tree squirrel kept him alive. This hunting fell upon Daylight, and it was hard work. With but thirty rounds of ammountion he dared not risk a miss, and since his rifle was a 45-90 he was compelled to shoot the small creatures through the head. There were very few of them and days went by without his seeing one. When he did he took infinite precautions. He would stalk it for hours. A score of times, with arms that shook from weakness he would draw a sight on the animal and refrain from pulling the trigger. His inhibition was a thing of iron. He was the master. Not till absolute certitude was his did he shoot. No matter how sharp the pangs of hunger and desire for that palpitating morsel of chattering life, he refused to take the slightest risk of a miss. He, born gambler that he was, was gambling in the bigger way. His life was the stake, his cards were his cartridges and he played as only a big gambler could play—with infinite care, with infinite precaution, with infinite consideration. As a result he nover missed. Each shot meant a squirrel, and though days elapsed between shots it never changed his method of play. lapsed between shots it never changed his method of

Of the squirrels nothing was lost. Even the skins were boiled to make broth, the bones pounded into fragments that could be chewed and swallowed. Daylight prospected through the snow and found occasional patches of mossberries. At the best mossberries were composed practically, of seeds and water, with a tough rind of skin about them; but the berries he found were of the preceding year, dry and shrivelled, and the nourishment they contained verged on the minus quantity. Scarcely better was the bark of young saplings, stewed for an hour and swallowed after prodigious chewing.

April fave toward its close, and spring smote the land. The days stretched out their length. Under the heat of the sun the snow arose the trickling of tiny streams. For twenty-four hours the chinoda wind blew, and in that twenty-four hours the chinoda wind blew, and in that twenty-four hours the surface became ice capable of supporting a man's weight. Tiny white snow birds appeared from the South, lingered a day, and resumed their journey into the North. Once, high in the air, looking for open water and ahead of the season, a wedged squadron of wild geese honked northward. And down by the river bank a clump of dwarf willows burst into bud. These young buds, stewed, seemed to possess an encouraging nutrition. Elijah took heart of hope, though he was cast down again when Daylight failed to find another clump of willows.

The sap was rising in the trees and daily the trickle of unseen streamlets became louder as the frozen land came back to life. But the river held in its bonds of frost. Winter had been long months in riveting them, and not in a day were they to be broken, not even by the thunderbolt of spring. May came and stray last year's mosquitoes, full grown but harmless, crawled out of rock crevices and rotten logs. Crickets began to chirp and more geese and ducks flew overhead. And still the river held. By May 10 the ice of the Stewart, with a great rending and anapping, tore loose from the banks and rose three feet. But it did not go or an stewart could only rise higher and higher on the harmaning flood beneath. When the Yukon would break was problematical. Two thousand miles away it flowed into Behring Sea, and it was the ice com-ditions of Behring Sea that would determine when the Yukon could rad itself of the millions of tons of the that courtered its beauty.

On the twelfth of May, carrying their sleeping robes, a pail, an axe and the precious rifle, the two On the twelfth of May, carrying their sleeping robes, a pail, an axe and the precious rife, the two men started down the river on the ice. Their plan was to gain to the cached poling boat they had seen, ac that at the first open water they could launch it and drift with the stream to Sixty Mile. In their weak condition, without food, the going was slow and difficult. Elijah developed a habit of faling down and being unable to rise. Daylight gave of his own strength to lift him to his feet, whereupon the order man would stager automatically on until be stumbled and fe'l again.

On the day they should have reached the boat Elijah collapsed utjerly. When Daylight raised him he fell again. Daylight essayed to walk with him, supporting him, but such was Daylight's own weakness that they fell together. Dragging Elijah to the ness that they fell together. Dragging Elijah to the bank a rude camp was made and Daylight started out in search of squirrels. It was at this time that he likewise developed the falling habit. In the evening he found his first squirrel, but darkness came on without his getting a certain abot. With primitive patience he waited till next day, and then, within the hour, the squirrel was his.

The major portion he fed to Elijah, reserving for himself the toucher parts and the bones. But such is the chemistry of life that this small creature, this trifle of meat that moved, by being eaten, transmuted to the meat of the men the same power to move. trifle of meat that moved, by being eaten, transmuted to the meat of the men the same power to move. No longer did the squirrel run up spruce trees, leap from branch to branch or cling chattering to gliddy perches. Instead, the same energy that had done these things, flowed into the wasted muscles and realing wills of the men, making them move—nay, moving them—till they tottered the several intervening miles to the cached boat, underneath which they fell together and lay motionless a long time.

Light as the task would have been for a strong man to lower the small boat to the ground, it took Daylight hours. And many hours more, day by day, he dragged himself around it, lying on his side to caulk the gaping seams with moss. Yet when this was done the river still held. Its ice had risen many feet, but would not start down stream. And one more task waited—the lunching of the boat when the river ran water to receive it. Vainly Daylight stangered and stumbled and fell and crept through the srow that was wet with thaw, or across it when the night's frost still cruised it beyond the weight of a man, searching for one more squirrel, striving to achieve one more transmutation of furry leap and scolding chatter into the lifts and tugs of a man s body that would hoist the boat over the rim of shore, see and slide it down into the stream. Not till the twentieth of May did the river break. The down stream movement began at five in the morning and already were the days so long that Daylight sat up and watched the lee run. sat up and watched the ice run. Elijah was too far gone to be interested in the spectacle. Though vaguely conscious, he lay without movement while the ice tore by, great cakes of it caroning against the bank, uprooting trees and gouging out earth by hundreds of tons. All about them the land shook and reeled from the shock of these tremendous collisions. At the end of an hour the run stopped. Somewhere below it was blocked by a jam. Then the river began to rise, lifting the ice on its breast till it was higher than the bank. From behind ever more water bore down and ever more millions of tons of ice added their weight to the congestion. The pressures and stresses became terrific. Finge cakes of ice were squeezed out till they popped into the air like melon seeds squeezed from between the thumb and forelinger of a child, while all along the banks a wall of ice was forced up. When along the banks a wall of ice was forced up. When the jam broke the noise of grinding and smashing re-doubled. For another hour the run continued. The river fell rapidly. But the wall of ice on top of the bank and extending down into the falling water re-mained.

bank and extending down into the falling water remained.

The tall of the ice run passed, and for the first time in six months Daylight saw open water. He knew that the ice had not yet passed out from the upper reaches of the Stewart, that it lay in packs and jams in those upper reaches, and that it might break loose and come down in a second run any time; but the need was too desperate for him to linger. Elljah was so far gone that he might pass at any moment. As for himself, he was not sure that enough strength remained in his wasted muscles to latinch the boat. It was all a gamble. If he watted for the second ice run Elljuh would surely die, and most probably himself. It he succeeded in launching the boat, if he kept ahead of the second ice run, if he did not get caught by some of the runs from the upper Yukon; if luck favored in all these essential particulars, as well as in a score of minor ones, they would reach Sixty Mile and be saved, if—and again the if—he had strength enough to land the boat at Sixty Mile and not go by.

He set to work. The wall of ice was five feet above the ground on which the boat rested. First prospecting for the best launching place, he found, where a huye cake of ice shelved upward from the river that ran fifteen feet below to the top of the wall. This was a score of feet away, and at the end of an hour he had managed to get the boat that far. He was sick with nausea from his exerctions and at times it seemed that hausea from his exerctions and at times it seemed that blindness smote him, for he could not see, his eyes vexed with spots rud points of light that were as excruciating as diamonal dust; his heart pounding up in his throat and suffocating him. Elijah betrayed no interest, did not move nor open his eyes, and Daylight fought out his battle alone. At last, failing on his knees from the shock of the exertion, he got the boat poised on a secure balance on top of the wall. Crawling on hands and knees, he placed in the boat his rabilities had been as the rife and the pail. He did not bother with the axe. It meant an additional crawl of twenty feet and back, and if the need for it should arise he well knew he would be past all need.

Elijah proved a bigger task than he had anticipated. A few inches at a time, resting in between, he drasged him over the ground and up a broken rouble of ice to the side of the boat. But into the boat he could not get him. Elijah's limp body was far more difficult to lift and handle than an equal weight of like dimensions but rigid. Daylight falled to hoist him, for the body cellapsed at the middle like a partempty sack of cora. Getting into the boat Daylight tried vainly to drag his comrade in after him. The best he could do was to get Elijah's head and shoulders on top the gunwale. When he released his hold to heave from further down the body Elijah promptly gave at the middle and came down on the ice. ot go by. He set to work. The wall of ice was five feet above

In despair Daylight changed his tactics. He struck the other in the face. In the face, in the face, in the chief of the face, in the chief of the face, in the chief of the face, in the face of the face, the mouth, striving by the shock of the hurt to bring back the sinking soul and far-wandering will of the the mouth, striving by the shock of the hurt to bring back the sinking soul and far-wandering will of the man. The eyes fluttered open.

"Now listed!" he shouted, hoarsely. "When I get your head to the gunwale, hang on! Hear me! Hang on! Bite into it with your teeth, but hang on!"

The eyes fluttered down, but Daylight knew the message had been received. Again he got the help-less man's head and shoulders on the gunwale.

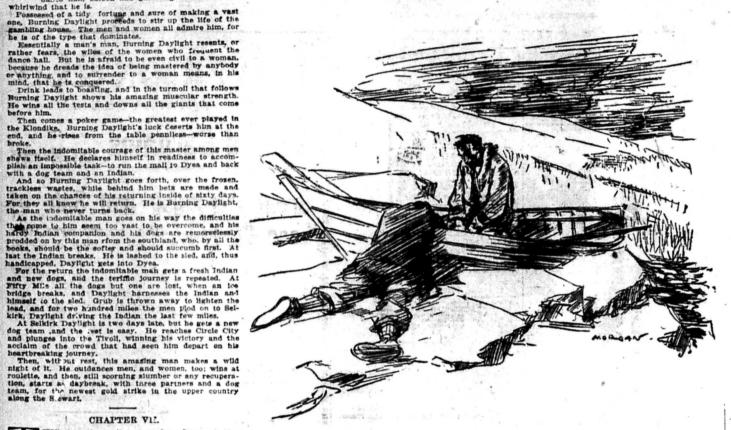

"Hang on, damn you! Bite in!" he shouted, as he shifted his grip lower down.

One weak hand slipped off the gunwale, the fingers of the other hand relaxed, but Elijah obeyed and his teeth held on. When the lift came his face ground forward and the splintery wood tore and crushed the skin from nose, lips and chin, and, face downward, he slipped on and down to the bot on of ine boat till his limp middle collapsed across the gunwale and his legs hung down outside. But they were only his less and Daylight shoved them in after him. Breathing heavily he turned Elijah over on his back and covered him with his robes.

The final task remained—the launching of the boat.

heavily he turned Elijah over on his back and covered him with his robes.

The final task remained—the launching of the boat. This, of necessity, was the severest of all, for he had been compelled to load his comrade in aft of the balance. It meant a suprement of the several properties of the balance. It meant a suprement of the first lifting. Daylight steeled himself and began. Something must nave snapped, for, though he was unaware of it, the next he knew he was lying doubled on his stomach across the sharp stern of the boat. Evidently—and for the first time in his life—he had fainted. Furthermore, it seemed to him that he was finished, that he had not one more morement left in him, and that, the had not one more morement left in him, and that, the had not one more morement left in him, and that, the had not one more morement left in him, and that, the had not one more morement left in him, and that, the had never seen so much of "fe's makedness before. For the less time he experienced a doubt of his own glorious personality. For the moment life faltered and forgot to lis. After ill, he was a little earth maggot, just like all the other earth maggots, like the squirrels he had eaten, like the other men he had seen fall and die: like Joe Hines and Henry Finn, who had already falled and were surely deal, like Elijah lying there uncaring with his skinned face in the bottom of the boat. Daylight's with was such that from where he lay be could look up reserved to the bend, around such, sooner we later, the next ice run would come. And as he looked he seemed to see beck through the past to a time when nelliner white man nor Indian was in the lane, and seemed to see beck through the past to a time when nelliner white man nor Indian was in the lane, and seemed to see beck through the past to a time when nelliner white man nor Indian was in the lane, and seemed to see beck through the past to a the last generations of men were gone it of the last generations of men were gone it of the last generations of men were gone ith his robes. final task remained—the launching of the boat

"The best he could do was to get Elijah's head and shoulders on top of the gunwale."

HIS time the trail was easier. It was better packed and they were not carrying mail this time. The day's run was shorter and likewise the hours on trail. On his mail run Daylight had played out three Indians, but his present partners knew that they must not be played out when they arrived at the Stewart bars, so they set the slower pace. And under this milder toll. where his companions nevertheless grew weary. Daylight recuperated and rested up. At Forty Mile they laid over two days for the sake of the dogs, and at Sixty Mile Daylight's team was left with the trader. Daylight, after the terrible run from Sel.

"Just supposing the big strike does come on the Stewart," he argued. "Mebbe you-all'll be in on it, and then again mebbe you all won't. But I sure will You-all'd better reconsider and go in with me on it." But they were stubborn.

"You're as bad as Harper and Joe Ladue," said Joe "They're always at that game, You know that big flat just below the Klondike and under Moosebide Mountain? Well, the Recorder at Forty Mile was tellin' me they staked that not a month ago-the Harper & Ladue Townsite. Ha! Ha! Ha!"

Elijah and Finn joined him in his laughter, but Daylight was gravely in earnest.
"There she is!" he cried. "The bunch is working!

It's in the air, I tell you-all! What'd they all stake the big flat for if they all didn't get the hunch? Wish I'd staked it." The regret in his voice was provocative of a second

"Laugh, you-all! Laugh! That's what's the trouble with you-all. You-all think gold hunting is the only way to make a stake. But let me tell you all that when the big strike sure does come you all'li do a little surface scratchin' and muck ruckin', but danged little you-all'll have to show for it. You-all laugh at quicksilver in the riffles and think flour gold was manufactured by God Almighty for the express purpose of fooling suckers and chechaques. Nothing but coarse gold for you-all, that's your way, not getting half of it out of the ground and losing into the tallings half of what you all do get.

"But the men that land big will be them that stake

Here the explosion of mirth drowned him out. Banks in Alaska! The idea of it was excruciating. "Yep, and start the stock exchanges"

"Laugh, dang you, laugh! Why, your eyes ain't open yet. You-all are a punch of little mewing kittens. I tell you-all if that strike comes on Klondike Harper and Ladue will be millionnaires. And if it comes on Stewart you-all watch the Elam Harnish town site boom. In them days, when you-all come around makin' poor mouths"-he heaved a sigh of resignation-"Well, I suppose I'll have to give you-all a grab stake, or soup, or something or other."

When he superimposed a feverish metropolis on a waste of timbered, snow-covered flat, he predicated first the gold strike that made the city possible, and next be had an eye for steamboat landings, sawmill and warehouse locations, and all the needs of a far northern mining city. But this, in turn, was the mere setting for something bigger, namely, the play of temperament. Opportunities swarmed in the streets and buildings and human and economic relations of the city of his dream. It was a larger table for gambling. The limit was the sky, with the southland on one side and the aurora borealis on the other. The play would be big, bigger than any Yukoner had ever imagined, and he, Burning Daylight, would see that he got in on that play.

In the meantime there was naught to show for it but the hunch. But it was coming. As he would stake his last ounce on a good poker hand, so be staked his life and effort on the hunch that the future held in store a big strike on the upper river. So be and his three companions, with dogs and sleds and snowshoes, tolled up the frozen breast of the Stewart, toiled on and on through the white wilderness where the unending stillness was never broken by the voices of men, the stroke of an ax, or the distant crack of a rifle. They alone moved through the vast and frozen quiet, little mites of earth-men, crawling their scores of miles a day, melting the ice that they might have water to drink, camping in the snow at night. their wolfdogs curied in frost rimmed, hairy bunches, their eight snowshoes stuck on end in the snow beside the sleds. No signs of other men did they see, though once they passed a rude poling boat, cached on a piatform by the river bank. Whoever had cached it had never come back for it, and they wonder a and mushed on. Another time they chanced upon the sire of an Indian village, but the Indians lad disappeared. Undoubtedly they were on the Ligher reaches of the Stewart the town sites, organize the tradin' companies, start in pursuit of moose herds. Two hundred miles up from the Yukon they came upon what Elijah decided were the bars mentioned by Al Mayo. A permanent camp was made, their outfit of food cached on a high platform to keep it from the dogs, and they started ning as high as aix and eight dollars. Unfortunately this streak of gravel was not more than an inch thick. Seneath it was more muck, tangled with the trunks of ancient trees and containing fossil bones of forgotten monsters. But gold they had found-coarse gold; and what more likely than that the big deposit would be found on bedrock? Down to bedrock they would go, if it were forty feet away. They divided into two ifts, working day and night, on to smoke of their burning rose continually.

It was at this time that they ran short of beans and that Elijah was despatched to the main camp to bring up more grub. Elijah was one of the hard bitten old time travellers himself. The round trip was a hundred miles, but he promised to be back on the third day-one day going light, two days returning heavy, Instead be arrived on the night of the second day. They had just gone to bed when they heard him com-

What in bell's the matter now?" Henry Finn demanded, as the empty sled came into the circle of firelight and as he noted that Elljah's long serious face was longer and even more serious.

Joe Hines threw wood on the fire, and the three men, wrapped in their robes, huddled up close to the warmth. Elijah's whiskered ace was matted with ice, as were his evebrows, so that, what of his fur garb, be looked like a New England cari-ature of Father Christmas.

"You recollect that his spruce that held up the corner of the cache next to the river?" Elijah began.

The disaster was quickly told. The big tree, with all the seeming of hardthood, promising to at and for centuries to con had suffered from a hidden decay. In some way its rooted grip on the earth had weakened. The added burden of the cache and the winter snow had been too much for it; the balance it had so long maintained with the forces of its environment had been overthrown; it had toppled and crashed to had been overthrown; it had toppled and crashed to the ground, wrecking the cache and, in turn, over throwing the balance with environment that the four men and eleven dogs had been maintaining. Their supply of grub was gone. The wolverines had got into the wroked cache and what they had not eaten they had destroyed.

"They plum e't all the bacon and prunes and sugar and dog food," Elijah reported, "and gosh darn my buttons if they didn't gnaw open the sacks and scatter the flour and heans and rice from Dan to Beersheba. I found empty sacks where they'd dragged them a quarter of a mile away."

Nobody spoke for a long minute. It was nothing less than a catistrophe, in the dead of an Arctic winter and in a game-abaudoned land, to lose their grob. They were not panie-stricken, but they were considering. Joe Hines was the first to speak.

"We can pan the snow for the beans and rice—though there wa'n't more'n eight or ten pounds of rice left." the ground, wrecking the cache and, in turn, over throwing the balance with environment that the four

"And somebody will have to take a team and pull for Sixty Mile," Daylight said next.

Socialism Is Coming

The magnificent showing of the Socialists at the city elections in Illinois held in the early part of the week is an earnest of the progress the great cause is making throughout the Union.

The people are studying Socialism. They are beginning to understand it. They find that it is not a chaotic, disorderly effort to destroy society, but an orderly evolution of what is best in the Socialism and capitalism are basically different. The one is founded upon the co-operative praciple, the other upon the competitive. When capitalism displaced feudalism competition was the present system. normal expression of society in its struggle with nature's forces and material.

Science and invention brought the great machines, the great factories, great systems of railroads and telegraphs; a vast co-related banking system; gas, electricity and water plants, which one man, or a small group of men, cannot operate; which can only be operated by vast numbers of human creatures working co-operatively. In other words, PRODUCTION HAS BECOME SOCIAL.

Formerly men worked for themselves of in small groups, in small, simply equipped shops and factories. The owner generally worked with his men. There was a human relation between owner and worker. Today business is conducted by corporations. All human relation between the owner of the business and the employes has disappeared. The railroad president don't know the section

The fundamental change in the nature and method of production demands a basic change in the ownership and management of the means of production.

Socialism would make this change. It would socialize the ownership of the means of production even as production already has been Capitalism resists this change. It would keep the ownership of that upon which the life and welfare of the people depends in the hands of private persons—the capitalists. The contest between these two systems, the old and the new, is world wide. The people of Illinois are ranging themselves on the side of the new-of progress.

Butchers, Traders, Packers

"Retail butchers are holding up the public and charging exhorbitant prices," says C. S. Jones, president of the Chicago Stock Exchange. "Cattle prices are lower now than at any time since 1908.

Hogs, lambs and sheep are lower," asserts Mr. Jones.
On the other hand, Toby Hutter, president of the North Side Retail Butchers' Association, insists that the reductions in wholesale prices of meats were not so great as the packers would have the public believe. He declares that the retailers are giving the public the benefit of the cuts in cost.

It is certain that the prices of all live stock on the farm are much lower than one and two years ago.

The producer gets less than formerly, while the ultimate consumer pays as much as ever.

This is due to a system under which eacl section of the industry, from the man who raises the calf to the man who sells the soup-bone, gets as much prodt as he can. Each one tries to buy as cheaply as he can and sell as dearly as he can, with the net result that the ends of the chain—the producer and the consumer—pay all the profits of the whole chain of gobetweens. Besides there is great waste and friction in the process. It would be much more economical if the producer and consumer were brought in direct touch, direct exchange of labor products, by means of a scientific medium of exchange based upon labor value. That would give to each worker the full product of his labor.

Some day that will be done. In the meantime, let the American worker that the Tribune's advice and "eat potatoes."

The School and Socialism

BY IRA C. TILTON

Our public school system is frequently referred to by Socialists, when king to non-Socialists, as an example of practical Socialism.

The non-Socialist usually replies, if he is "up" on the school question, it the present ichool tax is an almost unbearable burden on the people, and that is Socialism we have enough already.

Now, listen to the Socialist—he is usually a little more than "up" as upared with exponents of capitalism.

A few years ago the State Teachers' Association of Indiana appointed a unmittee to investigate and report on the collection and expenditures of the lians school funds.

This committee's report shows that hundreds of thousands of dollars are lost to the school fund by remission and non-collection of-sines, various offices failing to report fines and forfeitures, sequestered property not on tax duplicates, tax dodging, exemptions of corporate wealth, etc.; that large sums are wasted by careless expenditure on the part of local school officials and over-wasted by carless expenditure on the part of local school obscause of actual charging of retailers.

This should convince Mr. Non-Socialist that it is not because of actual cost that school expenses are a burden. It is the rottenness of capitalism that creates it a basis of his objection.

How long will it take these poor, benighted creatures of an insane system

How long will it the times poor, beinguised clearlies of all hissais system to emerge from darkness into light?

But while we are on the school question there is something else to which we must call attention.

Figures from the office of the state superintendent, Indiana, 1909-1910, show the per cent of loss of pupils from school from one grade to the next:

Per Cent of Loss. Grade. Enroll-ment. Ver Cent ment. 7,784 15.21 9U.020 24,924 , 8,994 3,306 3,0% 4,92 5,35 11,33 22,027 32.07 6,625 52,930

6... 52,330 6.625 11.33 12... 7,063 2,085 22.80

More than one-fourth of the pupils who enter the first grade never reach the second. Wonder what becomes of them? Let Mr. Capitalist answer. More than one-half never reach the eighth grade. Let Mr. Capitalist remark again.
Only two out of nine who complete the eighth grade ever enter high school complete the course.
Think of this you "Heosiers" who boast of the school complete the course.
Think of this you "Heosiers" who boast of the school system in Indiana.
You who are not "Hoosiers," remember Indiana has as high or higher rank educationally than your state.
Will a same man onness it? Not long I think

Will a sane man oppose it? Not long, I think.

Comment on The Growth of Socialism

The non-Socialist press all over the country is commenting upon the growth of Socialism, particularly in reference to those cities which have elected Socialist officials. In their comment, these papers follow one of two methods, either lauding Socialism as a sign of awakening intelligence on the part of American voters, or deprecating everything that bears the name of Socialism, stooping so low in many cases as to invent lies concerning both Socialism and the Socialist officials who are elected. Especially is this true in the comment on Socialism in Milwaukee.

The following editorial, taken from the Los Angeles Record, is a very fair example of the first form of comment, and shows a very liberal spirit on the part of that paper. The editorial reads as follows:

"What does it many?" is the query of a reader, who, judging from his letter, has become greatly excited because Berkeley, Cal., and Butte, Mont., have elected Socialist mayors, and has written us a long letter to say that he cannot understand how men can vote for Socialists when there are other good candidates.

Perhaps, in Berkeley and Butte, there were not "other good candidates," or at least candidates who measured up as well for the people as the Socialist candidates, and if such were the case it would simply mean that the voters wanted the men they considered the most capable and trustworthy in office.

Possibly, if Berkeley and Butte were isolated cases, this explanation would do, but if our inquirer read the papers closely, last week mean that the voters wanted the men they considered the most capable and trustworthy in office.

Possibly, if Berkeley and Butte were isolated cases, this explanation would do, but if our inquirer read the papers closely, last week, he knows that in addition to a Socialist mayor Entre elected a Socialist police judge, a Socialist treasurer and five Socialist aldermen; that Superior, Wis. elected two Socialist alderman and a Socialist justice of the peace; that Victor, Col., elected an entire Socialist ticket; that Walkerville, Mont., elected two Socialist aldermen; that Flint, Mich., elected a Socialist mayor, three Socialist aldermen; three Socialist supervisors and two Socialist sebool trustees; that Girard, Kan., elected a Ficialist mayor; that Beatrice, Neb., Red Cloud, Neb., and Wymors, Neb., all elected Socialist mayors; that in Chicago the Socialist vo.e was 24.50, an increase of 13,000, and that in many other places the Socialists made wonderful gains.

Now, in come of these places there were undoubtedly "other good candidates," but the voters wanted the Socialists and elected 'em, so an explanation that might apply to a few sociated cases will not do. Therefore, we are going to tell our inquirer what we think it means.

We believe that the people have simply got fired of being hum-not do. Therefore, we are going to tell our inquirer what we think it means.

We believe that the people have simply got fired of being humbugged and have decided to play the game themselves.

For years—yes, for generations—the old parties have been putting municipal candidates in the hfield, and these candidates, before election, have talked themselves hearse about what they were going to do for the people, and all that sort of palaver. And then, after election, the people always got theirs, and always got it in the same place—the neck.

There have been so many broken promises and so many betrayals of the people by their municipal officers that the voters have become suspicious of all candidates who, wear the brand of the old parties. While they tany not believe that all Bucialist doctrines and theories are good, they know that the Socialists stand for municipal ownership and for other things that mean much to the common people; that mean that Bill Smith, the hodcarrier, will have just as eyen a break in municipal affairs as the Hon. William Smythe, pfesident of the First National bank, and that is what the people want.

It means that the voters want a new order of things. That they want a government of the people, by the people and for the people to be a reality, and not a mere catch phrase of the stump speaker.

It means that the people have determined to try and come into their own. And the end is not yet.
