Ladies' Garment Workers Announce Big Walk Out

It is planned to have the general strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union called this morning. The strike, when called, will affect 10,000 workers, most of them girls and women, working in the dress and waist shops of

Ever since it was decided to call a strike unless the bosses conceded the demands of the union the workers have been impatiently awaiting the word that would mean that they would walk out of the shops. The strike will also involve 3,000 cloak makers, all of whom are men. They will go on strike in order to protect the women strikers against the violence of the bosses' hired They have already been organized into committees who will protect the pickets and see to it that no violence occurs. They will remain on strike only long enough to assure themselves and the women workers that no trouble will be sought by the bosses.

All arrangements have been made to take care of the strikers. Halls have been rented in the various districts in which the waist and dress shops are located.

In the downtown district six halls have been rented at 180 W. Washington St. and three halls at 20 W.

Workers in the Northwest section of the city will meet at Schoenhof-en's Hall, Milwaukee Ave. and Division St. Workers on the West Side will meet at the West Side Auditorium at Racine Ave. and Taylor St.

Leaflets giving the details of the strike arrangements have been printed and will be put in the hands of the shop chairmen of the various shops to give out when the strike is called. All workers will be instructed to go at once to the nearest hall and register. The strike will be called after more than a month's unsuccessful negotiations between some of the bosses and the union. Most of the bosses have refused to take any part in the negotiations. The shops that have union help want to continue the agreement that is now in force for another year but the union demands

The upholsterers' union ask for a new trial for the four members of their union and Fred Jurish, a member of the painters' union, who were convicted of conspiracy to boycott in Judge Wells' court.

The verdict of guilty came as a complete surprise to the men on trial who felt confident that they would be acquitted. The jury was out several hours before it brought in its verdict. The jury not only found the defendants guilty but fixed the punishment. Thomas O'Shea and William Riordon were fined $100 and Gus Dahl, Michael J. McKenna, and Fred Jurish were fixed $500 each Fred Jurish were fined $50 each.

A Compromise Verdict. The verdict was evidently a com-promise one reached by the jury after it had deliberated some time. The men on trial were indicted last December following unsuccessful efforts of the employing uphols-terers' association to break a strike which had lasted since May first. Dudley Taylor, attorney for the upholstery bosses, was the prime mover in having the men indicted and brought to trial.

The entire case, boiled down, consisted of the charge that the men on trial had pasted stickers appealing to building trades workers to ask upholstery workers with whom they came in contact to show their union

So flimsy was the case against the defendants that they did not put up a defense, considering that the state had not proven that a conspiracy existed.

Two Mexican Bulls Drive Away Whole Herd of Fascisti

(By The Federated Press)
MEXICO CITY, Feb. 26.—Altho there has been more real fighting in this rebellion than in previous Mexi-can revolutions, the whole affair is not devoid of its comic opera side. Today's newspapers gravely announce a victory in Saltillo. A band of fas-cisti (size not given) under ex-Col. Jimenez, attacked Saltillo in order to replenish their supplies. Two policemen, whose names should be cited for heroism, were on the outskirts of the town and when the fascisti arrived began firing at them. After a brief exchange of shots, the fascisti fied in confusion and Saltillo was saved.

PHILADELPHIA IS MAKING BIG FIGHT ON DAVIS LAWS

All-City Conference Is Coming March 10

(Special to The Daily Werker)
PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25.—The Council for Protection of ForeignBorn Workers, organized here several months ago, is urging all labor organizations of this city to send delegates, Monday, March 10 at 8 p. m., to a Philadelphia conference at 521 York avenue for the purpose of planning definite action against the alien slave acts.

The coming conference is expected to be still bigger than the original organization conference several months ago at which 50 organizations were represented.

Reasons for organized action by labor is given in the following letter of invitation to labor bodies sent by the council:

25 Anti-Labor Laws.

There are now pending in Congress not less than twenty-five bills which propose, thru "Selective Immigration, registering and finger printing of all foreign-born workers, to create for the employers an army of serfs who cannot organize or strike. Thru these laws the big employers hope to smash the unions and reduce the standard of living of native and foreign-

The American Federation of Labor at its Portland convention, adopted a resolution vigorously denouncing these laws as strikebreaking measures intended to provide the employers with a slave army of workers. The Portland convention of the A. F. of L. pledged itself to combat these attempts of the employers with all means at its disposal.

Council To Resist.

It was because of the urgent need to carry on an effective struggle against the attempts of Congress to pass these strike-breaking laws that the Council for Protection of Foreign-Born Workers was organized in this city. A conference of all labor organizations of Philadelphia is called by the Coun-

Wall Street Nervous Over Results Oil Probe Revelations

(By The Federated Press)
NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Wall Street is more than concerned by the oil scandal. It had hoped, and its representative men are frank to say so, that the year would be politically quiet—that the country would sit back and accept Cal Coolidge without a thought

One industrial banker is quoted as follows: "The blowing of the dome off the Teapot means more than just a scandal of political interest only. It means, for one thing, that the country is in for a 'political year,' and it is this phase of the question that is disturbing to capital. Until the Washington scandal broke, every-one had settled back in anticipation of an orderly and easy election cam-paign; now there is doubt in some minds as to whether this will be the case; in fact, it looks as if it would be the reverse. As every observer knows, a strenuous and bitter election campaign always has the effect of making business nervous."

By Herminia Zur Muhlen. HE WAS an ugly little grey dog with long silken-soft ears and a bushy tail. He was born in a splendid stable that belonged to a rich man. This rich man lived on a large estate in which were many fields and meadows. And in these fields grew sugarcane, in great quantities, great, round, smooth canes that contained the sweet sugar. On the sugar plantation worked hundreds of Negroes, men and women, and all the Negroes belonged to the rich man who had bought them in the market as he would buy cattle, for this story happened long ago, in those days when slavery existed in America. The rich man could do anything he wished with his slaves. If he was in a bad mood he would permit them to be whipped; if they dared to protest against this cruel treatment they were more cruelly punished—they were stripped naked, smeared with honey, and tied to a tree. The smell of the honey attracted the bees that came in large swarms, settled on the body of the slave, sucked the honey and stung the bound man till he collapsed with pain. Also, the master could sell his slave, did this frequently, without the least consideration tearing mother from child, separating man and wife, sister and brother. The poor Negroes were entirely helpless, they had to work all day long in the hot sun, received very poor food,

Once when the rich man walked thru the stable, he noticed the little grey dog who was playing in the straw. He looked at the little dog, and said angrily to the coachman, "What is this ugly little creature doing here in my beautiful stable? Take it out; drown it in the river."

The coachman promised to do this; indeed he pitied the lively little animal, but the master was strict and he did not dare to disobey the com-mand. He called the little dog, who mand. He called the little dog, who came running joyously, and started toward the river. As he came near the homes of the slaves, a little black boy ran out of one of the huts and cried, "O, the lovely little animal! Where are you taking it?" And he ran quite close to them and patted the dog, who mischieviously jumped at him, barking.

"I must drown the dog," answered

"That doesn't matter," cried Benjamin eagerly. "As long as the little dog is allowed to live."

The coachman laughed, removed the string from the neck of the dog, and Benjamin ran to the hut with him, patting him, kissing him, full of joy. At evening when Benjamin's parents came home, he showed them the dog, and the parents also were happy because they had to be away from home all day and always feared that the little boy might go to the river, fall in and be drowned. But now he would stay near the huts with his playfellow, so that he might hide himself quickly in case the rich man might pass by.

Benjamin's parents were young and strong, the best workers on the sugar plantation. My husband will be quite angry about it, for the people in the north are crazy; they claim that the blacks are also human beings, and that slavery must be abolished. WORK SLACKENS AS CAL DENIES UNEMPLOYMENT

500,000 More Jobless Since June

By LELAND OLDS. taff Correspondent of The Federated Press)
Yes, we have no unemployment today, is the latest song hit jointly produced by the president's accomolished cabinet and officially okayed by Coolidge himself.

Will it be popular among the tens of thousands hanging around the employment agencies where there are to be 166 applicants for each 100 jobs?

500,000 More Jobless.

Evidently the cabinet members leave the hard facts behind when they go to confer with the chief. executive, for the most recent report of the U.S. department of labor indicates that at least 500,000 workers who had work in June, 1923, are out of a job. And that takes no account of the steady increase of the population which would normally add at least that many more. In Illinois and Indiana there are tens of thousands of coal miners out of a job or working only two or three days each

Then there's the scientific labor market indicator of the federal reserve board which shows a steady decline in the number of jobs available for each hundred applicants. Since the high point in 1923 this barometer has fallen more than half way back to the depression level of 1921. That means unemployment, but somehow the president and his cabinet can't see it anywhere. Per-haps they are looking too high, over the heads of the workers, at the senate. There's full employment there, at least in the Teapot committee.

White House Bunk. This official White House utterance goes on to assert that everything that can be manufactured in the country seems to be finding a ready market. That's putting it a little strong. How about the great locomotive concerns, Baldwin and American, working only 25 per cent of capacity because they can't get orders? Baldwin laid off more than 14,000 workers during the last months of

How about the car building plants that laid off more than 36,000 work-ers between October and December so that the Illinois department of labor refers to the collapse of the car building industry?

Shoe Industry Down.

When, however, this White House utterance turns to individual industries it is most unfortunate in its choices. The boot and shoe industry, it says, is active and able to dispose of products as fast as they can be made. How about it? According to the Feb. 12 statement of the U.S. department of commerce production of shoe factories fell off 8,000,000 pairs between October and December and reached a point 5,000,000 pairs below production of the same month a year ago.

And incidentally in January the boot and shoe industry was employing 8 1-2 per cent fewer men than in the preceding year. Hoover's encommittee reported this industry badly overexpanded.

Textiles Worse.

The textile industry is an even more unfortunate choice. All reports show that the textile industry has been unable to dispose of all its products for many months with the situation growing worse. As a whole it has laid off one-tenth of its em-ployes since March, 1923. During December woolen mills consumed about one-fifth less wool than in the preceding December.

While the cotton mills are averaging less than 86 per cent of single shift capacity with most northern mills operating only two or three days a week. Some have shut down

Business will probably pick up somewhat as the spring approaches. But not enough to absorb all the unemployed workers. And for an official utterance from the chief executive of the nation to blink the existence of very considerable unemployment today suggests that he is sup-posed to be either an official ostrich trying to avoid the sight of danger ahead by burying his head in the sand, or a dispenser of false optimism to the people.

B. V. D.'less Russian Prince Says He May Get Job

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—This is the ad, sad story of Prince Simon Nicolas Korsakov. The prince was an aide to General Wrangel, at one time the New York Times' favorite defender of civilization. Prince Korsakov did what he could to hamper the Russian workers in their effort to build a new government, and what he could to help starve the peasant. That done, he got away and went to Monte Carlo.

What money he had left he spent there, and borrowed some more. Then he came to America. He knew that in this democracy, and only in this democracy, do people crowd around the feet of titled loafers from the old world. Counts and dukes and princes wrote him that the going continued good in the land of the free, and he managed to get here. Luck brought him up against a "friend" whom he had met in Monte Carlo; and this friend invited him for a visit in Boston. The prince went and ran up a hotel bill at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, which is a toney one, and his next move was to a

Thereupon she was led to another car of the train and was shown the president of the union who had given the government authorities information that she was a Communist, and that she was going to Canada to make tour in behalf of a newspaper that was in the pay of the Russian Soviet

One reason why Morris Kaufman attempted to render this little service to the Canadian government is that Fanny Warshafsky is one of the most active militants of the Fur Workers' union, which this same Kaufman rules with a "strong arm accord"

The mass meeting held this afternoon listened to speakers from the Cigarmakers' union, and the New England organizer of the A. F. of L., who spoke along the usual lines of solidarity during the strike. The exception was Ida Rothstein, member of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, prominent member of the Needle Trades Section of the T. U. E. L. who last spring made a tour of needle trade centers in the United States and Canada on behalf of amalgamation. She pointed out the need of greater interest in the union, not only at strike times but during normal periods. If the union is not what it ought to be, it is our own fault, because of our own lack of interest. The forty-hour week was not the ultimate goal in the needle trades industry; in Russia, they became the arbiters of their own destiny. The workers responded warmly.

OF ATHLETES, IS CONFERENCE

N. Y. Communists Start Sport Movement

(Special to The Daily Worker)
NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The revoutionary youth of America must have sound bodies, declares the Athletic League of the Finnish Federation of the Workers Party which is calling an athletic conference at the Finnish headquarters in New York, 2042 Fifth Ave., for 11 a. m., March 23, with the co-operation of the district office and the Jugo-Slav and Cheko-Slovak Sport Clubs.

All branches of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League are urged to send delegates to work out plans for a vigorous athletic movement among the young people of the party.

Muscular Communism.

Urging the importance of muscular communism the Athletic League points to the fact that the capitalist class spends millions of dollars for the bourgeois sport movement in order to bring the young men and women where it can preach patriot-ism and hatred of the revolutionary movement to them.

On the other hand in Russia, it declares, the workers government is building up the sport movement among the workers and peasants.

Red Sport International. An international working class sport and athletic movement is in existence with two international organizations, one of which has been organized by the communists of Europe. This is the Red Sport International of Moscow; it works in harmony with the Comintern and the Young Communist International which have discussed the sport problem and have told their sections in different countries to build rival sport organizations to the bourgeois sport organizations, to draw the young workers to them and propagate the principles of commu among them.

Outside of Russia there is strong working class sport movements in Germany, Cheko-Slovakia, Finland and many other countries embracing hundreds of thousands of members. Athletes On Barricades.

In America it is our duty to start organization of a Workers Athletic League that is controlled by our party and the Young Workers League. Some comrades might think that when we organize an athletic club into our midst our activities in the class struggle cease. But experience shows us different. Tor instance in the civil war in Finland in 1918 the membership of the workers' sport clubs were among the first to step to the workers' side of the barricades to fight for the rights of the working class. And in the Workers Party branches where there already is a sport club the members of the sport clubs are just as active

New York Labor in Big Drive for

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The local drive to aid the famished workers of Germany is proceeding with enthusiasm and success. Volunteer workers are covering local unions every night, committees are organized in outlying sections, house to house canvasses are arranged and mass meetings are being arranged to spur up interest in the work of saving the workers of Germany from the capitalist-created famine.

The labor unions are responding magnificently to the appeals for funds. Bankers' Local No. 1 donated $1,400, and Bakers' Local Executive No. 3 voted $1,000 to be approved by the union later on.

The executive board of the Painters' union gave $25.00. The unions are cordially receiving speakers from the New York local of the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany, under whose auspices the drive is organized.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—A London rade unionist contributes a long letter to the current number of Advance, organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, in which he tells of shocking conditions in clothing sweatshops working in competition with American shops, and ends with a warning against a too great optimism based on the rolitical victories ism based on the political victories of the English workers.

The real reason for these, he writes, "is the fact that the mass of the workers, seeing our most power-ful unions suffering defeat after de-feat, have lost faith in the industrial organization as a force for their betterment. As a result of their despair, they have used the ballot box to a greater degree. But we must not, comrade, exaggerate the victory not, comrade, exaggerate the victory.

The mass of the workers are apathetic, indifferent. Their support of the Labor Party is more like a man in despair groping in the dark, than a class conscious effort. Still our one ray of hope in the coming year, is that when the next general election comes labor will be powerful enough to bring relief from the present slavery by appropriate legislative measures."

HAS HUGE PROFIT DEBAUCH IN 1923

Baldwin Makes Over $40 a Share

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press Industrial Editor) Baldwin Locomotive Company was forced to resort to obvious account ing tricks to tone down the outrageous pronts made at the expense of the railroads during 1923. Profits of $25.58 on each share of common stock were reported by the company. These are large enough. But an examination of the annual income statement shows that before the juggling of figures profits actually stood at $40.59 on each $100 share. Among other things a reserve of $2,800,000 was set aside to cover the full 1924 dividends on both preferred and com-

Milking the Public.

Such looting of railroad treasuries will go on as long as the continuance of private ownership maintains the fiction that the railroads and their supply corporations are separate interests rather than two parts of the same combine out to milk the public. The actual manufacturing profit on $102,762,075 worth of business was $10,184,755. Profits from the Standard Steel Works together with other income brought the gross profit of the owners to $13,867,922. After pay-ing $2,348,147 interest, $1,400,000 taxes and setting aside $600,000 for depreciation there remained $9,519,-775 for the holders of preferred and common stock or enough to pay their annual dividends three times over.

Reserves Set Aside. But before showing such profits for the stockholders the corporation arbitrarily set aside two unusual reserves, one of $3,000,000 for removals and one of $2,800,000 for dividends in 1924. In other words divi-dends are assured for the coming year whether the corporation gets profitable business or whether it is altogether idle.

This illustrates the striking fact about modern industry that all the reserves piled up in years of activity go to protect the absentee owners. during periods when orders fall off. No reserve is created to feed and clothe the families of the men who actually produce the goods. Today when $2,800,000 stands to keep the owners in cash during 1924 it is also published that over 14,000 wage earners have been totally cut off from the pay roll of the company on account of lack of business.

Buy From Themselves. The excessive profits of Baldwin ocomotive like those of the other great railroad equipment and supply corporations are a result of the fact that financiers of the railroad combine are dealing with members of their own group when they determine the prices which the railroads are to pay for the product purchased. Thru P. Morgan & Co., the directorate of Baldwin interlocks with the executives of the great railroad systems of the country. It also interlocks with such corporations as Midvale Only Revolution Steel, Haskell & Barker, Wasston Piston Ring and other corporations forming the manufacturing end. of the railroad business. Because of such connections Baldwin was able to get such profitable contracts during the period of business depression that in spite of only operating about 35 per cent of capacity it was able to show a very respectable profit.

$60,000,000 Graft. he railroads some $6,000,000 less for the goods furnished and still have secured profits sufficient to provide interest, dividends and normal depreciation reserves. Baldwin's business appears to have amounted to about one-tenth of the billion dollar railroad betterment expenditure which guaranteed prosperity to these interests. It is fair to assume that the carriers could have saved at least $60,000,000 if these allied corporations had not overcharged. But of course this is just one of the ways that railroad financiers are able to get around the limitations of railroad profits to a mere $1,000,000,000 by public rate making.
Altogether Baldwin has on hand

$21,528,885 in undivided profits or more than the entire par value of the common stock. It has additional reserves deducted from profits amounting to $12,613,684. While its total working capital amounts to $43,871,835 or more than the entire total working capital amounts to $43.871,835 or more than the entire value of its common and preferred stock combined.

Out In Englewood.

The Englewood Branch of the Young Workers League announce good speaking and a social and dance Thursday night, Feb. 28, in their new headquarters. 6357 South Ashland Ave. Everybody welcome.

The Count of Romanones and other political leaders to come and kiss the hand that had slapped them. They came—all except the Marquis de Alhucemas, who said he was in mourning, tho he had been seen in the box of a theater here the night before. He will probably be coaxed out of his sulk soon, too.

The republic, like everything else of importance, will be left to the revolutionary proletariat.

Today's Installment of "A Week" JIM THE TRUSTY' TOURING COUNTRY

Published by THE DAILY WORK-ER thru special arrangement with B. W. Huebsch, Inc., of New York City. Coyprighted, 1923, by B. W. Huebsch & Co.

(WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE) The Russian Communist Party branch is governing this frontier city and fighting the counter-revolution. Earlier installments tell of the fuel shortage that prevents seed grain from being fetched on the railroad. The Party meeting decides to send the Red Army far away for fuel, at the risk of leaving the city open for bandits and counter-revolutionists. It also decides to conscript the local bourgeoisie for wood cutting in a near-by park. Varied types of party members are flashed on the screen: Klimin, the efficient president of the branch, who still finds time to have a sweetheart; Robeiko, the consumptive, whose devotion is killing him; Gornuikh, the brilliant youth of 19 on the Cheka; Matusenko, the luxuryloving place hunter, and Martuinov, whose middle-class antecedants allow him to fit with some difficulty into the movement to which his idealism led him, the last issue the party has organized a Saturdaying expedition into the Public Gardens for firewood. A FROSTY wind had been blow-ing, but the sky had remained blue and the colors of everything were sharp and bright. Now, high up, blue-white clouds were floating and the wind with unseen hands carried them across the sky till they covered the sun, when everything became gloomy and dull. Stalmakhov walked hurriedly from is office thru the big square where the market was spread out. Suddenly his attention was caught by a young fellow shrinking with cold, in a tattered incket. Stalmakhov noticed the strong hands, dark with dirt and cold, the sack on his shoulders . . . probab'y a workman from the Depot who had stolen some tools from hunger was exchanging them for

But that forehead, that shaggy head of hair protruding from un-der his cap, seemed to Stalmakhov strangely familiar, and an irresistible impulse made him hurry after the fellow, lay his hand on his shoulder, and ask, "Comrade, what have you got for sale?" "Yes. Yes. I. . . . But you, don't you shout so loud. . . . Come along quickly."

They went to the wooden boarded-up booths, the remains of the old bazaar—nowadays used as a latrine by the market folk They came there, and, looking round, Gornuikh said in his deep bass

"And what are you doing here, eh? Walking about? Watching? Just so. There is work for us all here. It's a pity that you called attention to me. Today I had worked most carefully over my costume and face. In Winter, no one would have known. True, we met today. . . . Find Klimin at once and tell him. . . ."

Gornuikh looked round. He looked with his eyes only, not turning his head.

"Tell him that I waited for him two hours today in the Commission. And don't you look for him in the Commission. He does not go there in the evenings. Probably in the Party-Committee. He got mixed up in this business of getting wood, and chucked his work in the Cheka. Altho, to tell the truth, there is nothing to be done there without him. He is a good organizer and more energetic than any of them. All the same it's a pity that nowadays he is so seldom in in the Cheka. Well, find him. He is either in the Executive Committee, or in the Party Committee, or with Karaulov in the Commissariat for War. Look for him all thru

"But what are you so excited about?" Stalmakhov interrupted him; "he is sure to be in the Commission tomorrow. You will see him there, and can tell him yourself everything you want to.

Gornuikh gripped Stalmakhov firmly by the arm. In his madeup face there was an unaccustomed anxiety.

"Listen to me, Stalmakhov, and do as I tell you. . . . I fear to-morrow will be too late. . .. There is to be a revolt today. . . . Almost for certain."

"Revolt?" said Stalmakhov amazedly. "But what grounds have you got for thinking that?"
"Grounds for thinking it? There are and there aren't. See what a lot of carts from N- Government on the market. I can always tell an N--- peasant from one of our own. I think they have got weapons hidden in them. But how am I to find them? A search would have to be made and the whole market surrounded, and now it's already late. Yes, and you can tell by the general feeling. Here they are always longing to see the end of us. . . . But today the market women are saying with such confidence that today, precisely, not tomorrow, will be the end of the servants of Anti-Christ . . that's us, of course." Stalmakhov laughed. Gornuikh continued:

"You think it funny that Gorniukh should be listening to the babbling of women. But I know that sometimes it's well enough for a Chekist to pay attention to women's babble. You can always tell if, under the babble, there is the seed of a plot, or if it is simply hostile feeling towards us. . . . In general the mouzhiks need understanding. They do not see far, but what is before their eyes they examine and turn to account better than you or I. Well then, find Klimin, tell him, stir him up, and at least let him take some precautions. The rest of our Chekists are a useless crowd. Today I quarrelled with the whole lot of them. I tell them that we must be on our guard, and they make a 'oke of it. It's true, I've got no sort of clues. If there was anything to get hold of, I'd had it already. There's nothing; but I feel it in everything, in the last bulletins, in the answers of prisoners, in trivialities that you can't call proofs, but enough to make me anxious. They've just killed one Chekist, two hundred versts from here, and it seems to me that all this taken together speaks only one thing, and that is of revolt in the near future. . . .

"Killed? What was his name?" Sta'makhov asked in agitation. "Not Surikov?"

"Surikov. . . . He probably got nervous, made a mess of the busi-ness and did for himself. A good fellow, but a bad Chekist. But did you know him?"

"We lived together. . . . Tell me more about his death. . . . Perhaps it's only rumor."

"No. Not rumor. Information from agents. . . . They buried him alive in the ground. . . . But that is beside the point. You go and find Klimin, without fail, do you state of war, but at least let them get the Communist Company under arms. . . Or they will cut the whole lot to pieces like chickens. Well, off with you."

He shook Stalmakov's hand

"Then it's true about Surikov?"
"Of course, true! There's nothing to be done; our work is like that, one must be ready for anything, and probably it was his own fault. . . ." And Gorniukh, bent and ragged, with a sack on his back, went off and disappeared in

Stalmakhov walked home by the uneven, half-frozen road. mind was empty, and thoughts ran thru it like mice thru a cold, bright

Killed him.... And in a moment he would be home, and on the threshold of the house door, orphaned mother would ask news of him, of Sergei. And hard tho it would be he would have to lie to her. He would have to, for in his pocket lay a note from Serezha (affectionate diminutive of Sergei) Surikov, written at the last station before he had gone off there into the blue steppe:

Dear Stalmakhov, if I am killed, tell Mother that I have gone off for some years on a distant mission. To Germany or America. That will be my last request. In memory of our friendship, take my photo-graph. It is fastened to my old certificate, which is lying on the upper shelf of the what-not. Live and work well.

SERGEI SURIKOV. P. S. In case of my death give the letter enclosed with this to the President of the Cheka, Comrade

And when in answer to his emphatic knock the door opened, Stalmakhov saw her, just as he had expected to see her, a little thin old woman with a wrinkled face, and her kind blue eyes, over her spectacles in their tarnished copper frames, looked enquiringly up at

And he heard the question: "Nothing has happened to Serezha? You do not know if there is a letter from him?"

Stalmakhov thought how Sergei, her beloved Serezha, the thread of silver light that held her joyless old age to joyful life, had died a terrible lonely death in the endless steppes away there to the south-Unaccustomed pity stirred in his heart.

"I know nothing fresh, Anna Petrovna," he replied, not looking her in the eyes. She stood on one side and let him go past her, and he went into his room where two beds stood, his and Serezha's, Serezha who had been killed in the far blue steppes.

"Do you not need a samovar, Andre Vasilievitch?" she asked, following him into the room. She sighed and sat down on a chair by

FOR BIG BUSINESS

Crook Talks to Boys' Clubs on Morality

(Special to The Daily Worker)
NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—New Engand has for the past few months been the scene of a tour by "Jimmy the Trusty," who has appeared in movie houses as the "reformed convict," has spoken to Boys' Clubs, and has shaken the hand of mayors of the provincial towns, including Springfield, and of business men. His picture is featured in the local press of most cities; his views on crime are considered good copy. A career of crime, and the confidence man reforms, but instead of getting to work, he conceives the brilliant idea of redeeming mankind. He would preach to boys, paint the danger in such lurid colors that they would thru fear, tread the straight and narrow path. Easy graft he had for many years. In one of the pens where he did a bit, he was an untrustworthy cuss, chumming with the screws (guards), long before he reached his present exalted line, thru mounting from the lower forms of crime to the confidence game. before he became a trusty, he was a miserable, slimy creature, with his eye on the Warden's office, looking for favors.

He may have played the confidence game of late, but only as a step to some bigger graft. And playing up his attempt to fleece a leading society woman gives him that society finish before which we must inevitably bow.

Under Wing of Big'Biz. Jimmy is taken under the wing of big business, because of the slop he hands out. "If you're on the level with mother, you'll never go wrong; don't shoot craps, don't be dishonest—it's only the sucker who commits crime; do you realize, your honor (speaking to the mayor of Springfield), the moral message that the newspapers are going to carry to the men in gray behind these bleak walls." And after reciting his life history, he ended with an original poem, entitled "If Everyone Was Only on the Square."

Big business can use anyone who blames himself for not enjoying the good things of life; who proclaims that conditions in the country are all right, and that anyone who wants to make good can do so. The reds are continually hammering at the system of capitalist production, sweatshops, child labor, poor pay, unemployment, are hammered at; and child labor laws, a joke both in their text and their enforcement, the hollow mockery of the workers' safeguards, the blind alley jobs—these facts tend to grip the imagination of the workers. But it would not do to have the masses get the idea that economic inequalities form the mold for shaping

Never Blames the Rich. Just as preachers tell us that we are poor sinners, and responsible for our misfortunes, so they have preachers like Jimmy the Trusty, to keep those from rebelling who are downtrodden victims of capitalist oppres sion. Just as preachers paint the horrors of hell, so Jimmy the Trusty of capitalism, warns against jail Instead of condemning the rich, who are responsible for crime, he puts the blame on the individual. Crafty, treacherous Jimmy! Respectable munition makers and hell roarers get away with their graft. Why should we condemn a poor fish like you? .

AMERICAN MILITARISM AND ANTI-MILITARISM

By HARRY GANNES.

WITH the United States assuming the foremost imperialist-capitalist role, the imperative necessity of increasing its military machine becomes a vital problem of the day. There is, in this country, a growing and active group of capitalists who recognize that if the United States is to maintain its position as an oppressor and exploiter nation, a large and well equipped army, navy and air force are absolutely essential. "A war for democracy and to end all wars," was the slogan which baited the youth during 1917-1918. That an end to war is not yet is the liberal leaders and, in fact, the heads of all parties, being thus insulted, loudly declared, "I won't play with you any more. The next time admitted even by those who most sublimely believed in the slogan advanced during the hysterical days of the conflict. The world war settled for the American imperialists the conflict of th you send for me, I won't come. When the Marquis of Estella fails, you'll fall with him, and no matter how much you cry, we won't come to pick you up. We'll have a republic, so there."

But when the king heard them say, "Never, no more," he imagined that maybe they had added under their lized at the outbreak of the world war settled for the conflict. The United States, on a larger social, is just in that situation today. The United States, and following the world war. America's formidable position in the world market is daily being questioned and contested by British French and Japanese imperialism. The struggle for oil sharpens the competition. Teapot Dome and Gompers

The Teapot Dome scandal is the topic of discussion in every city and hamlet in the United States. Farmers lean across the fences and cite the latest revelation to their neighbors; wage-earners on their way to and from work and during lunch hour in the shop talk of little else. In other nations the scandal that has ripped American political life wide open is of major importance and its effect on the coming presidential campaign is made the subject of comment by scores of writers.

The headquarters of the American Federation of Labor in Washington is silent as the tomb. Not a single official pronouncement on the most important national event since the declaration of war in 1917 has been issued for the guidance of the organized workers, no word has been uttered or written that would give the membership any idea that the shattering of political reputations and the panic in the ranks of the capitalist parties is anything out of the ordinary.

Surely this is a remarkable circumstance and one that should occasion serious thought on the part of organized workers. Here is an administration that broke the shopmen's strike by mobilizing the full power of the government against it; involved in the scandal is the attorney-general, who secured the issuance of a nation-wide injunction that made the strike illegal and who used the bureau of investigation with its thousands of employes to frame evidence against the strikers, yet no word of condemnation has passed the lips of Samuel Gompers.

On the other hand, the acknowledged leader of the democrat party and a candidate for the presidency has publicly told that in return for a fee he attempted to prevent the recognition of the republic of Mexico until it had come to terms with his oil company em-

The American Federation of Labor was in favor of the recognition of Mexico at the time these attempts were made-successful attempts, by the way-but no condemnation of these nefarious acts has been made by Samuel

Here, then, is a situation in which both parties of American capitalism have furnished indisputable evidence of opposition to the most ordinary demands of labor-political and economic. He who runs may read but Samuel liberal brethern cannot bear to sacrifice. Gompers is as silent as the sphinx.

There are times, and this is on when to remain silent is to condone great is an enemy, but they never make the habitual abuses; Samuel Gompers must know that liberal mistake of mistaking an enemy for a here is an opportunity for organized labor that may come but once in a life time, an opportunity to hold the enemies of labor in both capitalist parties up to public scorn, to strengthen immensely the position of organized labor.

He will do nothing, as usual, except to cast around for some "friend" in one or the other of the capitalist parties to whom labor support can be thrown. He is opposed to independent working class political action and he prefers to continue the policy of trading and truckling for petty favors rather than boldly explore the vast fertile spaces in which a class political party can grow like the green bay

The comment in the official labor press on the Teapot Dome scandal differs not at all from that in the capitalist press. Both regret the impetus it has given to radical criticism of the government and both deplore the blight upon the fair name of America.

Here is the key to the Gompers position. He does not want the people to lose faith in "their" government and far from welcoming the scandal as revealing the inner corruption of capitalist rule he worries over it because it confirms the statements made by the Communists whom he fears. Only individuals like Fall for whom no one has a good word will incur the Gompersian displeasure-no criticism of the government as the instrument of oppression will fall from his lips. Truly the American labor movement is well led-for the capitalists.

Military Prisoners

Since the release from a German prison of the American Legion thug who tried to kidnap Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the draft evader, a movement has sprung up here in Chicago to bring about the release of those victims of militarism who are serving terms of imprisonment in Leavenworth federal prison from a few years to life.

Far be it from us to favor the incarceration of these unfortunate victims of capitalism who were seduced into the service of their masters and for a slight infraction of the rules perhaps. or in some cases for a serious crime, were condemned to a life of isolation, but we protest against the hypocrisy of the Chicago Tribune to ponder over. and other organs of the very interests in whose behalf these hapless creatures shouldered the JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

The organs of plutocracy regret that conscientious objectors have been released while those who have worn the uniform have not. Why no voice has been raised in their behalf is incomprehensible to them. The answer is $2.00..3 months obvious. Those who campaigned to force the government to release the war objectors did so

Another war will surely come if capitalism is to live for some time. Soldiers will be needed. It would never do to release the conscientious objectors and keep those who wore the uniform in prison even if some of them committed henious crimes. It will not do to completely eliminate the "pay" in patriotism.

More Liberal Criticism

We pointed out the other day that Norman Thomas, in the press service of the league for industrial democracy, had falsely accused the radicals at the miners' convention of joining forces with the Klan.

Mr. Thomas, in the latest issue of the service, corrects himself as follows:

One of our correspondents writes regarding our editorial about the Mine Workers' Convention (Service No. 5): "The miner radicals did not ally themselves with the Klan. A number of radicals were the only ones that attended the small Klan meeting and asked heckling questions. However, the radicals seemed glad to have the Klan issue come up because it helped put Lewis in a hole no matter which way he jumped."

We are glad to circulate this point of view as we would any other sincerely presented. From this long range it seemed to us that the trouble with the radicals or progressives was that they were more anxious to put Lewis in a hole than to get the miners out of one. And we say this with no love for the spirit and methods revealed by President Lewis and his journalistic errand boy, Ellis Searles.

Might we point out to Mr. Thomas that the only way yet found to get any group of workers out of a hole is to put their misleaders into

This, of course, is a somewhat different method than the liberal-pacifist one of appealing to the humanitarian sentiments of reactionary blackguards, but the record to date shows that it is the more effective. It necessitates much unpleasantness, however, and makes absolutely impossible any fraternization with the enemy, the one thing that our Radicals make many mistakes; sometimes they make the mistake of thinking a Irlend friend.

The class struggle is not fought over the teacups and toasted marshmallows at the Civic club and as far as we are concerned we lean strongly towards the point of view expressed by John S. Clarke:

Washington dispatches carry the news that Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt is about to withdraw from political activity and take up some other line of endeavor on which the white light of publicity does not beat so fiercely.

His friends are suggesting, according to one news item, that he "engage in some big constructive enterprise of a philanthropic nature." The idea is, we are justified in supposing, that charity will serve to cover up some of the Roosevelt-Sinclair sins.

It is also suggested that he become the national head of the Boy Scouts and we rise with alacrity to second the motion.

> When the war to "end war" was declared by Woodrow Wilson, agent of the American capitalist class, a small minority among the workers looked upon that war as a crime against the workers and against humanity. Rather than participate in such a crime they refused war service and expressed their opinions on the question. For being true to their Chicago Tribune applauded the sentences. It never raised a voice for 1921 and 1922 the years of clear municipal funds and out of private reckoning. Our heritage from the first period are: our Declaration, our fundamental ordinances regarding the Unified Polytechnic Workers' School, the work of political exposition and its methods, a correct formulation of general vocational ed-Many of those thugs were afterwards jailed for crimes of various kinds, principally for sex perversion. the moment they were hailed as he-roes, and got their pictures in the press, the same pictures could seen in the rogues' gallery.

. . . . Radical and progressive organiza-tions exerted themselves to secure the release of those prisoners who were imprisoned for holding political views in opposition to those held by the administration of the moment. The prisoners were not criminals. Intellectually and morally they were of the highest type. They believed the war was a crime. They had the courage then to say what ninety per cent of the people of this country now openly admit.

The men in whose behalf the Tribune is exerting so much energy are not in prison because they stood for their convictions. At best they are the victims of a society which breeds criminals. They did not attempt to improve their environment. They followed the line of least resitance and willingly aided the master class in perpetuating the system. Because they, at a critical time violated discipline in their masters' army they were punished by the servants of the Chicago Tribune, the democratic and republican administrations. Why does the Tri-bune wail because the radical, progressive, liberal and labor movements take little interest in its efforts to get a little publicity out of a movement to free its own pimps, rapists, panderers, sodomists and murderers? We suggest that the Tribune simply call on Calvin Coolidge, unless he is too busy clearing his skirts of the oil bubbles and say, "'Cal', old top. It seems to us that our lads who slipped a little bit have now been sufficiently punished. After all we may need them again, and a rapist, sodomist or pimp can fight just as valiantly for capitalism as a church deacon. Suppose we turn them loose now." There is hardly a doubt but 'Cal' would call up Secretary of War Weeks unless he is driven out by the fumes from the Teapot Dome investigation and advise him to open the gates of the Leavenworth penitentiary and free the military offenders. Why call on the radical organizations who have no friends in the White House?

Our Friends and Punishing Our Enemies because of the presence of C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party. In an article in the Nation the progressive divine tells us that the C. P.
