JUDGE HOLDS FATE OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

JAPANESE WORKERS ON PICKET LINE

Striking Workers of the Faji Gas Spinning Company Picketing with Banners and Wearing Native Costumes to Draw Attention to Their Demonstration.

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

YOUNG man was on the witness He was charged with the larceny of an automobile. Two fat lawyers lounged on chairs in front of him. One of them, his own lawyer, was questioning the defendant, trying to bring out all the favorable points. The prosecutor appeared to be dozing, but every case in a while he would vell; "Object! Object to the whole business!" Nobody seemed to take any particular notice of the objections, been thinking of the new Crowe-Barrett-Thompson alliance in Cook county a week.

THE defendant's name was Considine-Jawn Considine. That's the way he pronounced it. The court was crowded to the doors and standing is forced to leave their children and room was at a premium. Perhaps the go to work in the "yards" or to scrub majority of the Chicago automobile thieves were there. I arrived on the order to help the husband make both scene after the witness had told of a ends meet. As soon as the children visit paid to his house by Officer reach 14 years of age, they must go O'Boyle accompanied by somebody else whose name he did not know. O'Boyle told Considine that he had a warrant for him and Considine said: "If you have, you have it for the wrong man."

RATHER an interesting sidelight on the technique employed by police in making arrests. O'Boyle was friendly. He wanted to get inside and hand the warrant to Considine. The latter advised O'Boyle to stick it underneath the door or throw it in over the open transom. O'Boyle exhibited a healthy lack of confidence in Considine's intentions. He did not want to trust his defenseless warrant to Considine's mercy. He began to make violent assaults on the door,

"FEARING my wife would faint," continued Considine. "Object!" roared the prosecutor. "Well, you see my wife was sick," essayed the witness. "Object!" bellowed the prosecutor. "I'll have the jury withdrawn if this disgraceful appeal to emotion continues." The judge twirled his tall chair around and nodded to the stenographer. "What happened next? What did O'Boyle do then?" asked counsel for the defense. "I let him in and he was very nice, saying he did not want to hurt me and that he know my grandmother was matron at Chicago avenue station for a number of years. He asked me to come down to State's Attorney Crowe's office and talk things over."

"DID he say anything about the four gallons of booze he told us THE elections in the Chicago Amalhere you had in your house?" "He

BARE FRAME-UP AGAINST SACCO AND VANZETTI IN BRIEF GIVEN TO SUPREME COURT ON APPEAL

BULLETIN.

By S. D. LEVINE. (Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 14.-The fate of Sacco and Vanzetti in their appeal for their lives is now in the hands of the supreme court of Massachusetts. The hearing for a new trial that began last Monday was concluded today after speech made by District Attorney Ranny, who argued against granting a new trial, claiming that the victims of the frame-up were given a fair trial.

He claimed that the bringing in of radicalism helped the defense and tried to answer charges of concealing witnesses by saying that the district attorney did not know the name of Gould who would have testified in favor of the defense and that the police who knew him did not give his name in on the list.

The hearing concluded today. The case will be taken on advisement by the court and it may take a few weeks before the decision will

Chicago A. C. W. Left Wing States Its Position

The needle trades unions, even more than other sections of the labor movement, are feeling the effect of class collaboration combined with an industrial depression. The swing of Sidney Hillman into the open championship of class collaboration has significantly occurred at the same time a like campaign is being opened in the American Federation of Labor by William Green. The Amalgamated came to power and fame as a union that was "different." How different or how similar it is today from reactionary unions of the A. F. of L. in the relation of its officialdom to its members and the practice of workers' democracy in the union, may be judged by the following statement of the T. U. E. L. group in the Chicago A. C. SWEET, NEGRO, Clothes Help Make Green BARES TERROR Comfortable As he Makes OF THE K. K. K. Speeches the Bosses Like

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, a picture is inserted in this column showing William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in the uniform that he wears as he stumps the country, delivering mostly banquet speeches, calling on the boss class to be good to the working class.

This picture was taken at the recent Chicago banquet held in the luxurious Palmer House. This banquet was an exception to others being attended almost exclusively by local labor officials. Among these Green's broad expanse of boiled shirt front looked extremely out of place, for all the other labor heads came to "the feed" in their regular inviting them to the social affairs of "capital and labor." It was noticeable that these affairs were always held in the homes of the rich.

Half a million coal miners will be interested in studying this picture of Green, their former secretary-treasurer. Nct that they begrudge Green his "glad rags." But he didn't used to wear them at coal miners' affairs. It is something that he has affected since going to Washington as head of the American Federation of Labor. There one is supposed to garb in the clothes that fits the Washington "atmosphere." Few realize in the beginning that once the chloroforming influence of that "atmosphere" begins to get in its work, the rest is easy for profit rule.

Many "radical" representatives of "the people" go to Washington to congress and then something strange happens. They forget their "radical" utterances made back home, feel comfortable in the "respectability" of the Washington "atmosphere," and forget all about how they were planning to turn things upside down.

It was the habit of the late Sam Compers to put many labor officials, accustomed to be rough in their ways, thru this schooling in "respectability." He often claimed that his hardest job was getting Andy Furuseth, of the Seamen's Union, to agree to put a suit of evening clothes in his baggage when he went on some mission to the British government at London, by the grace of Gompers and the United States government. Compers said he would need it. Furuseth hasn't been the same since.

One may wear the uniform of subserviency to the ruling class and still retain the identity of a rebel. Crouch and Trumbull proved that in the United States army. But they went to prison for it.

The William Green of today is not the William Green who, in 1911, helped push a resolution thru the United Mine Workers' convention, at Columbus, Ohio, demanding that the late John Mitchell, ally of Sam Gompers, withdraw from the class-collaboration National Civic Federation or lose his membership in the miners' union. William Green today is more deeply submerged in the boss class than either Sam Gompers or Mitchell ever were.

Take another look at him. He looks as if the clothes he wears helps make him feel comfortable while making the kind of "don't fight; don't strike" speeches that the bosses like to hear.

I threw a pint of whiskey out of the window before I let him in, because everybody was getting raided around our place, and when I told O'Boyle, he got sore and said: 'Why the h-1 did you do that? We could have drank it." The court got as much a kick out of this as Officer O'Boyle would have gotten out of the whiskey. Finally Considine got into the cop's auto and instead of going to Crowe's office they went to the Town Hall station. Then the agreeable O'Boyle became completely transmogrified.

THE witness said: "As soon as he I got me into the squad room, he showed his police authority. 'Sit down!' he yelled. I sat down, but when O'Boyle left the room, I got up and walked around. When O'Boyle saw me on my feet, he shouted, 'Who told you to walk around?' 'I am not doing no harm to nobody,' I said to O'Boyle and then I seized my opportunity and beat it for the street, with O'Boyle after me. When I hit the sidewalk, I fell and there was O'Boyle with his gun aimed at me: 'Stick 'em up or I'll kill you,' said O'Boyle. I stuck 'em up."

BACK to the station goes Considine where O'Boyle gave him "medicine," each dose consisting of a different kind of a wallop. Finally Considine is taken to the detective bureau and in a few days he is released on bail, but his troubles are not over for the evil spirit of Officer O'Boyle is hovering over him. O'Boyle invites him to the state's attorney's office and while talking to his Nemesis he noticed a "65-year-old man, who weighed 160 pounds and was five feet eight inches tall." "An employe of the state's attorney's office," said the witness.

THIS seemed to get the prosecutor's ■ goat. "How do you know that he was an employe of state's attorney's office?" he growled? "Because my father worked there for twelve years," the witness shot back with a triumphant look. "We'll adjourn until two o'clock," murmured the judge. "Give me a light," said one lawyer to the other. "We ought to send that fellow to jail for throwing that bottle out of the window," remarked the attorney spoken to as he fumbled for a match. "I don't blame O'Boyle for being sore at him." FROM there to the court of domestic relations where two lawyers, one male, the other female, were bombarding an aged judge with arguments in favor of their respective clients. The woman lawyer was defending a member of her sex. "If the court please," the sallow faced masculine attorney would begin. The udge was anxious to go to dinner and kept barking: "Go ahead, go ahead, never mind what the court pleases. Say what you've got to say." The lawyer would not be thwarted. "If the court please—" "Oh, come on, what is it?" from the court. "We want to show cause." "Well, come on and show it. What have you got?" Finally the lawyer made himself intelligible and the court understood.

THE final decision seemed to satisfy everybody, particularly the lawyers who went to their respective clients with beaming faces, patted them on their respective shoulders and gave their arms significant squeezes as much as to say: "Don't you think that was real clever?" And: "How about that little check?" A once happy home was broken up (no, not by Communism), there was a little matter of alimony involved, the husband was in the real estate business and instead of seeing his child three and a half hours each day, his wise lawyer wanted the "three and half hours each day to be consolidated into one day." This would give the real estate man half an hour extra.

TROM there to the so-called morals court. No brilliant, scintillating lawyers here, Room 1108. Outside more than twelve young colored lads, standing in twos. They were standing there for a long time when the door of room 1118 opened and three young colored lads were brought forth. "Slip the bracelets on them," said somebody. No sooner said than done. It was then I noticed that the other colored boys were handcuffed to each other. Amid ribald jests and raucous laughter the young fellows were marched to the elevators and out to a waiting patrol wagon. Poverty and the wrong shade of color is a poor combination in a capitalist court.

Senator Walsh, of Montana, conducting the committee's inquiry asked Donovan if it had been decided to withdraw from the Aluminum investigation after a conference at the White House.

"I know nothing whatever of the conference," said Donovan. Donovan heatedly replied to an insinuation from Walsh that a Mellonowned concern was being "carefully handled.'

"I don't give a damn if it is a Mellon concern. I've learned my obligations to the department. I've got to be the master of my own conscience and what I submit to the attorneygeneral will be my decision on a case as I see it."

ment of his speech before the fourteenth congress of the Communist Party of Russia, I. Stalin, secretary of the Russian Party, declares emphatically that anyone who accuses the Communist parties of the world of individual terror must be either ignorant or bribed. Stalin also reviews the tasks of the Russian Communist Party as follows:

(International Press Correspondence) Moscow, U. S. S. R., Dec. 18—(By Mail)—Two questions in our foreign policy are particularly acute: (1) The question of propaganda and, (2) the question of the Communist International. The English conservatives At the outset yesterday, Donovan accuse the Russian Communists of wanting to destroy the British empire. We need no special propaganda in the west and in the east. means of propaganda. The peoples of the east know that our order of society is built up upon the brotherly harmony of all nations. Every Chinese, Egyptian and Indian knows that we are the only country which is prepared to assist his oppressed country.

We need no further agitation and propaganda in the east. Only one force can and will destroy the British empire. That is the English conservatives and their policy of force in Egypt, India and in China. English lords are incapable of any other policy. That will be their doom.

A FEW words upon the Comintern: Stalin declared that any one who Bronx Workers' Forum accused the Communist parties of individual terror must be either ignocant or bribed. The theory and the practice of the Comintern consists in the organization of the revolutionary mass movement against capitalism. It has rejected the individual terror and it will always reject it.

Referring to the question of the far east. Stalin said: The forces of the revolutionary movement in China of reconstruction. Our work must old regime are still in existence are tremendous. Upon the first field, we must work for the consolidation of the Communist Party in the west and for the conjuest of the majority of the working nasses. The strengthening of the truggle of the proletariat of the west for trade union unity lies in the same

The basic axle of our politics is the widen our commercial relations upon the basis of a strengthening of the monopoly of foreign trade. Thirdly, we must seek for a closer contact with all those countries which emerged from the world war as the vanquished. Fourthly, we must strengthen our contact with the colonial and dependent countries. Reactionary School Superintendent Hit by American Legion

World war veterans and leaders in preparedness moves were up in arms today following utterances of William McAndrews, Chicago school superintendent, advocating removal of historically reminiscent war pictures from the walls of public school buildings. McAndrews is known as a reactionary.

Chief among the resenters to Mc-Andrews' advocation made public in an article appearing in the Educational Review, are Col. P. J. H. Farrell, veteran of a dozen wars; Major G. Fitzgerald Lee, retired army officer and Major General Foreman, com mander of the thirty-third division.

McAndrews, who declared his ar ticle was misinterpreted, was described as joining hands with "rabid pacifists" in a letter of protest sent to the school superintendent by Major Lee today.

At the superindentend's office it was made plain that no order had been ments," it was said, "are simply expressed by the superintendent and have been overplayed and misinterpreted.

McAndrews' suggestions that the pictures referred to tended to "perpetuate the war spirit" were especially surprising in view of the fact that patriotism has been stressed by him as the most important aim of the public schools.

MORE than the other departments of the party does the agitprop department depend for its effectiveness upon a closely-knit, active, and energetic apparatus thruout the entire organization. For upon the agitprop department falls the whole burden of planning, systematizing, and directing the entire agitation and propaganda work of the party upon a uniform basis—a task that compells it to reach into all departments and into every corner of our party. The very first steps in our agitprop work are bound up with our success in building up a functioning apparatus penetrating the entire party from top to bottom and extending to its very roots, the nuclei. The following are some of the main points involved in building up such an agitprop apparatus thruout the party.

1. District and City Agitprop Directors and Committees. Every city and district organization of the party has its agitprop director and its small agitprop committee. The functions of this committee are to apply and to carry out the instructions of the national agitprop department on a local scale and, upon its own initiative, to meet and solve the problems of agitation and propaganda in its own territory. mittee depends to a great extent the success of the entire agitprop work.

2. Section and Sub-Section Directors and Committees. The agitprop apparatus, however, does not end with the district and city organizations. Wherever there exist sections and sub-sections there should be established section and sub-section agitprop committees under the leadership of section and sub-section agitprop directors. The closest supervision and direction of these lower organizations on the part of the district and city agitprop departments is absolutely necessary if these committees are not to remain from the very first organs without

3. Nucleus Agitprop Committee and Director. In order for our internal propaganda to penetrate our ranks and for our agitation to reach the wide masses of the workers the agitprop apparatus must root itself firmly in the very basis of our party -in the nuclei. Each nucleus has its agitprop director and the larger nuclei their agitprop committees as well. Upon the nuclei directors falls most of the real everyday work of transforming into life the agitation and propaganda tasks of the party.

ically, every two weeks or so, the city or district agitprop director organizés agitprop conferences to which are called the agitprop directors and committees of the sections, sub-sections, and of the nuclei. At these conferences the campaigns of the party are discussed, the work of the agitprop department is carefully considered, and detailed plans laid for the concrete work of the next period. In order to be successful these conferences must be both regular and frequent, must be preceded by systematic preparatory work (careful preparation of an agenda, transmission of this agenda to members of the conference, etc.)

5. Speakers and Agitators Conferences. These agitprop conferences are not to be confused with speakers and agitators conferences. Every agitprop director (district, city, section, sub-section, nucleus) prepares for himself lists of those comrades under his supervision who can be made use of in some form or other for agitation or propaganda work (writing, speaking, teaching, lecturing, etc). It must not be assumed that the section directors' list, for example, will include the lists of the various nuclei directors because the nuclei are within the

who are quite useful to the nucleus but who are not quite "good" enuf on a section or city scale. In general it will be found that the lower the unit the more extensive (not the more numerous) will be the list. Once a month or more frequently if possible conferences of all comrades on the agitprop lists are called at which the political situation and the tasks of the party are reported upon, the latest decisions of the agitprop committee and conference discussed, the work of the comrades discussed in detail, and so on. Thru these conferences the comrades engaged in agitprop work are enabled to carry the party campaigns to the party membership and to the broad masses. This, in brief, is the basic apparatus of the agitprop department. Of course this does not complete the apparatus as a whole. For special work of agitation and propaganda special organs

Clash with Drivers of Coal Trucks

By PAT TOOHEY. (Worker Correspondent)

PLAINS, Pa., Jan. 14.— After the general grievance committee of Local Union 1483, U. M. W. of A., persuaded a group of men who were working on the old culm banks here to quit, a truck load of the coal from the canal bed was stopped. The driver refused to stop at the request of the union committee. About 300 miners had assembled and by this time another truck made its appearance. This also refused to stop. Stones and clubs were soon flying all over.

The driver was deeply cut in the head by a flying rock, the other severely beaten by the crowd of men and boys. This is the first minifestation of violence in the Wilkes-Barre section. The driver stated several shots were fired at him.

Before the echoes of the professional optimists extolling the new year as one of unmeasured prosperity and security for the working and short stories before 1914. But in class had died down a muffled blast in an Oklahoma mine started his collection of short stories, "We 1926 on its series of mine holocausts. Those prostitutes on the capitalist press who raise loud clamors about the risk of profits when workers strike to overcome conditions his outlook on life was pessimistic. that yearly take such a ghastly toll, never consider the risks of workers sacrificed to the greed and avarice of the mine barons.

This explosion, as is the case of so many others, occurred in a non-union mine, where the individual stands alone against the power | Europe was changing and when the of the capitalist owner, where he dare not raise his voice to protest social-democrats betrayed their ideals against conditions that menace his life for fear of unemployment and hunger, whose sceptre ever haunts him.

Union men had been locked out over a period of two years and, almost unaided by the United Mine Workers of America, had struggled against the open shop. Had Lewis & Co. spent a little of the money for organization purposes that they waste rolling over the country in Pullmans to attend conferences with the operators this non-union condition would not exist.

Workers' lives will only be safe when the workers themselves, thru their organized power, can enforce safety regulations, and as a first step toward unionization of the coal industry of this country the reactionary officialdom must be defeated and the miners' union changed into a fighting organization that talks to the employers in terms of power—the only language they heed.

State laws, supposed to protect workers from such disasters, are flouted because their enforcement is in the hands of old party agents of the employers. A labor party, with representatives of the working class to create and enforce laws protecting the workers, many, Austria, France, England and would aid in overcoming the constant menace to human life in the mines of this country.

McKinley, Smoot and Cummins Seat Nye

The senatorial record says Gerald P. Nye, from the agricultural state of North Dakota, who is classified as an insurgent, was seated after a bitter fight on the senate floor by a vote of 41 to 39. He will support Borah against the world court and will oppose the administration's tax program. Because he will line up with the insurgents and democrats against the Coolidge-Mellon tax program, the overwhelming majority of democrats supported him. They do not fear one more note against the world court, which almost all the democrats support, as they have a safe majority that is not likely to be dangerously reduced.

Had the Coolidge senators voted solidly against Nye he would have met defeat, but Senators William B. McKinley of Illinois Albert B. Cummins of Iowa and Reed Smoot of Utah, absented themselves from the chamber, thereby seating Nye. There is method in their apparent madness. All of them are up for re-election this year and they are all dependent upon agricultural votes, so they do not want to face the accusation that they kept out of the senate an insurgent from the corn and wheat belt.

Nye can do no harm in the senate, and his defeat by the votes Chicago's board of censors must have of the senators from the farm states would add one more obstacle that when they heard to those already in their path because of the agricultural crisis wanted them to give the once-over to Noteworthy also is the fact that the staunch supporters of the and of the tremendous crowds of republican gang that tried to whitewash the odoriferous Newberry workers and peasants that paid their of Michigan, who tried to corrupt the electorate of a state in order respects to their beloved leader. to obtain a seat in the senate, voted against the seating of Nye. Among those coming up for re-election who voted against the seating of Nye are two "tombstone" senators, George Wharton Pepper of present at its premier showing in Pennsylvania and Wm. H. Butler of Massachusetts, both of whom Chicago were just as much interested succeeded senators who died while in office, as was the case with as the censors. And of course we Nye.

As for Nye, himself, like all the other milk-and-water progressives, his influence is not feared, otherwise he would not have been seated.

Thus the corrupt game of capitalist politics goes merrily or while the workers and farmers continue to foot the bill in decreased standards of living, and if the world courters have their way, with their very lives.

We Communists reiterate that nothing other than a class party of labor that can win the support of the impoverished farmers will dictment of the film should it contain aid the exploited masses of the United States.

One supposed to represent labor certainly renders a poor service to the working class when he refrains from denouncing such a palpable enemy of the working class as this militia colonel who calls himself a "military pacifist"—a pacifist in the service of imperialism.

By MORRIS BACKALL.

FEW weeks ago Henri Barbusse A the great French novelist who is writing for the Saturday Magazine supplement of The DAILY WORKER, was attacked by the fascisti in Ru mania. Barbusse went to Rumania to investigate the atrocities against Communists in the dungeons of that country. The fury of the working class against the white terror in that country had compelled the Rumanian government itself to invite him. Henri Barbusse has of late years become an embodiment of the conscience of the working masses in Europe. Henri Barbusse, as a naturalist in literature, started to write his poems everyday life, Barbusse nevertheless had no definite ideal and therefore Everything for him appeared in gray shadows without happiness and with out meaning. It was the time of the transition period when the ilfe of of revolutionary activity. To Henri Barbusse life at that period was meaningless and cold, without a pur pose. Without a future.

But the war changed the point of view and the creations of Henri Bar-

Henri Barbusse went to war as a soldier in the French army; he saw the battlefields and learned the tragedies that are connected with it. As a great artist he observed not only the romantic propaganda that came from army headquarters and general staffs, he also saw war in the trenches. And in realistic, brutal, tragical fashion, with artistic fire, he molded his newer works of art. First, his "Inferno," in which he uncovers the slaughterhouses of capitalistic war and shows that the killing of the sons of Ger-America is really in the interests, not of the masses who are cutting each other to pieces, but of the masters of the world, of the classes that rule Europe and America. Henri Barbusse himself was made invalid by shellshock; he himself suffered bodily and mentally the tragedy of war. But at the beginning he was only an eloquent pacifist, he cried for peace and distinguished himself very little from those who talk in the name of morality for peace while leaving the world in reality to butcher itself under the aegis of capitalism. But in his second volume, "Under Fire," Henri Barbusse appeared a new man,-no longer a pacifist— but full of the new revolutrate the workers and peasants of the world. The spirit and ideal of revolution to change the order of society, by means of class struggle to do away with a system of classes and classstruggle, which is also to do away with wars, the human slaughterhouses, among nations, was in him. It is true that Barbusse's book, "Inferno." was sold in France in 150,000 copies and appeared in 100 editions.but the real depths of his sincerity and greatness were disclosed in his later book "Under Fire."

In his novel, "Under Fire," Bar busse tells us of a conversation among the soldiers. The soldiers on the battlefield are not only disgusted with the horror of war but they are conscious of the causes that brought it about and are for a conscious and deliberate method to end it. He pictures to us this conversation-in such a manner: "Yes," said one, "but what will it be called tomorrow-' 'After all, what is it that makes the horror of war?" "It is the mass of people."-"But the people, that's us." -"Yes, that's true."-"It's the people who are war, without them there would be nothing but some wrangling, a long way off. But it is not they who decide on it, it is the masters who steer them."-"The people are struggling today, to have no more masters to steer them."—"This war is like the French revolution continuing."

To make clear his new ideal, his new optimism which is not to be found in nis former writings, Henri Barbusse continues this mass conversation The people of the world ought to come to an understanding thru the hides and the bodies of those who exploit them, one way and another.' 'All the masses ought to agree together.'

In this conversation the internaional class character of Henri Barbusse's writings is already evident. Seeing the corpses stretched on the battlefields of different frontiers-German, French, Italian,—he realized the narrowness of nationalistic tendencies and ideas that are spread by the capitalistic philosophers and pa cifists. Barbusse realized that the masses all over the world are made use of as machines are used in order to serve the interests of the masters He realized that in reality the work ers of Germany, of Austria, United States, England and France have one interest and must adhere to class solidarity if they want to avoid other tragedies to occur like the last war. longer move. The frightful searching He realized that their solidarity consists of getting rid of the masters and hoarse hurricane which does not know creating a new world, a new order of me is yet trying to find the place society that will make wars unneces- where I am! sary and will establish a Communist commonwealth and a union of workers By clinging to the earth and plung-

In the book, "Light," Barbusse pictures to us a commonplace clerk, Simon. It could not be only a clerk, and it could not be only Simon. It is true of every person educated and raised in a capitalistic order of society. Simon is influenced by his environment. He thinks well of the rich and despises the poor, altho being himself a struggling worker-a lowsalaried clerk in an office. He longed for wealth, and at least he looked upon himself as a person being able to accumulate fortunes. His ideal was the ideal of the narrow, egoistic selfcentered individual that is to be found among all shades and groups of society educated in the present public schools and stimulated by the surroundings of present-day society. Simon lived a double life. A hypocritical life. He appeared as a moral, personality conventional friends and in society, while in the shadows of the night he was running to the criminal quarters of the city, mingling with prostitutes and outlaws of society. When the war opened Simon was eaught by the fire of patriotism and the slogan, "my country is in danger." Being married to Mary, his relations with her meant nothing to him, because of his hypocritical and conventional moral and social ideas. He went to war. He felt that he was a hero. That he would really serve his country. He believed whole-heartedly that the war filled his heart and his soul and gave meaning and value to his existence. But the war unmasked for Simon the horror and the reality and the lie that is embodied in the patriotic utterances. He saw that those who sacrifided themselves and fight one another on the great battlefields are poor devils like himself and they are sacrificing their lives for a cause that isn't theirs. Of course it did not occur to Simon at once. He had to go thru fire and hell until he reached his disillusionment.

Barbusse portrays to us in a very deep and red color the change that took place in Simon. This was the way Simon pictures his own feelings:

"I am alone on the earth, face to face with the mud, and I can no of the shells alights around me. The

"My gaze goes crawling. In front hills which shut out my horizon and imitate gestures and men. The multiits ruins. I am walled in by those who are lying down, as I was walled in before those who stood. .

While in hospital Simon finds out that:

"They do not wear similar clothes on the targets of their bodies, and they speak different tongues: but from the bottom of that which is human within them, identically the same simplicities come forth. They have for a new society. fight because they are face to face. a common end. Dimly, they kill themselves because they are alike."

When Simon is disillusioned he thinks of revolution:

"After all," he says, "I believe in the success of truth. I believe in the the world. He is a naturalist in conas yet few brotherly people that are tradiction to the romantic and symstanding in all countries among all bolic schools of literature and art. nationalities in this wild dance of To him the earth, the everyday life, national egoism and they stand fast in the social struggle, the collective their places as those rocks cut out in the wonderful statues that are representing justice and truth." "This evel attitude of the pacifist and liberals of ning I believe in it. That a new society will be built up thru the efforts writings, "The Chains," and also of these people.'

After his publication of "Light," Henri Barbusse was considered in the ary activities of the workers all over Barbusse organized a small Bolshe-

To Barbusse ideals in life are not mere moral objection and words, as they appear in the sentimental writings of the pacifists. To him Communism is in essence the whole and the complete readjustment of the individual towards the collective happiness and class consciousness and the struggle of the masses of workers and peasants

In "Light," Barbusse pictures to us angers, around the same causes. They the former commonplace personality, are alike as their wounds are alike who when he realizes the new ideal and will be alike. It was one o'clock when we were ushered into the little projecting room where every picture that is shown on Chicago's many screens must pass the scrutinizing gaze of the board.

Each one had a little pad of paper in hand, ready, I thot, to draw an inwords or scenes that might invoke re bellious thots in the minds of the proletariat. But while the picture was showing the pencils were idle. Not so the eyes of the censors. They used up all the available nervous candle-power in the collectiive censorial system. They were fixed intently on
