Three More Unions Out; Troops Unable to Revive Transportation Service

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, May 5 .- The second day of the great general strike finds the British Isles paralyzed. Three more unions have joined the strike. The seamen have voted to tie up every port. The electricians have left London to confront today's heavy fog without lights. The cabmen have gone out and taken away the last transport service.

The tremendous power of British labor is felt as never before in English history. No signs of peace are evident. The trade union leaders express complete satisfaction with the effectiveness of the strike. The government has issued an ultimatum that it will not listen to a settlement until the general strike order has been revoked by the Trade Union Congress. The Day in the House of Parliament

(Special to The Daily Worker) LONDON, May 5-There were poignant scenes in the house of commons. Ernest Thurtle, labor member for Shoreditch, assailed the government for attacking the trade unions in today's issue of the British Gazette. PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 5. - After searching their law books for three days, local prosecutors have confessed they have no law on which to hold persons for holding hall meetings without permits, nevertheless, Magistrate E. M. Hugh announced to Attorney George Shaffer, counsel for J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORK-ER, and Abram Jakira, Workers Party organizer, that he would assess a fine of ten dollars and costs or five days in jail, as a result of their arrest at Carnegie Music Hall last Saturday night. Engdahl and Jakira were preparing to go before Magistrate Huff this afternoon and receive sentence.

They announced their refusal to pay the fine. This will propably result in their being sent back to jail.

Their lawyers will then take out a writ of habeas corpus to force the authorities to show on what charges the prisoners are being held. The conference was called to consider the miners' situation. After thoro consideration of all factors-mine owners, the miners' union and the British Trade Union Congress-it was the unanimous opinion of the delegates that no strike would occur.

This opinion has additional signifiance if it is remembered that every person at the conference was opposed to the report of the coal commission and believed that the campiagn to lower wages and lengthen hours must be met by a counter-offensive on the part of labor and that each had done much to put the British labor movefor just such a situation.

So well established is the belief in the British devotion to parliamentary methods, so many times has the labor party parliamentary leadership succeeded in diverting strike action into channels where the militancy of the masses has been dissipated, so involved with the aims of British capitalism is an influential section of the trade union leadership, so strong was the belief that the subsidy to the coal owners would be continued-temporarily, at least-that those who workmovement to its danger and the need eration of Labor. for unity and struggle, despaired of tional organization." Hoopes added that only those who voted the socialist ticket could be considered as engaged in the party's political activities and constituting legally the party's political organizaion. The regular branches, he declared, with their dues paying members, did not constitute a political organization. This weird attitude is rapidly helping to develop the isolation of the party, since it is not even organized to carry on educational activities. Some place their hope in the "American Appeal," the party's official weekly, others in establishing a party broadcasting station, death benefits and similar ideas.

Delegate William A. Toole, of Maryland, in discussing the resolution, declared for "no compacts with other labor bodies (including trade unions) for political action. We must work on a purely independent basis."

This means that the socialists will refuse to co-operate in any labor party activity this year. If the labor party movement develops and shows vitality then they may change their minds.

At the Chicago district conference of worker correspondents, held on May 1 and reported in The DAILY WORKER, five resolutions were passed which are of interest to every worker correspondent.

We are therefore printing them in the worker correspondents' section of The DAILY WORKER, one each day until they are all given. Today we print the resolution on "National Organization":

RESOLUTION ON NATIONAL ORGANIZATION.

The worker correspondent movement in the United States is in its infancy. As a movement it is less than one year old. It needs all the help it can get to develop into a mighty movement. The national organ of the movement, American Worker Correspondent, should be the national organizing center guiding the worker correspondents all over the country. The worker correspondents in each city should organize in classes or groups electing a secretary who should always be in touch with the national center. Local conferences of worker correspondents should be called as soon as practical. All editors are asked to co-operate with the American Worker Correspondent in organizing the worker correspondents of all language

A national membership organization of worker correspondents should be created consisting of subscribers to the American Worker Correspondent, no other dues to be required. At the second conference to be called after the organizational conferences are held, only such members to have voice and vote, others only voice but no vote.

OBVIOUSLY the Communist Party cannot stand apart from all this work. We must, by every means possible, assist the formation and participate in the work of these left-wing blocs and endeavor to secure a united left wing association. The situation becomes so acute that the most important task of the party is to mobilize all these elements to fight the attack of the governing class. At present these groups of the left wing are not united. We must obtain an organizational basis and a program of action on which all these groups can make a common fight.
