T is no longer considered bad form to speak in Hyde Park, London. Not so long ago, the hardy subject who betook himself to the soap box was looked upon as one who had more bunk than brains in his system. Tall lean men used to talk about the coming evolutionary era when collar buttons would grow automatically on scrawny necks and nothing would be left to human effort except eating, drinking and a few other pleasant diversions. This sounded good but those who carry society on their backs paid little attention to the fancy predictions. They went to the nearest pub, had their 'arf and 'arf, went home and to work the following morning, as Englishmen have been doing for more than two centuries.

The New York Times of February 20 kindly informs us that a knighted Briton took his little stand and expounded the virtues of toryism to the to this effect tomorrow to the full seasoned veterans of Hyde Park. This particular tory evidently believes that people believe what they hear. They don't. The important thing to consider is that the tories feel they must go to the masses with argument. A few hundred years ago they would go to them with shot guns. Perhaps in a few hundred more years they will say it with powder puffs.

Protectorate of U.S. Entire Country to be Taken

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21. - President Diaz, of Nicaragua, has invited President Coolidge to establish a protectorate over that republic and he has agreed to do so.

This was learned at the state department tonight as American marines took up permanent posts at strategic points in Nicaragua and an unusually large number of reinforcenents got under way.

The state department announced that a long note from President Diaz is being transmitted and admitted that it was an invitation to the United States to establish a protectorate and thus safeguard American investments. Actual occupation of interior Nicaragua by American forces is under

Girl Gangsters Used to Beat Up Four Pickets At L. Brill Dress Shop

Four girl pickets, attacked by "female gangsters" as they were picketing the Louis Brill Dress Shop, 335 West 38th Street, were recovering today at their homes. These girl thugs have accompanied gangsters to the picket lines for the past two days.

When the pickets tried to defend themselves against their assailants they were arrested and received two day sentences in Jefferson Market

The use of "girl gangsters" to provoke trouble on the picket lines is a new tactic, adopted this week in the attempt to break the lines before shops called on strike by the Joint Board. After the pickets have refused to be drawn into a quarrel they are bodily attacked by the girls, and arrested when they attempt to defend themselves.

The girls who received sentences were Mollis Cooperstein, Rose Medow and Pearl Goldstein. Ida Shore was allowed to pay a $10 fine in lieu of a jail sentence.

Aimee and Tex Guinan Have Swell Time Kidding Idlers of the Metropolis

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK. One of the figures of fame in little old New York is Texas Guinan. One of the bright lights of the Pacific Coast is Aimee Sempee

Aimee is now in New York, and among those she visits is Tex. The other night she paid a visit to the 300 Club where Tex relieves the uncomfortably rich of their surplus bankrolls.

She was received with open arms. One of the customs of the 300 Club is to introduce from the floor all the famous people who visit her club. Such folks as Harry K. Thaw, bootleggers, actresses, actors, crooks, and then some, have had that "honor" conferred on them.

And folks, let it be understood that Aimee is no stepchild! She was introduced to the wicked people who she wants to save from hell (and cop their bankroll, incidentally). When she was leaving the club. Tex shouts: "Give the little woman a hand," and the booze hounds stand up and cheer for "lil" Aimee.

Tex reciprocates. She takes her chorus and visits Aimee's tabernacle. And why not? They are both in the same graft only Tex gets one group of suckers and Aimee an-

Propagandists Against the Revolution in China Have Hard Time of It

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE New York Sun concludes an 1 1 editorial with the observation that, "In China the pen is still far more deadly than the sword".

It does not say whether it expects that power to be overcome by the growing invasion of the armed forces of the imperialist robber nations. It does not measure the might of hundreds of battleships, thousands of marines and tens of thousands of soldiers being rushed to oriental waters by the governments at Washington, London, Paris, Rome and elsewhere. That is no doubt an editorial reservation.

It is true that the Chinese government, that has now established itself at Hankow, is using the printed word as a powerful propaganda medium. Where newspapers cf large and national circulation are utterly lacking, where the Chinese workers, like those in Mexico. are too poverty stricken under foreign exploitation to buy a daily paper if they are able to read, the small leaflet, or the wall poster becomes the medium of communication that wreaks havoc with the armed forces of the enemy. The New York capitalist daily says that: "In the great Cantonese drive of last summer, which cleared out all opposition south of the Yellow River, letters, proclamations and promises were showered upon enemy troops with the intention of shaking their allegiance to the northern alliance. In this the paper bombardment succeeded to such an extent that there were defections when the time came for battle, and occasionally whole commands are known to have gone over to the scutherners".

Commenting on the present anpearance of the Kuomintang armies before Shanghai, this same publication declares:

"Something of the kind appears cess in the drive upon Shanghai. It is reported that for a long time Sun Chang Fang, defender of Shanghai, had been paying $690,000 per month to Chang Tsung-Chang, war lord of Shantung, with the understanding that Shantung troops would undertake the defense Shanghai whenever called upon. In the recent fighting these reinforcements were urgently needed, but they were not forthcoming.

"Another and even more striking illustration of the skill of Cantonese propagandists was disclosed within the seaport city itself Scarcely had the news of the defeat of Kiangsu forces in the south reached there when the red badge of Canton appeared as by magic upon the streets. Operators of streets cars, of the water works and of other utilities at once went on strike. Members of the seamen's union quickly joined the demonstration.

"Hands at the local factories and even clerks in department stores quit their jobs and began parading the streets, cheering for the Cantonese. Thus, so far as internal defenses of the city were concerned -save only for European, Japanese and American defenders of foreign concession areas-notice was served upon the invaders they could expect not opposition but support". Then the Sun reaches this conclusion: "Unless the northern allies are able to find some good propagandists of their own it would not be surprising to see them emerge from the struggle with decidedly the worst of it."

But triumph rests on the standards of the propagandists who speak the will of the masses. The Russian people were ready for the overthrow of czarism, which contributed to the success of the Bolshevik propagandists, who have no doubt passed on many of their ideas and methods to the Chinese. In China the masses everywhere have shown that they are ready and eager to struggle in support of the revolution. It has not been difficult to infuse great multitudes of the followers of the subsidized northern war lords with this spirit. The result has been the Hessian armies sent in by the foreign imperialists have met with little native support, and whatever of this existing is fast dwindling.

Workers in the United States might well take an example from the Chinese. Labor in this country has a war of its own with a battle front in every shop, mine and factory, and on every railroad in

The DAILY WORKER exists today as the only English-language, national daily in the land. But it is not possible to reach millions of workers with "The Daily", at least not immediately. But it is possible thru the spread of leaflets, thru wall newspapers, thru shop papers, thru living newspapers, and similar propaganda mediums to reach immediately great masses of workers, with explanations of the issues in which labor is vitally interested and to which the workers will respond. One does not need to be a member of the Workers (Communist) Party to thus a labor propagandist and develop the appetite among workers for the great propaganda organ and organizer of the working class, The DAILY WORKER. Take this lesson from the Chinese.

ATLANTIC STORM TAKES 25 LIVES: RESCUERS DROWN

Millions Damage Along Sea Coast

At least 25 persons had lost their lives today and many millions of dollars in property damage had been done by the terrific storm which swept the Atlantic coast from the Delaware capes to northern Maine over the week-end, accompanied by the highest tide in 50 years and by mountainous seas which wrecked small craft and carried away docks, breakwaters and hundreds of bungalows and houses.

The death list was headed by the names of eight coast guardsmen who lost their lives when the CG-238 was pounded to pieces on Outer Pearked Hill Bar, off Provincetown, Mass. After pulling its anchors in the gale, the small vessel broke up in sight of hundreds of helpless watchers on the beach, who were unable to launch a boat in the raging surf.

Three persons died in New England of exposure, and one due to an accident caused by the blinding snow storm. Five deaths were reported from Pittsburgh and one from Philadelphia, while in New York City two persons were killed when they slipped and fell on icy streets.

50 Are Injured.

Another sea death occurred when the second officer of the barge Talboy was washed overboard outside Ambrose Light. More than fifty persons were reported seriously injured. Thrilling rescues were reported from various sections where coast guardsmen and volunteers put out in small craft to take off persons aboard stranded vessels being pounded to pieces in the surf.

The heaviest property damage was along the New Jersey and Long Island coasts, where several towns estimated losses of $1,000,000 each.

The gale and its accompanying angry seas delayed, almost every vessel due to arrive in this port. The giant liner Leviathan, due to leave Boston this morning, will not venture out on the stormy sea until tomorrow, it was learned.

The Constitution was so framed as to centralize government to the greatest degree, but giving a semblance of democracy. Alexander Hamilton and many others urged the president be elected for life, as should also one branch of congress. That Constitution has been made almost impossible of amendment can be realized when we consider that after 138 years only a score of amendments have been made possible. Professor Smith in his book on the American Constitution says that less than one fortieth of the population of the country, properly distributed, can prevent any amendment from being made to the Constitution.

Political Depravity of the Fathers. Rum running, smuggling, and slave trading had schooled the "Fathers" in all manner of fraud, tricks, and demagogy. They were therefore well fitted for the task of drawing up a new constitution for the country. "The delegates," says McLaughlin, "believed that society existed for the preservation of private property" even as their descendants of wealth and power believe today.

Woodrow Wilson, in one of his books characterizes the "Fathers" in this fashion, "The government had been originated and organized upon the initiative and primarily in the interest of the mercantile and wealthy classes. Originally conceived as an effort to accomodate commercial disputes between states, it had been urged to adoption by a minority, un-der the concerted leadership of able men representing a ruling class."

Perhaps McMaster gives us an even better picture of them. He says, "A very little study of long-forgotten politics will suffice to show that in filibustering and gerrymandering, in stealing governorships and legislatures, in using force at the polls, in colonizing and distributing patronage . . . in all the frauds and tricks that go to make up the worst form of politics, the men who founded our state and national governments were always our equals, and often our mas-

When the constitution was finally presented to the various states for acceptance, the "Fathers" resorted to every means at their command to secure its ratification by them. Money, force, fraud and demagogy were all resorted to. The men who in the convention had sneered at and abused the masses now appeared as their spokesmen and champions. It was finally adopted-but by a minority vote. Only six of the states adopted it without any qualifications. The remaining seven in adopting it recommended amendments ranging from four by South Carolina to thirtytwo by New York. Another

John L. Queen Marie Pays Her Respects to American People: "Flock of Swine"

CHICAGO, Feb. 21 .- "My son was right when he said Americans were a flock of swine."

This statement is attributed to Queen Marie of Roumania in a copyrighted article said to have been written by one of her attendants, appearing today in the Chicago Herald Examiner.

The queen also complained that during her visit to America she was insulted daily on the streets with such remarks as "hey, queen, how's the old man?"

"What can you expect from a people who always refer to their president by his first name," the queen is also credited in the article with saying. It is known that queen was shocked at the crowd which gathered to greet her here by shouting, "Cotzefanesti," the name of a village in which during the war, the queen and her court engaged in a naked, drunken orgy, leaving soldiers in their care to bleed to death.

In yesterday's issue of The DAILY WORKER we published a complete refutation of one of the main charges made by the Lewis machine in connection with its war on the Communists. The letter of William Feeney, an organizer of the union at the time the letter was written and still on the Lewis payroll, shows only one example of the practical application of the Lewis policy.

The Communist International never fails to call on the workers of all countries for support of struggles like that which the UMWA may be called upon to fight. But it does not give financial aid to these struggles. The trade unions of the Soviet Union do, however. Lewis may say that he will accept no support from the 9.000,000 trade unionists of the Soviet Union but if, as appears probable, the UMWA has to fight for its life, the union membership will show that Lewis does not speak for them by accepting mann-Huffmann strikers put it the spoke in favor of the resolution to gratefully such support as the Russian workers can give them in a struggle against the American coal barons to save the union.

This would serve to put the union in a fighting mood for the struggle which, in one form or another, it will have to wage after April 1. But this is too much to expect from an ardent supporter of President Coolidge.

Drive Spies and Informers Out of the Labor Movement.

The frame-up of two members of the Furriers' Union in Boston, evidently an extension of similar methods used in New York history in this country and served as off the strike and let the workers reto other centers, should call attention again to the viciousness of as beacon light to the workers in turn to work and strive to build up the attack on the needle trades unions and the co-operation which every trade throughout the country. a union inside the mills. can be denied no longer between government agencies—police, month after month against the boss- earlier in the day by the strike execourts, etc., -and the right wing in these unions backed by the es' starvation offensives, against the cutive committee and the delegate officialdom of the American Federation of Labor.

Just Another Corpse.

"Bunny, I don't care about the other women-they will always be after you, of course. I was heartsick about Miss Tracy, because I knew she was a selfish woman, and I was afraid you'd find it out too late, and be wrecked. At least, I told myself that was it-I suppose the truth is I was just green with jealousy.'

"Why, Rachel; You mean that you love me?"

'As if any woman could help loving you! The question is, do you love me?"

"I do-yes, truly!" "But Bunny-" there was a little catch in her voice. "You don't

So then he realized that he had been wasting a lot of time! He had to take only one more step, and put his arms about her, and there she was, sobbing on his shoulder, as if her heart would break. "Oh, Bunny, Bunny! Can I believe it?"

So to make her believe it, he began to kiss her. She had been such a sedate and proper little lady, such a manager in the office and all that, he had been in awe of her; but now he made the discovery that she was exactly like the other women who had been in love with him: as soon as she was sure that she might let herself go, that it was not some blunder, or some crazy dream-why, there she was, clinging to him in a sort of daze of happiness, half laughing, half weeping. As he kissed her, there was mingled in his emotion the memory of how brave she had been, and how loyal, and how honest; yes, it was worth while making a girl like that happy! To mingle love with those other emotions, that appeared to be safe! And she was just as passionate as either Eunice or Vee had been, not a particle more sedate or reticent! "Oh, Bunny, I love you so! I love you so!" She whispered it in the darkness, and her embraces said more than her words. "Dear Rachel!" he said, with a happy little laugh. "If you feel that way, let's go find a preacher or a justice of the peace."

She answered, "Foolish Bunny! I want to know that you love me, and that I'm free to love you. What do I care about preachers or justices?" So then he caught her tighter, If she tried to voice any more doubts, he would stop the sounds, he would find a way to convince And what better place for their love than this mysterious grove, the scene of their future labors? Yes, they would have to buy this ranch now, regardless of soil deficiencies! It would be a haunted place; in after years, while the young folks had their games and pageants in this grove, Bunny and Rachel would 'ook on with a secret thrill. Had it not been in ancient oak-groves that mystic rites had been celebrated,

They found the justice of the peace next morning; and then they finished the inspection of the ranch, and drove back to Angel City and made arrangements for a first payment on the purchase price. After which they had the thrills of telling all their friends about having got married—strictly in the interest of the college, of course, and to avoid scandals in the bourgeois press. Bunny went to see Ruth, and tell her; and strange to say, this embarrassed him. Bertie and Vee had planted in his mind the idea that Ruth had been in love with him for the past ten years; and now Rachel was certain of it; and these women had all proved to be right about each other every time! Also, there was a fact which he had not mentioned to Rachel; there had been a while on the way back from Paris, when he was debating in his mind whether it was Rachel or Ruth he was going to invite to become his wife! He had a deep affection for Ruth, the same still quiet feeling that she herself manifested. But the trouble was, there was Paul. Ruth was bound by steel chains to her brother-and that meant the Communist movement, and so Bunny had to wrestle over that problem Sooner or later you had to decide, and take your place with one party or the other. Were you going to overthrow capitalism by the ballot or by "direct action"? This much had become clear to Bunny-the final decision rested with the capitalist class. They were getting ready for the next war; and that meant Bolshevism in all the warring nations, at the end of the war, if not at the beginning. The socialists would try to prevent this war; and if they failed, then the job would be done in Paul's way, by the Third International. But meantime, Bunny was drawn to the socialists by his temperament. He could not call for violence. If there was to be any the other side must begin it!

Whatever Ruth may have thought or felt about the news of his marriage, she gave no sign but of pleasure. She had expected it, she said; Rachel was a fine girl, who agreed with his ideas, and that was the main thing. Then she told him that Paul was expected back tomorrow, and was to speak at a meeting-his supporters had got him into the Labor Temple much diplomacy, and he would have a chance to tell the workingmen about what he had seen in Russia. Bunny and Rachel must come and hear him; and Bunny said they

This was the Sunday before election day, the end of a long political campaign. The workers had heard no end of appeals for their votesbut here was something different, more important than any election issues. However hostile the leaders of labor might be, it was impossible for the rank and file to resist the contagion of this miracle that was happening on the other side of the world—a vast empire where the workers ruled, and were making their own laws and their own culture. Paul was fresh from these scenes; his words were vivid, he brought the things before your eyes; the red army, and the red schools, and the red papers, the white terror, and the resistance to capitalist siege on ten thousand miles of front.

Oh, the fury of the capitalist press next day! They didn't report the meeting, but they published protests about it, and stormed in editorials. The LaFollette 'reds" were bad enough, but this was an intolerable outrage - an avowed Moscow agent, who had been expelled from France, permitted to hold a meeting in Angel City and incite union labor to red riot and insurrection! What was our police department for? Where were our patriotic societies and our American Legion and our other forces of law and order?

Bunny called up Ruth next morning; he wanted to see Paul, to talk Dolsen. about the proposed college. Ruth said that Paul had gone down to the harbor, to see about addressing meetings of the longshoremen. These men had had a big strike while Bunny was abroad, and had taken their full course in capitalist government. Six hundred of them had been swept up off the street, for the crime of marching and singing, and had been packed into tanks with all ventilation shut off, to reduce them to silence. A score of the leaders had been sent to state's prison for ten or twenty years for 'criminal syndicalism"; so the rest ought to be ready to listen to the Communist doctrine, that the workers had to master the capitalist state. There was to be an entertainment that night in the I. W. W. hall at the harbor; there would be music and refreshments, and Paul thought it would be a good chance to get acquainted with the leaders. Bunny said that he and Rachel were going down to Beach City, and they might run over and bring Paul back with them.

BOOKS

NOTE:-Generally speaking, the ownership of property under the present system involves responsibility. Collecting books and libraries is a sure sign either of juvenility or senility. However, if any of the readers of The DAILY WORKER are ever impelled to buy books we suggest an excellent way of disposing of them after they have been read.

(1) There are more than 50 classwar prisoners in the jails and peniten-tiaries of the United States who are there at the present time for violating ruling-class legislation. They are constantly asking for reading matter. (2) The DAILY WORKER needs reference books.

THE AWAKENING OF CHINA, by James H. Dolsen, Dafly Worker Publishing Co., New York. $.60.

The headlines about China are meaningless unless you know something about the forces behind the nationalist movement.

Dolsen's book is an attempt to get at the guts of the Chinese revolution -to get at the basic factors which brought it about and which therefore shape its character. Dolsen uses the Marxist method. He does not bother with the eastwest - and-never-the-twain-shall-meetclaptrap which is the usual explanation for China's attempt to clean out the foreign imperialists. He digs up the fundamental economic forces and shows you how they produced classes with conflicting sets of interests. The industrialization of China created two new classes-a native bourgeoisie and a native working class. These two classes are supplying the fireworks in China today. They are the backbone of the nationalist movement. The native bourgeoisie wants to get rid of the foreign imperialists because it wants to be free to exploit its working class; the working class wants to get rid of the foreign imperialists because it is being savagely exploited. (Boys of twelve work eighteen hours a day for about 15 cents in the rug factories at Peking.)

Dolsen analyzes the forces which have brought these new classes into being. He describes the growing strength and the consciousness of the working class which is taking the lead in the fight for China's liberation. He describes the murder of Chinese students and workers at Shanghai and Shameen in 1925 which gave impetus to the nationalist movement. There is one powerful class in China that Dolsen neglects in his analysisthat is the peasantry. The peasants who have been burdened with excessive taxes and rents that sometimes amount to four-fifths of their total crop, are becoming conscious and forming organizations that are bound to play an important role in the Chinese revolution. The role of the bourgeoisie is also underestimated by

Despite his failure to take these forces into consideration, "The Awakening of China" is by all odds the best book in the English language on the Chinese revolution. It's the only attempt that's been made at a scientific analysis of the forces underlying the nationalist movement, a movement which directly involves the destiny of 436,000,000 people

CHILDREN OF THE SUN, by James Rorty. Macmillan Co., New York.

The dominant note of James Rorty's first book of verse is meditative rapture. At its best this rapture is transmuted into a strong, burnished eloquence. At its worst it is mere prosiness or rhetoric.

Rorty is aware of a large world. It is a world in which his senses, his intelligence, his loves, hates and angers all play their part. Here is no fragile poetaster grieving a delicate. moldy grief. Rorty challenges the tasks and large articulateness of the major poet. There is strength and desire and sunlight for the flesh of his verse. Yet too often I think his vision outleaps his powers of expression, and what is evidently a deeply felt emotion emerges as a flat landscape of tolerable lines. He does not hew words boldly and definitively enough.

Being a poet who knows the difference between bunk and reality, Rorty makes no secret of his contempt for the ideals of capitalist America. This appears directly in his satires, which contain some of his best work, and indirectly in his hymning of birds and beasts and rivers and mountains. Perhaps this is what is called 'escape.' But in his positive philosophic approach to nature, an approach hidden at times under a mock simplicity, there is too much that is direct and unwavering to be called escape.

Rorty's most recent work is his strongest and he has continued to improve. He is a poet who fuses sensitiveness to personal experience with a feeling for social values. A. B. Magil.
