Just what the relations were between the old boy and the 48-year old warbler are not disclosed in court procedure, but it is assumed that Hecksher had made some promise to pay $1,000,000 to Hempel in return for a consideration.

Hempel got a divorce in Paris last summer from a big silk and cocoon man and rumors of engagements with Hecksher floated across the ocean several times. Attorneys claim the million-dollar settlement was not made for breach of promise to marry.

Hecksher's son, G. Maurice, is also in the toils of busted love, or something like that. His wife sued yesterday for divorce in Paris. Fear for Lives of Soviet Union Officials Captured By Chang Tso Lin

HIGHLIGHTS OF TODAY'S NEWS

1.—Japan, her finance shaky and fearing another disastrous boycott, adopts more conciliatory Chinese policy.

2.—Chiang Kai Shek offers Ministry of Foreign Affairs to C. C. Wu, former mayor of Canton, deposed for pro-imperialist sympathies.

3 .- Fear for lives of Mme. Borodin and officials of Soviet Union captured by Chang Tso-lin.

4.—Chang Tso-lin censors student publications in Peking; police report 10,000 Kuomintang members in Peking universities. 5 .- Hankow Nationalists take towns near Canton; four armies move thru Hunan Province against Canton.

TOKYO, May 5 .- That the British die-hard cabinet has failed—for the time being—in forcing the imperialist powers into a joint war against Nationalist China was indicated this afternoon in a conciliatory address by Premier Giichi Tanaka before the Japanese Diet.

"Reports of the outrages in China are exaggerated," the premier told members of the Diet. "Japanese women have not been insulted in

PROFESSIONAL PATRIOTS BAND WITH BIG BUSINESS, LABOR REACTIONARIES

New Book by Famous Publicist Traces Alliance of Civic Federation With Detective

"The National Civic Federation, though it carries a few labor officials on its letterhead and swears allegiance to the American Federation of Labor, is clearly a big business organization and has been so since Ralph Easley, its chairman, learned which side could write cashable checks.

"The organization is supported wholly by the contribution of the more than well-to-do. No labor organization ever voted it a nickle. Many like the United Mine Workers and the International Ladies' Garment Workers have openly condemned it and forbidden their members to join it.

"This, however, did not affect Mr. Samuel Gompers, former president of the American Federation of Labor, who was for years a vice-president of the Civic Federation and one of its most active supporters. Nor does it affect the activities of Mr. Matthew Woll, who is now Mr. Easley's 'acting president'."

With this paragraph, "Professional Patriots," a book edited by Norman Hapgood from material assembled by Sidney Howard and John Hearley, scorches "this practical alliance between big business, organized labor, and the government secret service' as "unparalleled in the history of the labor movement here or in any other

Boston Unions Say State Labor Office In Bosses' Control

By PHYLLIS FENIGSTON.

BOSTON, May 5 .- The Central Lapor Union of Boston has appointed a committee of five to investigate the Department of Labor and Industries of Massachusetts. The evidence brought out in the public hearing of the case of Mary Donovan, they felt, showed clearly that one of the reasons for dismissing this factory inspector from her job was a tooconscientious attempt to protect the workers of the State by seeing that employers observed the labor laws. Much Evidence.

When these facts were presented at the Central Labor Union, many delegates rose to give their evidence of the methods employed by the Massachusetts Department of Labor. They charged the Department with an attitude of partiality toward employers, and hostility toward workers in all strikes and labor disputes.

Officers of the Department, it was tated, take every opportunity to use technicalities to protect employers from living up to labor laws, instead of protecting and safeguarding the

These vultures upon ciety are seeking to use the case against The DAILY WORKER as a means of increasing the loot derived from plying their nefarious trade. They are the paid agents of business interests, which are bent upon depriving the working class of this country of its powerful and dreaded weapon-The DAILY WORK-ER. On the basis of their first success in holding the members of The DAILY WORK-ER, for Special Sessions, they will collect many thousands of dollars from employers throughout the country. With this money they hope to carry the case to success. The forces of big business, the city, and federal government are on their side. Our enemies are a unit against us.

Seitz and Darte must not succeed. We will not give up our chief weapon. The thousands of dollars collected from the bosses by the prosecution must be matched dollar for dollar by the collective effort of our party members and DAILY WORKER supporters. The united front of the reactionaries must be met with the united front of labor behind its organ. The dollar patriots must be taught a lesson they will never forget, to keep their hands off the labor movement. This demands action-effective and immediate. You must send your contributions to the Defense Fund. You must do it now. Get your fellow worker to do the same.

Two weeks (lacking one day) after the close of the trial of the eleven fur workers charged with an assault on a Rockville Center shop during the strike last year, eight of the workers were yesterday sentenced in the Mineola court room by Judge Lewis E. Smith who presided at the trial.

Nine of the eleven workers who went on trial were convicted by the jury of the assault in the second degree. Ben Gold, manager of the New York Furriers' Joint Board and Isalore Shapiro, the chairman, were acquitted. CHIANG KAI-SHEK

By SID BUSH.

Immortal fame of individuals as well as of groups remain forever inscribed upon the annals of history only when and where these have organized and led, or materially contributed towards movements in the interest of progress. Movements contributing towards the progress of society are only those that are the dynamic force in bringing about the condition when the majority of a certain part or the whole of society is raised from a lower to that of a higher level of development. The Chinese revolution now in full swing bears this character. Everyone that contributes towards the victory of this revolution will be counted among the army of immortal cioneers who helped to raise the level of human development not only in China but that of the whole world.

Those creatures in human form who happen to be carried along upon the crest of the revolutionary wave, but who desert their comrades in the midst of the most sanguinary crisis, are recorded in history as venomous reptiles that curl up beneath the underbrush and treacherously strike at their immediate victims when the latter least suspect it. Chiang Kai Shek is one of these creatures. He was entirely unknown to the world at large until the liberation movement in China commenced its victorious march a few months ago. This movement lifted him up to the pinnacle of world fame, but as soon as he reached this lofty height he showed his true color to be that of another bloody militarist of the Wu Pei-fu type. Not only did he use his position as generalissimo of the Nationalist armies to advance his own fortune, but as soon as he embarked on this road he did not stop at accepting bribes from his erstwhile enemies, the imperialists, and turned traitor to China's struggle for freedom.

This betrayal places Chiang in the same category of bandit robbers, of the exploited masses of China, with the notorious Anfu Club, Wu Pei-fu, Chang Tso-lin and others of this type of scoundrel. And just like the latter group, excepting Chang Tso-lin whose turn is still to come, has been swept away and thrown down into the dark recesses of oblivion so will Chiang be defeated in his designs and be flung overboard to take his rightful place alongside of the other bandits who helped keep China in misery.

It would not be worth the while to spend much paper and print in order to mention the fact that another traitor to the cause of the working masses has been added to the already long list, if there were no lessons to be learned therefrom. Now what are these lessons.

First, that every friend and foe of the emancipation movement of the proletariat must distinctly understand that the vast store of rich and invaluable lessons of October, 1917, will stand as the most powerful bulwark against defeat of the oppressed in the struggle for freedom. Our Chinese comrades are taking advantage of the lessons of the Russian revolution, they will therefore, in due course of time reach their goal notwithstanding the traitors in their ranks and the imperialist hordes within their gates. The Hankow government is sincerely desirous of bringing about (1) the expulsion of the imperialist robbers, (2) the abolition of the remnants of feudalism, (3) the unification of all of China into one united nation under one centralized government, (4) and the placing of this government in he hands of representatives of the producing classes. Anyone who finds hi mself in disagreement with this program will eventually find himself by

That since Lenin, the greatest of all engineers of construction of produtarian power thru organization has taught the workers the technique of or ranizing, the usurpation of a movement of many by an inspiring Napoleon and using it for his own ends has well nigh become impossible as far as the revolutionary class struggle is concerned. Lenin demonstrated to the won kers of the world that the leadership of the revolutionary struggle must be in the hands of "revolutionary cadres." That means that "professional *volutionists" who have no other interest outside the struggle for the emiancipation of the proletariat, and whose lives are devoted to this cause alone and not the furtherance of individual ends can successfully organize and lead the producing masses to victory

This neans, first, devotion to the cause and self-sacrifice for it, second team work, group action and direction so that no individual of the group may usurp dictatorial power. The enlarged session of the Central Executive Committee of the Kuomintang Party adopted this form of organization:

(1) The re-establishment of the military council whose powers Chiang usurped, (2) that a military commissary be established to supply all needs of the army, (3) that all foreign affairs be centralized in the hands of a foreign ministry, (4) that a finance ministry be established that will control finances, instead of the way Chiang was plundering the treasury and did give an accounting of same, (5) that all chairmanships (which at times ators) be abolished and presidiums of 3 or 5 should control imommittees.

That all these divisions shall work under the direction and superthe supreme body, the CEC of the party.

ang Kai Shek gave lip service to it. He even issued a manifesto Chinese people in which he stated that he accepts the decisions of Central Executive Committee. But while the Chinese masses were this manifesto Chiang Kai Shek was treacherously conspiring them. And like Wu Pei-fu, who three years ago on entering into ordered his lieutenants to cut off the heads of the leaders of the en's Union, so he, Chiang, ordered the executions of the leaders of

PREPARATIONS FOR THE IMPENDING IMPERIALIST WAR IN THE PACIFIC

China in Revolt. By Stalin, Tan-Ping-Shan, Manuilsky and Bucharin. Daily Worker Publishing Co. 15 cents.

This pamphlet on China should be in the hands of every worker who wants to understand the driving forces of the great upheaval in China. It is a symposium comprising speeches and articles by the outstanding leaders of the world revolutionary movement and by one Chinese.

Stalin, in his speech delivered to the Chinese Commission of the Enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International, dealt with the peculiarities of the Chinese revolution; pointing out those characteristics that distinguished that elementary insurrectionary movement from previous revolutions, particularly the 1905 revolution in Russia. With true Leninist analysis he depicts the role of the revolutionary armies in China and the important role of the peasantry in the struggle against imperialism. Most important for the study of the art of insurrection, particularly as it applies to countries predominantly peasant, is that part of Stalin's contribution regarding the conduct to be followed by the revolutionary troops after they establish themselves among the peasants. One quotation is worth far more than the price of the pamphlet and should be studied by all sincere revolu-

"It is said that the revolutionary army in China is welcomed with open arms, but that later, after it has established itself, there is certain dissilusionment. The same thing happened with us in the Soviet Union during the civil war. This is explained by the fact that the army, after it has liberated new provinces and established itself in them, is compelled to maintain itself in some way or another at the expense of the district. We, the Soviet revolutionaries, usually succeeded in making up for these disadvantages by endeavoring to help the peasants against the landowners by means of the army. It is essential that the Chinese revolutionaries should also learn to make up for these disadvantages by carrying out a correct peasant policy with the help of the army.'

Under the influence of the Communists who are the dynamic force in the revolutionary movement in China this advice is being put into practice, much to the amazement and chagrin of the imperialist military "experts," who cannot comprehend that a revolutionary army has reserves that no predatory army can ever hope for.

In military theory, an army, from the day it enters the field becomes weaker, regardless of whether it is winning victories or not, for the simple reason that its very existence depletes its forces. That applies to imperialist armies. Its only recruits come from new forces being thrown into the breech. But a revolutionary army, pursuing a correct policy in occupied territory wins to its support the population and the most virile elements of that population invariably rallies to the support of the revolution, with the result that the army constantly gains in numbers and power.

Many more valuable contributions to revolutionary strategy appear in Stalin's article in the pamphlet; too many, in fact, to be described in the short space alloted for our review.

Tan-Ping Shan emphasizes the steps necessary to complete the nationalist revolution in China, while Manuilsky deals with the Pacific problem as a whole, especially emphasizing the dangers of another world conflict by laying bare the antagonistic roles of the United States, England and Japan. Regarding America Manuilsky warns:

"America is already arming now for the war in the Pacific; there is already an extensive literature which discusses this question in detail; and even the very time (1931-33) is set; plans for operations are described; in brief the picture which we had several years before the war in Europe is beginning to resurrect itself. At that time, prior to the world war, one could find in military literature detailed drafts of the German attack upon Belgium, which were later, on the first days of August, 1914, carried into effect with photographic fidelity.

"The whole development of American imperialism in the last 25 years testifies that this approaching struggle on the Pacific is in no sense a creation of fantasy."

Manuilsky's analysis is valuable today, inasmuch as it lays the foundaon for an understanding of the strained relations between America and England that have come openly to the surface in the attitude of the Coolidge administration in refusing to participate in a second note to Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister of China, and are accentuated by the remarks of Ambassador Houghton in London to the effect that the United States would not follow British policy in the Pacific.

The policies of the three imperialist powers—the United States, Great Britain and Japan-are dealt with in simple and striking sentences that drive home to workers the monstrous threat of another world war that will eclipse in magnitude the last world war. Manuilsky concludes with emphasizing the role of the proletariat as the guardian of the peace of the Bucharin analyzes the conditions in China that are favorable to the growth of the revolution and points out the dangers that would inevitably follow from a wrong policy of applying the united front against imperialism. He points out that a struggle for national liberation against imperialism must be combined with sweeping land reforms in order to win the solid support of the peasantry and that those petty bourgeoise elements not connected with foreign capital must remain in the ranks of the nationalist

Finally Bucharin emphasizes the fact that the Chinese revolution will waken a "mighty echo" in neighboring colonial countries. No matter what other literature one may have upon China, there is nothing that can take the place of this valuable pamphlet.

THE NEW MASSES

Whether or not China is ready for a proletarian state is open to question. That it is not seems to be the dominant opinion in the Communist International.

But there is all the difference in the world between that view and the cockeyed mystical notion that the "Chinese are not fitted constitutionally to become reds." Yet that is the theory that is advanced by Dorothy Wong in a leading article in the New Masses.

The theory of innate redness is not at all new. It has been applied by myopic liberals to revolutions and proletarian movements in every country. For English liberals, Bolshevism is all right in Russia, but Englishmen aren't constitutionally fitted for it; for German liberals, Bolshevism works all right in Russia, but Sovietism isn't in harmony with the German spirit: for American liberals Sovietism is all right for Russians (they're a little bugs anyway) but Americans ain't built like that.

That the New Masses should lead with a very poorly-written article subscribing to that thesis is a little surprising. The only explanations that I can think of are that the article was written by a Chinese, and that the New Masses editors were hard up for stuff on China.

Of the two other long articles, one, Bukharin's attack on the Yessenin cult, is interesting. The other, "Economics and Education" is a very dull and erudite attempt by V. F. Calverton to establish the "causal relationship" between educational theory and economic evolution." Calverton's preliminary apologies do not make his thesis less trite.

This is the way in which Bukharin punctures the Yessenin cult. "Is Yessenin talented? Of course he is. Who would dispute that. Nevertheless Yesseninism as a whole, is a disgusting, vulgarly painted and powdered Russian obscenity. It is saturated with alcoholic tears. A monstrous mixture of 'male dogs,' ikons, 'glaring candles,' birches, the moon, bitches, gods, necrophelia, a lot of drunken tears, and 'tragic' drunken hiccoughs; religion and hooliganism, 'love' for animals and a barbaric attitude toward men and especially women, impotent longings for 'wide open spaces' (while sitting within four narrow walls of a common cabaret), decadence raised to the height of principle, -- and so on-all this under the cloak of a wild quasi-folk nationalism constitutes Yesseninism."

The most interesting thing in the magazine are a series of red hot Chinese atrocities created by Bill Gropper for the benefit of Minister Mac-Murray, who is hankering for a nice little war against Nationalist China; and a drawing by Hugo Gellert of John L. Lewis, "high-salaried strategist of the embattled miners," who regrets that he has but "one Union to sacrifice for his country." Say the editors of the New Masses in the current issue, "Paragraph writers on The DAILY WORKER unload columns of sarcasm against our discussion of such human problems as for example, art and sex.' Personally, I'd prefer that the New Masses devote itself even less to strictly political questions than it does. I should like to see it deal with art, religion, the lives of dirt farmers,-even sex; but deal with them from a live robust and politically sane point of view.

I much prefer, for instance, that the New Masses print stuff like Bukharin's analysis of Yessenin than political slop like Dorothy Wong's. -HARRY FREEMAN.
