BOMBAY, India, March 19.— Fourteen thousand textile mill work-ers are on strike here again in spite of the brutal efforts of the Indo-British government to crush the recent walkout of textile workers and workers in other industries through open fighting and concentration of artillery, tanks and planes in this

The workers, who momentarily ceased resistance in the face of the tremendous forces which the British mobilized, have again railied and are continuing the struggle.

Urge Government to Act.

The Anglo-British press is meeting the new walkout with the same alarmist accounts as before, urging the government to take action to end the disputes between the workers and the mill owners, i. e., to crush the workers absolutely.

The Bombay workers have been repeatedly on strike during the past two years. For five months they tied up the textile industry, which starvation wages below the point at tional. which it is possible for even the enslaved Indian workers to exist.

HELL-HOLE IS A SISTER SHIP OF S. S. VESTRIS

Starvation Pay, Long Hours for Slaves

The Daily Worker herewith publishes the first part of a letter from a seaman correspondent, who slaved aboard the S. S. Vandyck, of the Lamport & Holt Co., a sister ship of the liner Vestris, on which the Lamport & Holt Line was responsible for the death of over a hundred lives. The seaman correspondent reveals that similar, even worse, conditions exist aboard the hell-hole sister ships of the Vestris, and that an even worse fate awaits the seamen and passengers aboard these hell-holes should disaster occur to these ships.

(By a Seaman Correspondent) I will describe the conditions on baord the Lamport & Holt ship Vandyck, a hell-hole for the seamen. owned by the line that was responsible for the death of over 100 on the steamship Vestris. The conditions on the Vandyck are every bit as bad as they were on the Vestris. If the Vandyck should get into the same difficulties as the Vestris did when it sank near Cape Hatteras, then there is no telling how many people would lose their lives, for the ship is as bad, the officers as incapable and the lifeboats as rotten as those of the Vestris.

I was a pantryman on the Vandyck on the voyage from New York to Buenos Aires. Argentina, and on the return trip from Buenos Aires back to New York. This was from Jan. 4 to March 8.

Slave 6 A. M. to 11 P. M. The hours of the pantrymen are from 6 a. m. to 11 p. m., and more often long past this hour. It is a rare occasion when the pantrymen get through at 11 p. m. The work of the pantryman, who gets $45 a month, consists of cleaning the presses, getting the stores from the store-room, cleaning the ports, washing down the pantry three times a day to make it clean for inspection, getting the food from the galley after it is cooked, and washing the enamelware-all for $45 a month.

There is no such thing as a lunch hour for the slaves on this boat. If lucky, we get an hour off at 2 p. m., not more often than every other day. There are only four pantrymen on the Vandyck, when there is enough work for 10 men or more. Four men do all the work in a pantry longer than a city block. All get $45 a month, a month of 30 days, not 28 days. Pay is given at the end of the return trip to New York. You can get an advance of $10 or so when the ship reaches Buenos

Lamport-Holt Slave Ship Vandyck: a Hell-Hole for Seamen

The Daily Worker today starts publishing a letter from a seaman correspondent, telling of conditions of slavery on board the Lamport and Holt liner Vandyck, shown above. The Vandyck is a sister ship of the Vestris, on which the Lamport-Holt line sent over 100 to death. "The Vandyck would have no better chance in a storm than the Vestris did," says this seaman correspondent. The Vandyck is shown above, aground on a flat in Buttermilk Channel, between Governor's Island and

The Communist Party of the U.S. A., Section of the Communist International

There is great significance in the fact that the Sixth National Congress of the Workers (Communist) Party changed the name of the Party to become "The Communist Party of the United States of America, Section of the Communist International."

It is an expression of the present period through which our Party is passing, "from a propagandist organization, uniting chiefly immigrant workers and having an insignificant influence among native workers," to "a mass Party of political action guiding the political and economic actions of the most advanced and the most militant ranks of the American proletariat"-to quote from the Open Letter addressed to the Party Congress by the Comintern.

It was ten years ago that the Communist elements began definitely to crystallize in organizational form within the socialist party. Our party was born, as all Communist Parties, in the struggle against social reformism. Communist Leagues and proletarian groups had begun to appear. Then the "National Left Wing" came into existence. There was always significance to the names adopted, and the changing name of the Party, since it was first organized in September, 1919, has been indicative of the difficult spots on the road along which our Party has continually made progress.

The word "Communist" appeared generally in the first of the Party names adopted in our young American Communist movement, such as the "Communist Party," the "Communist Labor Party" and the "United Communist. Party." Of course it was at all times in fact precisely the Communist Party of the United States of America and nothing else, and only the exigencies of the time caused variations in the official name. The name "Workers Party" was adopted in December, 1921, as the title of an organization created as an open expression of the Communist Party, which was then underground, having been declared by the United States government to be an illegal organization. The program of what was then called the Workers Party was not a full statement of the program of the Communist Party, the curtailment being necessary to the purpose for which the open organization had been brought into existence. Only the illegal Party was the American section of the Communist International.

One of the most instructive pages of Party history centers around the government raid on the Communist Party Convention at Bridgeman, Michigan, in August 1922, when practically the entire Party leadership was arrested and prosecutions began which resulted in a heavy prison sentence for our leader, C. E. Ruthenberg. The police attack was so well answered by the Party's appeals for working class support that it became possible to bring the illegalized Party out into the open as the legal Party. At the beginning of 1923, in connection with the defense campaign among the workers, the Communist Party and the Workers Party were merged and the Workers Party became the American section of the Comintern, with a full Communist program. In the 1925 convention the word "Communist" was inserted and the transitional name "Workers (Communist) Party" adopted.

The question of still further changing the name of the Party has often been on the agenda during the half dozen years since 1923. The Party with its full program was before the masses during this important period, during which broad campaigns were waged for the Labor Party, through various forms of action in the carrying out of the United Front tactic; the Left Wing was built up in the trade unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the campaign inaugurated for the organization of the unorganized, while the Party itself was reorganized so as to be based upon shop and street nuclei in place of the old geographical divisions that prevailed within the socialist party, with its foreign language federation autonomy.

Thus the change of name from "Workers (Communist) Party" to Communist Party, as made in our latest convention, coming at a certain stage in a process of development, has a significance aside from a mere technical change in name. The Party itself is growing into a Bolshevik organization of Leninism, "acting with increasing frequency as the stalwart leader of the mass actions of the American proletariat and has increased its influence among the native workers."

Under its new name, the Party moves forward, making its first steps along the new path. There is much to be done in rooting the Party deep in the basic industries of steel, coal, metal, transportation, and also automobile, oil, rubber and chemicals. That is the Party's great organizational task, for which an excellent beginning was made by the Sixth Party Convention in the proletarianization of the leading Party committees, 50 per cent of the membership of the Central Executive Committee now consisting of workers now at work in the shops, mills and factories, especially from heavy industry, and who continue at their work while serving as leaders of the Party. The drawing of more Negro workers into the leading committees is an indication that the Party is learning to master its duty in relation to the millions of the Negro proletariat and peasantry. Development of work among women and youth labor in the mills and factories is to be found among the important tasks that must receive increasing attention. It is the correct application of the decisions of the Sixth Congress of the Comintern, the Fourth Congress of the Profintern and the Open Letter of the Comintern to our own Sixth Party Congress, that will keep the Communist Party of the United States of America on the Bolshevik path that lies before it, hardening it in the struggle, disciplining its membership, centralizing its forces, and closely linking it up with the masses.

Thus the Communist Party of the United States becomes more than ever in fact the vanguard of the American working class, drawing into its ranks an increasing number of the best, most class conscious, most active, and most courageous members of our class. It becomes better than ever equipped to achieve its historic mission, the victory of the dictatorship of the proletariat in this country, the starting point for the building of a Communist society.

There is much to be criticized to be sure. The Party must give greater attention to the agrarian population, learning how better to coordinate and lead the struggles of the agricultural workers and poor farmers with the industrial proletariat. Unity with the workers of Latin Ameica in the growing battles against the dollar imperialists must be THE "W. GES" OF NEGRO WORKERS

PART 64.

IN 1907, during the financial crisis, the gold mining companies of Nevada attempted to pay off their men with clearing house checks. James Kirwan, who was acting as secretary-treasurer of the W.F.M., wrote asking me to get out some sort of circular on the fake money that the mining companies were trying to impose on the miners. workers were producing gold, and expressed their willingness to accept part of the product in return for their labor. I got out a draft of a circular for the campaign. The miners succeeded in getting their pay in money every month, but this exaction engendered hard feelings between them and the companies.

WILLIAM E. BORAH was at this time attorney for the Barbour Lumber Company, the president of which was in the Ada County jail. It seems that the lumber company had been fraudulently locating timber claims. It was intimated at the time that Borah would likewise be indicted, but the case blew over. When the president of the company was leaving the prison, he passed a window where I was standing and said, "I wish you luck!"

"Thank you," I replied, "I'd rather be where I am than where you are, although you are leaving the jail."

THROUGH the inch-square holes of the flat-barred windows of our day cell I could look out on the broad lawn where dandelions were scattered about like pieces of miser's gold on a green cloth, shaded near the fence by a giant maple tree. In the cell the setting sun cast checkered shadows on the floor.

One night while sitting in my cell I saw a tiny curved strip of silver at one of the small windows high up near the roof. I could not think what it was. It kept growing bigger and at last I realized that it was the moon. It soon covered the entire window. It was the first time I had seen the moon in fifteen months.

ON one side of the Caldwell court house and jail were sixteen rase bushes. These afforded me much pleasure the first summer I was there. When I went out for exercise, I would walk up and down among these bushes and pick off all the roses whose petals were about to fall. Every day I carried a quantity into the cell, spread papers and dried the petals in the shade. I kept on doing this until I had a pile of rose leaves large enough to make a cushion. Then I had Mrs. Moyer get me a cushion cover; she chose one of silk with roses embroidered on it. I had here buy me a little attar of roses to sprinkle over the leaves. I filled the cushion and sent it to my wife. She treasured it as her Pettibone spent much of his time doing pyrography, or burnt wood work. He made some very fine specimens, using the tops and bottoms of cigar boxes for material.

Moyer devoted most of his time to reading.

THE socialist party of Colorado nominated me as candidate for governor in the election of 1906. It was a most unusual proceeding, to nominate a man who was in prison in another state. I wrote a letter of acceptance, but I might remark that I didn't run; I just marked time. Still, after the elections the returns showed that I had something over sixteen thousand votes, which was not a bad endcrsement in a state where the vote was as small as that of Colorado. In this election I ran neck-and-neck with Judge Ben Lindsey, the reformer who conducted the children's court in Denver.

We thought that Judge Lindsey was inclined to be friendly to the W.F.M. but we had had occasion at one time to take exception to his method of giving the children who came before him vacations. He had suggested that they should be sent out to work in the beet-fields, O'Neill wrote a strong article in the Miners' Magazine against this proposal to work the children in the fields, and told Judge Lindsey that it would look better on his part if he would try to arrange real vacations for the children in pleasant places in the mountains. This suggestion was received favorably by the judge, who tried to put it into effect.

THE second convention of the Industrial Workers of the World was held in Chicago in September, 1906. Acrimony developed in this convention between Charles Mahoney, then vice president of the W.F.M. and Vincent St. John, who had also come to the convention as a delegate. This feeling arose partially over St. John's antagonism to Charles Sherman, the president of the I.W.W.

Sherman was deposed and the office of president was abolished. Sherman had proved incapable, and if not actually dishonest, he had used an enormous amount of the funds for unnecessary purposes. Mahoney had joined forces with the metal workers, and St. John had the locals, formerly of the American Labor Union, behind him, as well as the few members of DeLeon's Socialist Trade and Labor Alliance who had joined the I.W.W. The St. John forces controlled the convention, but Sherman and Mahoney took possession of the office.

Two factions of the I.W.W. were established, the St. John faction with Trautmann as secretary, and the Mahoney-Sherman faction which had elected a man by the name of Hanneman. The last named faction soon liquidated for want of members. Through the manipulations of a socialist lawyer, Seymour Stedman, the socialist party came into possession of the office fixtures, safes, desks, and so on. The W.F.M. stood aloof from both elements. While this bitter fight was going on we were behind the bars, powerless to do anything.

In the next instalment Haywood writes of the split in the I.W.W at its second convention; of the St. John-Trautman faction and Sherman-Mahoney faction and its echo in the W.F.M.
