Teachers Plan College Drive At Convention

Buffalo Parley of AFT Begins Today, Cuts In Budgets Hit

(Special to the Daily Worker) BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 21. - A campaign to organize the faculty of the country's colleges was outlined here yesterday by the college section of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL.

The meeting was in preparation for the A.F.T. convention which opens in Hotel Buffalo today. Professor Alben Winspear, who reported on the growth, activity and problems of the college section, was elected chairman of the central organizing committee.

The college section meeting also held panel discussions on: democratic organization, the budget and public relations, cooperation with other organizations, student-faculty relations, academic freedom, and the problems of the non-instructional staff.

A feature of the discussions was the statement made by Dr. Bella V Dodd, legislative representative of the New York State Federation of Teachers, placing the responsibility for the cut in the school budgets squarely on the Republican Party

The Tribune Wants to Plow Under the Farmers

• If one plowed under gallons and gallons of badly needed milk, and then plowed under a few thousand hard-working up-state farmers also, it would just suit the cold-blooded and contemptuous Herald Tribune. That is the solution of this arch-reactionary Republican organ for the present situation in which the farmers are fighting for their right to live.

Said the Tribune in a sneering editorial yesterday:

"Fundamentally, the reason (for the present condition) is because there are too many of him (the farmer), he produces too much milk. . . . "

And this, too, in the face of the fact that milk is the fluid of life for children of the needy. That there is a people's market for all the milk the farmers produce and more (at prices that the people can pay), is shown by the $310,000 for advertising milk allotted by the State.

The Tribune isn't fooling when it advocates doing away with its self-made "oversupply" of farmers. Only its method and that of the big, powerful Borden-Sheffield Trust is by starving them out. Now they're slandering and trying to smash the farmers' rightful strike. This follows logically their recent Woodrum assaults upon the WPA, all body blows to the mass buying power so essential for the farmer's city market.

What really needs plowing under is the robber power of the big milk trusts. Here is where all the milk profits go—at the expense of both the farmers and consumers. The ruthless protection of these robbers by the Tribune proves once more the rascality and treachery of the Hoover-Dewey Republicans against the farmers.

The present fight of the farmers through their Dairy Farmers Union is reasonable and just. Even the Tribune must admit that "everybody knows that the farmer does not get a decent return for his production." The Tribune, of course, only says that the better to cut the farmers and consumers throats, and the easier to feather the nests of the milk trusts.

One of the brightest spots of the present struggle is the fine way in which labor, and above all the CIO, have shown solidarity with the farmers and have come to their aid against the common enemy. This sort of support to the farmers from city people of all denominations is the way to lick the milk trusts.

A Label of IMPURITY

• The reading public is pretty much accustomed to the treasonous attacks upon democracy and the filthy journalism of the Hearst press. For that reason, Hearst circulation has gone down in many places and a few Hearst gutter sheets have gone the way of all flesh.

Now comes the Federal Trade Commission and does another real service to the people by bringing forth evidence that Hearst publications are poison in advertising content as they have been long known to be in editorial and news policy. The FTC has filed a complaint against Hearst Magazines, Inc., charging it with illegal and fraudulent practices in connection with Good Housekeeping guarantees and labels.

According to the complaint, big manufacturers have been placing advertisements in Good Housekeeping making all sorts of false claims about their worth and purity and the magazine has been supplying special labels guaranteeing these claims. This, of course, brings in more advertising business to Hearst. It doesn't seem to matter at all to the magazine that the foods, cosmetics, medicines and other products, which it guarantees, may be poisonous to the buying public. In other words, the Good Housekeeping guarantee on a product appears to be as dangerous to the human body as the Hearst label on a publication is to human decency and

The Hearst Magazines, Inc., gives a defense which is a gem. It wails that the FTC complaint is motivated by "communistic theories," "communistic groups,"—that is, the whole thing is a communist plot. That bogey is also typically Hearstian—and raising it is almost invariably a confession of guilt.

The Dies Committee Furnishes the Cue

• The real service which the un-American Dies Committee performs for the enemies of American democracy is strikingly revealed in the last radio harangue of the fascist demagogue, Coughlin.

Coughlin used the red-baiting and irresponsible testimony before the Dies outfit to justify his own crime of sponsoring, organizing, and inciting the so-called "Christian Front" to gangsterism throughout the country. (Of course, it doesn't faze such a mountebank as Coughlin that he's howled himself blue in the face denying all responsibility for the "Christian Front.") Last Sunday he called for the organization of a "counter-force" which would carry out his "Franco way" of violence and bloodshed.

A "counter-force" against what? And Coughlin replies against "the Popular Front of Bolshevism" exposed by the Dies Committee. Actually, the Dies Committee has been "exposing" and "smearing" every person who expressed opposition to the activities of the Rome-Berlin axis abroad and at home. Its vicious campaign against the Communists has been aimed at labor, the New Deal, and very nearly every outstanding progressive individual and organization in the nation.

What the Dies Committee has been "exposing" and "slandering" is American democracy, and those who stood up for it. To be sure, these are just what Coughlin wants the "Christian Front" gangs to attack—and it is what they are attacking through anti-Semitism and other violence in almost every community.

The Dies Committee has made a few empty passes at the fascists. But, of course, it wouldn't even make a pass at Coughlin, though Fritz Kuhn, Hitler's Nazi agent, has brazenly admitted his connections with Coughlin.

'Vote Progressive'-

Editor. Daily Worker:

The Reublican reactionaries have sabotaged the New Deal on a national, state and city-wide basis. They were the ones who together with the reactionary democrats sponsored the Woodrum Bill. They helped to defeat the President's peace policy and his lending and housing bills.

This means that we in East Harlem must go on suffering in slums. It means that men and boys must go without work. It means that war and fascism are brought closer to our own country.

As far as Republican activity is concerned in New York State, every one knows what they have done to education.

In the city council, "silk stockings" Baldwin, socalled Progressive Republican, is and has been sabotaging progressive city legislation. It is the Hoover Republicans and Garner Democrats who are responsible for the Woodrum Bill. They must be defeated in the 1940 elections.

Workers, middle class, professionals, and business men do not be misled by Republican lies! Vote progressive and labor council men into office. They will help instead of sabotaging the New Deal. Vote for Amter, Communist candidate for councilman. A Vote for Amter is a vote for jobs, security, democracy and peace.

Sherman told the committee that he had found out about Von Speckelsheim's activities in other colleges from President Rufus Harris of Tulane University when he met him last March at a conference in Memphis.

Harris informed him, Sherman said, that "the Baron had snuggled up to members of his faculty very effectively."

A telephone call by Ernest Berger, on March 10, 1939, the German Consular agent at Tampa, preceded the Baron's visit to Tampa University a few days later. Berger had said that he had a "friend" who could be persuaded to give the University some books.

When Von Speckelsheim came in-Harris said that he asked: "Is this the gentleman giving us the books?" He declared that the Consul answered: "Not I, but my government."

The Baron said, Sherman continued, that the German government made a "practice" of making such offers of libraries to other schools and colleges.

"He said," Sherman told the committee, "that of course he wanted to be sure that the professor in charge of teaching German at the University was adequate.

"At this point the conversation ceased to be pleasant and we engaged in mutual recrimination."

Sherman explained that he was particularly indignant about this offer because Dr. Otto F. Kraus, the University's German professor is strongly anti-Nazi and because Nazi sympathizers had staged campaigns "based on innuendo" against him before.

Kraus is a native of Vienna who came here in May 1937. Sherman said that "Kraus made it clear that he was bitterly opposed to the Nazi philosophy. He was frankly democratic and very liberal."

Sherman told the committee that the Baron had criticized Tampa University for permitting the presence of Jews.

"He said that the fact that we had no quotas on Jews and that we had Jews on the board was a mistake, and that with further experience we would regret it," Sherman said.

Connecticut Digs in to Master History of Communist Party of Soviet Union

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 21.—Within a comparatively short period after the Short History of the CPSU was published, over 1,100 copies were distributed by the Connecticut organization of the Party. Another order just recently placed brings the total to 1,200. Hundreds more in the various language editions have been sold by the Russian, Jewish. Italian, and other language groups and individuals.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

How was it done? The enthusiasm with which the entire Party and its friends greeted the book - the realization of what it meant to have this modern classic of Party theory available for study-it was this that enabled us to undertake such a rapid distribution of the book. For it was actually gobbled up by comrades and sympathizers everywhere. In the famous hatters' town of Danbury, one comrade sold 13 books. A New Haven painter got rid of 15 copies. An Italian comrade in Stamford sold 25 copies of the Italian edition. A food worker in Hartford sold over 20. In city after city in the state, there are many such sterling examples of comrades who on their own initiative undertook to bring the book to at least 10 of their friends,

In organizing for the study of the book, we did not undertake to embrace the whole of the Party membership. However much we desired this, we realized this was not yet practical. Rather, we organized classes of leading comrades in every city in the state. These classes covered at one period about 150 Party comrades, and met regularly once a week or every two weeks. The classes served mainly as an introduction to the study of the book and to get the comrades into the swim of understanding its significant lessons.

Most of these classes served their purpose and were disbanded with the summer months. Even now, however, about 60 comrades throughout the state are having classes as an aid to their study.

throughout the state are having classes as an aid to their study.

The Eastern Conference on the study of the CPSU, called by the National Educational Department, was a distinct spur and aid to the further and more intensive study of the book. As a result of it, many more dozens of comrades are now seriously applying themselves to go through the book in a systematic

With the coming of the fall, we intend to push vigorously to encourage many more comrades in self-study; and as an aid to them, each city will organize a monthly conference to clarify important questions raised in the book. Lessons which have been drawn from the book are being used to illuminate many of the current organizational and political problems faced by our branches today.

ized that went about the study of the book in a real collective fashion. Mistakenly, some of our comrades thought they were not competent enough to teach the History as it should be taught. However, they resolved to begin and to solve any theoretical problems that arose by putting their thought together. Whenever there wasn't sufficient clarity on a particular point, assignments were made to dig deeper into the subject and to bring back reports which were then discussed by everyone. Such a method was of great help in mastering the book. In general, this was done elsewhere in other classes throughout the

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Harry Gannes' column, "World Front," will appear again tomorrow. Readers are referred to his front-page article today on the Soviet-German trade credit agreement.

Women in China's Medical Service

CHUNGKING (By Mail).—The registered women doctors, nurses and pharmacists of China number 941, 3,779 and 273 respectively, making a total of 4,493. Out of this number nearly half are engaged in the wartime medical service. Actually there are many more women working in the field of medicine for the nation's cause, as a large percentage is unregistered.

In China's three leading medical services alone, at least 2,000 Chinese women are engaged, at daily risk of their lives, in ministering to the wounded and dying. The three medical services are the Army Medical Service, the Medical Relief Commission of the Chinese Red Cross and the National Health Administration.

Of these 2,000 women, nurses are by far the greatest in number, totalling 1,384. They are followed numerically by 195 doctors, 165 dressers, 73 pharmacists. About 200 women are serving in various capacities in hospitals and subsidiary organizations of the National Health Administration.

These women have steeled themselves to tasks formerly considered fit only for men. At least 64 women are braving shot and shell by clinging to their posts at collecting stations to which the wounded are brought from the front. Three of them are doctors, three are pharmacists and the rest, numbering 58, are nurses. This number excludes those sent to these stations by the Chinese Red Cross, which is cooperating closely with the Army Medical Service.

Women doctors, nurses and phamacists in the Army Medical Service total 1,114 as against 12,391 men. There are 171 women doctors as against 5,283 men; 68 women pharmacists as against 1,265 men and 875 women nurses as against 5,843 men. They work in collecting stations, field hospitals and base hospitals.

The percentage of women serving on the Medical Relief Commission of the Chinese Red Cross is greater than that in the Army Medical Service. Out of the Commission's total personnel of 1,667, 457 are women of whom fifteen are doctors, four pharmacists, 165 cressers and 268 nurses. One is attached to the Transportation Department, while four are doing secretarial work.

The Commission maintains nearly 80 mobile units, including curative, nursing, preventive and ambulance units, spread over various fronts, and concentrated in areas where fighting is heaviest. Attached to these units are 1,331 persons, of whom 445 are women, 14 being doctors, 264 nurses, 165 dressers and two secretaries.

The National Health Administration counts 393 women on its rolls, 200 of whom serve in the hospitals and various other permanent organs of the administration, while 193 are attached to the administration's anti-epidemic corps

Letters and Diaries Reflect Japanese Soldiers' Weariness

CHUNGKING (By Mail).—Dead men tell no tales—but what they leave behind does. Chinese mobile units operating in the triangular Shanghai-Nanking-Hangchow area have come into possession of numberless diaries and letters either found on the bodies of dead Japanese officers and soldiers or taken from war captives. Passages therefrom, when pieced together, provide an illuminating picture of the despondency gripping Japanese troops on the Eastern Front, or, for that matter, on most other fronts in China. Fear for their own safety, worries over their families, the feeling of imminent doom, war weariness and petty and often laughable superstitions, are candidly recorded in these notes and letters.

Second Lieutenant Ninomura wrote to his wife Kishigawa Hidezo, but did not live long enough to mail the letter. Part of it reads: "The first replacement brought over 200 men to our battalion. But where are they now? The majority have been either killed or wounded in action. Only 33 are still alive. By the time the 2nd, 3rd and other replacements arrive, I am afraid none of the old soldiers will be left. . . . "

From his garrison post in north Anhwei, Japanese officer Onowashi Sakuko wrote a letter to Teramoto Nobuhisa, his sweetheart back home. The letter fell into Chinese hands when its author was captured. The following passage is of interest: "Many of our troops were routed and fell back. War is a miserable business. We are safe when there are few enemy troops around us, but whenever our own units are reduced we are immediately in danger."

The precarious position of Japanese troops south of the Yangtze in Kiangsu, Anhwei and Chekiang may be better understood when it is known that one Chinese mobile army alone has engaged in more than 300 battles with the Japanese. Nipponese losses were estimated at 5,000. Tidings of this constant process of nibbling away reaches the ears of the Japanese and their sense of insecurity deepens.

This April in south Kiangsu, for example, several hundred Japanese soldiers lost their lives between Kaozeng and Lishui on the Kiangsu-Anhwei border south of the Yangtze. The corpses were brought back to these towns for cremation on April 11. The few Chinese still there were ordered not to leave their houses at all that day. They were forbidden even to peep through their windows to watch the big bonfire consuming the dead soldiers in the public square.

Japanese militarists may continue to urge their people to be prepared for a long-drawn-out war, but no hope is more cherished among the rank and file of their soldiers than that of "an early victory." But many of them have their own misgivings. As Seko Masaaki, a petty officer, wrote to his friend Ohne Sekizo, "You should know China is so boundless that no one can cover its entire extent. When will we return in triumph? No one knows, We wait patiently. What else can one do?"

"As for a victorious return—this time I shall probably be carried home in a wooden box. Even should I be spared in this war and return home alive, where am I going to find another such job as I was forced to relinquish when I was called to the colors?"—The above quotation was from Private Ninomoto Eimei's diary.

In his letter to his friend Kojima Seiji, Captain Shiomi Mitsuru said: "In my opinion, serious problems will arise if our reservists are kept in service for more than one year. Now that we have extended our operations over such a wide area, how are we going to conclude the war and reap its benefits?"

Most of the Japanese soldiers do not understand what they are fighting for. Listen to Akikama Suematsu, a Japanese private, who in his letter to a friend, said: "I still do not understand what it is all about. The only thing I know is that I must obey orders and not ask questions." In a similar vein wrote Nakajo Toraichu: "We are often harassed by Chinese guerrillas. Whenever we arrive at a new place, we feel that our life has been automatically shortened."

A Daily Prayer For Today Written Thirty Years Ago

By MIKE GOLD

UNCLE BILL CRAWFORD is an artist who once studied kindly cowboys and Indians of the far west with Frederic Remington, and the savage hogs and monopolists of Wall Street with Art Young. He is my good neighbor, and it's an honor.

Uncle Bill is almost seventy years old, but when he puts on his ten-gallon hat, curls up his mustaches, and utters a few quiet curses on Hitler or Garner, his blue eyes flashing, you know that America will always be

That "muckraker" generation in which Uncle Bill grew up was one of the finest this country has yet produced. We speak of the Gay Nineties; we should also remember they were the Radical Nineties. Men like Lincoln Steffens, Eugene V. Debs, Bill Haywood, Father Mc-Glynn, Tom Johnson, Henry George, Governor Altgeld, Peter Finley Dunne, or the cartoonists Keppler, Art Young and Will Crawford, fought the Trusts with daring, precision, and deadly American humor.

They lost their generation's battle, as the presence of the Sixty Families who own and rule America will testify. But they kept alive the traditional flame of American freedom, and handed it on to our generation burning as pure and high as it did in the hands of Jefferson and Lincoln. Father Coughlin and the Dies Committee blame it all on Moscow, but it was really Mr. Dooley.

After some thirty years, Uncle Bill has made up his mind that he really ought go through his old copies of Puck and Life, and clip out the drawings he contributed there. While he was doing this in his woods-shack which the kids around here believe was built by the Indians, I had a chance to study a little in this chapter of American

The struggle against monopoly capitalism is harder and more dangerous today. We know that all the anti-trust laws in the world will not be enough to destroy the fascist monster which monopoly has created to defend its blood-stained wealth in a time of crisis. Fascism spits on law. Fascism denies that the people have any rights to control capitalism. Fascism goes back to the jungle-laws, and relies entirely on brutal force.

The muckrakers could not forsee all this, naturally. But they did lay out the main line of attack on monopoly. And if the Dies Committee still persists in blaming it all on Lenin, let them know that many of the facts arising from the anti-monopolist movement in America influenced Lenin's thinking.

BECAUSE the muckrakers were so fundamentally right, the massive cartoons of Keppler and Art Young and others that one finds in the old Puck seem as fresh as if they were done today. Some of the writing and comment could also go iton this week's New Masses. Here is one sample. It appeared in Puck just thirty years ago, on the issue

It is titled: "A DAILY PRAYER-Respectfully Submitted to the Chaplain of the United States Senate."

Yes, it still applies, to the Congress of Treason that has just adjourned, and you can still cut it out and send it to one of the traitors at Washington. The language is strong enough to satisfy any unemployed father of a family who has been thrown on the breadline anew by the Wall Street hogs.

Armstrong and Ambers Tonight

Lester Rodney

As before last year's fight, Henry Armstrong is the popular favorite to best Los Ambers tonight. The big difference is that this time no one is underestimating the fighting capacity and will to win of Ambers

Last year Henry was a bigger favorite. Because the then champion Ambers never had a terrific knockout record, he was considered an inferior sort of lightweight champ. It was only after he had come within a short margin of upsetting the great Armstrong in the most furiously fought lightweight battle in the memory of ringsiders that he got something like his proper appraisal. It was then that his fine record was looked into, that his fighting heart and tough background were talked about. He had fought two rounds in Pittsburgh without a whimper, and won, after having his jaw fractured. He had the rugged Montanez groggy at the end of their first fight, and gave him a boxing lesson in their return. He had taken Canzoneri's hardest shots before the veteran Tony was as washed up as he is now (three years ago) and had come back punching enough to win the championship. Since last year's fight with Armstrong, whom he rocked worse than the now middleweight Garcia did, he has beaten some more good lightweights decisively, including the Baby Arizmendi so tough for Henry.

Lightweight Champs Have to Be Good

The truth of the matter as everyone knows now is that Ambers never was a "cheese champion." It's been possible in the past to take a big clown like Carnera and rush him through a subnormal heavyweight division to a "cheese championship. But anyone, at any time, who ever punched his way through the teeming ranks of hungry and ambitious lightweights to get to the top is a real champion. No phony fighters ever ruled the

What we said before last year's bout goes again this year. We said then that to figure the winner of a fight between boys like Armstrong and Ambers you had to just get right down to their physical attributes and forget all questions of moxie and will to win. As we saw it last year, we figured the heavier punching Henry to have enough of an edge in fighting equipment to put Lou on the floor and win a close one by decision. That's just about the way we feel about this

The only change in fighting equipment since last year's fight is the poorer condition of Armstrong's hands, and we're certain they're strong enough after his three months rest to do the bidding of his magnificent and almost tireless body. In Henry's favor is the lessened likelihood that he will be as badly cut as he was last fight. He's nad some bothersome teeth extracted and a better mouthpiece fitted as Discount any Ambers' advantage in now knowing Henry's style. Henry's style is to move forward and throw more and heavier punches than the other man, picking off as many as such a style allows by clever blocking and twisting. To retreat from Armstrong, as Barney Ross did, is to catch the full power of his hooks as he moves in throwing them as fast as his powerful arms can throw them, and to be on the defensive from the first moment. To move in, as Ambers says he will, is to stand toe to toe and exchange short punches with the man who throws more of them than any little fighter that ever pulled on gloves. And eventually to be forced backwards anyhow.

Ambers' equipment is speed afoot, ring savvy, ruggedness, a good assortment of not too heavy punches and a jarring, cutting uppercut that he works effectively from in close. He can make a man's head jerk up, his teeth rattle, his lips split and his head swim with that punch. Both these boys can take all kinds of punches and keep moving. What it looks like to us is another slambang affair with Henry's heavier guns again winning out, perhaps more decisively than last time. He'll have to give everything he has to beat this determined Ambers boy, but everything he has is too much for any fighter within

May Retire After This Year

As we said in the Daily Worker a year ago, 1939 will probably be Armstrong's last in the ring. He's too smart to keep going any longer than he knows he can at top efficiency, and doesn't even want to wait till it gets close to figure. Henry would like to be finished with the training rigors and spend more time with his charming wife and four-year-old daughter. He also wants to finish the story of his life he's working on, a punch packed story parts of which we've been privileged to see, entitled "Down the Glory Road." It's been discovered that besides his other talents this amazing man who wanted to be a surgeon and who writes good poetry and bangs a wicked tune on the piano in addition to being the worlds' best fighter, can also act effectively and sincerely, and he may do a picture in which the role of his people is fairly presented for a change.

But little of that will be in his mind when he climbs into the ring at 10 P.M. tonight to fight. Or perhaps much of it will-perhaps it's just that always with him that makes him so hard to beat that nobody has done it in fifty tries.

Before closing a column on tonight's fight, it seems necessary to say just a word about some of the vague whispers of "fix" that have floated around a few pool parlors and found their way onto page one of that yellow Hearstian Sunday rag called the "Enquirer." Just a word. It's so clear and patent that just such boys as Ambers and Armstrong have brought complete honesty into the fight game, and that either would rather cut off a leg than do any less than his best inside the ring, that this frustrated and phony little clique of tin horn crooks spits out its vindictive whispers. They do it with Louis too, and giving space to such foul mouthed phonies is certainly the measure of a newspaper's lack of integrity.

Camilli Homers, All Dodgers Hit to Chase Sunkel —Hamlin Chalks Up 16th Win, Loses Shutout in 8th

Our Brooklyn Dodgers took the steam out of the red hot St. Louis Cardinals yesterday with a crushing 7-1 victory that opened the home stand against the Western invaders in high and sent the Ebbets Fielders back into the first division ahead of the Giants.

"Hot Potato" Luke Hamlin, revelling in the heat and humidity, overpowered the cards to chalk up his 16th victory of the year against nine defeats. The whole Brooklyn batting order, led by Dolph Camilli with his 20th home run, and Tut Stainback and Art Parks, who clicked for three hits apiece, overpowered the sensational southpaw Tom Sunkel and kept up the bombardment against Lon Warneke. The Cards defeat, plus the victory of the Reds in Philadelphia, put them back 41/2 games behind the lead. The defeat of the Giants by Chicago enabled Brooklyn to climb into fourth place by a half game

PARKS DRIVES IN 1ST

The Dodgers wasted little time. With two out in the first Stainback doubled to left center and Parks singled to right to score him. Camilli followed with a sharp single to right to send Parks to third, but Martin got Koy after dropping his blazing liner.

Long doubles by Durocher and Coscarart scored another in the second and more trouble was averted when Terry Moore pulled down Lavagetto's long drive.

A great stop by Coscarart on Medwick back of second save Hamlin in the fourth with men or third and first and two away. The the Dodgers blazed away at Sunke in the fifth.
