FOSTER EXPOSES AMERICAN IMPERIALIST MOTIVES IN NAVY DAY DEMONSTRATIONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 24.—William Z. Foster, Communist candidate for president on the Workers Party ticket, issued a statement here today exposing the new imperialist campaign inaugurated in the call for "Navy Day" celebrations.

Foster said, "The Communist of the United States, the Workers Party of America, in connection with the celebration of Navy Day, Oct. 27, by the American capitalists, assure the oppressed and exploited working and farming masses of the Latin-American countries that they will do everything in their power to arouse the American working class to decisive action, against the aggressive imperialist campaigns of the Wall Street clique.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

MESSRS Oneal, Feigenbaum and Solomon—(looks like a combination of shyster lawyers) the trio whose names appear as editors and managers of the New York weekly, that inherited the shame of the deceased New York Call, sounds a note of alarm in an editorial in a recent issue of their paper. The three worthies fear that the remnants of the socialist party are so excited over the LaFollette-Wheeler campaign that they will forget the socialist campaign altogether. This is not surprising, considering the difficulty that even wide awake workers experience in seeing any traces of it since Debs handed his Red Flag to LaFollette for use as a handkerchief.

THE gentlemen named above are not so much concerned over the low visibility of the socialist campaign, as of their loss of prestige, provided there are not many votes cast under the torch on November 4. Unless the socialist vote hold its own, the power of the S. P. lies to insist on important positions in the coming bourgeois party, will be dangerously low. Of course, Oneal, who undoubtedly wrote the exhortation, appears in as disinterested a role as he knows how.

"WE believe that it is necessary to say this," warns Oneal "because there appears to be a tendency in some quarters to conceal our socialist identity (in this rap at Hillquit, Mr. Oneal?) We have nothing to conceal. (You have already completely exposed yourself. All the rottenness has come to the surface). We are proud of our history. (So are William J. Burns and Harry Daugherty) Moreover our contribution to the organization of a political federation like the British Labor Party depends in part upon our socialist vote." Precisely. The ability of the Hillquits, Oneals and Bergers to secure prominent positions among the Lord Haldanes, Viscount Olivers, Sirs and Dukes of the LaFollette party, depends on how many votes they can throw on "Bob's" auction block and say: "How much for the lot?"

THE socialist party does not believe in boring from within the trade union movement, except to land in official positions where there is a payroll job, but the aged stepfather of perverted socialism, Karl Kautsky, believes in boring from within the League of Nations. He is loud in his praise of the Dawes Plan and believes that the League of Nations will prevent war. He condemns the Communists for stirring up the people of the Orient against the capitalists (Continued on Page 2.)

SOURCE OF SPOLANSKY'S FAKE RED EXPOSURES WILL BE SHOWN

Nothing is too rotten for the modern labor-baiting flim business. Evidence that Spolansky's lying "anti-red" stories in the Chicago Daily News have not hurt him with the forces of the detective underworld, is contained in evidence which has reached the Labor Defense Council that Spolansky has secured a new job.

About a week ago he was offered and accepted the position of manager of the "radical" department of the Burns agency. The government knowingly makes use of men like Burns and Burns knowingly makes use of men like Spolansky. Obviously, Spolansky has not been hired because of his knowledge of the revolutionary working class movement.

His articles in the Daily News show that his knowledge is nil. He has been hired because he is an unprincipled "red"-baiter and an experienced, if somewhat crude, frame-up man. On what sort of information

FIFTH FINNISH LOCAL OF WORKERS PARTY PUTS ACROSS OUR MOVIE SHOW

The influence of the publicity in the Finnish party press and the backing of Finnish organization units is shown in the recent booking of the fifth date for "The Fifth Year" in small-town picture houses. Kettle River, Minn. is the latest addition to the family of "Fifth Year" shows, others having been Sebeka and Lawler, Minn., and Hancock and Rock, Mich. The latter has contracted to take every picture program by our organization, and will run a "Red Labor Movie Night" once a month. Its second program will consist of "Beauty and the Bolshevik" on Nov. 2. The same picture shows in Hancock, Mich., Oct. 30, 31 and in Superior, Wis., on Nov. 5.

REPUBLICANS IN MONEY DRIVE ON NEGRO DENTIST

Received Check of $300 "To His Surprise"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Dr. David A. Ferguson, a Negro dentist of Richmond, Va., republican bolter this afternoon startled the Borah committee by exhibiting a certified check for $300 from Joseph Crupper of Alexandria, Va., republican politician and federal collector of customs.

Ferguson said the check was mailed him without explanation after he wrote Crupper declaring he would not support the republicans because he regarded C. Bascom Slemp's appointment as secretary to the president as a slap in the face to Virginia colored voters.

"Did this check come to your order?" Untermyer asked.
"No, to my surprise," said Ferguson. Additional information concerning the solicitation of republican campaign funds in Pennsylvania was sought this afternoon by Senator William E. Borah's investigating committee.

W. W. Atterbury, vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad, was the first witness.

Before Atterbury took the stand, Senator Caraway, democrat of Arkansas, said he wanted to subpoena those who were in charge of the straw vote poll being taken by the Literary Digest.

Work in Secret.

"Sensational testimony which might hurt the republican party," was promised to the committee by Samuel Untermyer, who said he had two witnesses here from Chicago to testify. He wanted to put the witnesses on in executive session. Senator Borah promised an executive session.

Atterbury said he was a member of the campaign fund committee of the Union League Club of Philadelphia, but that he had made no collections.

Find Its Crime to Publish Tax List After It's All Over

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Frank K. Bowers, collector of internal revenue here, today said he had received a telegram from Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair at Washington declaring it to be a violation of the law to make duplicates of the list of income taxpayers or to publish them. Such violations, the telegram said, according to Collector Bowers, were punishable by a fine of $1,000 or a year in prison or both.

Newspapermen who presented a list of names of prominent persons whose incomes they wished to ascertain, were prohibited from examining the lists.

I. W. W. MEMBER STAGES QUEER ATTACK ON C. I.

Rumbaugh's Explanation Confuses Delegates

For some unfathomable reason, discussion of the Communist International and of revolutionary political parties came upon the floor of the I. W. W. convention thru statements made, unsupported by evidence, that Workers Party members had tried to have the I. W. W. as an organization affiliate with the Communist International.

This is, of course, not the fact. The only organization the I. W. W. has been asked to affiliate with, is the Red International of Labor Unions, which is separate and distinct from the Communist International.

Apparently forgetting that the Communist International is a political body that does not permit and has not asked the affiliation of industrial organizations such as the I. W. W., Hendrickson made a rather extraordinary and confused attack upon Workers Party officers. The general tenor of his talk was that the Workers Party, according to him, wanted to have the I. W. W. affiliate to the Communist International of political parties.

Rumbaugh Creates Confusion.

Rumbaugh followed this up by moving the insertion in the constitution of a clause preventing officers of any political parties from ever belonging to the I. W. W. Evidently delegate Rumbaugh, who represents the building construction workers, is much worried at the natural connection and mutual membership of revolutionary workers in a Communist Party and the I. W. W., than he is over the numerous connections the I. W. W. has with capitalist political parties. The motion carried.

How Can an I. W. W. Run for Office?

One of the members of Rumbaugh's Building Construction Union is, indeed, running for congress, but not on a revolutionary ticket, in the state of Washington, while numerous members of the I. W. W. go about attacking the Workers Party but wearing LaFollette buttons and one very prominent I. W. W. member boasts of a $75 a week job from LaFollette. Nor was mentioned made of the I. W. W. member who is a candidate for governor of Washington, and is publicly supported by a subordinate part of the I. W. W.

However, Rumbaugh was not alone in this confusion, delegate Hendrickson giving the lead. "An officer of the Workers Party recently caused all

CANNON SPEAKS AT THE BROOKLYN LABOR LYCEUM MONDAY 27TH

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A special campaign rally will be held at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum at 949 Willoughby Ave., on Oct. 27. This will be one of the best meetings held in Brooklyn and will probably be the only chance of hearing Comrade Cannon, our candidate for governor, in this section of Brooklyn. In addition to Cannon, the following speakers will also address the meeting: Ludwig Lore, candidate for congress in Manhattan; Moisseye J. Olgin, candidate for senate; Paul Scherer, candidate for assembly in the 6th district, Brooklyn; Samuel Nesin, candidate in the 14th district, Brooklyn; Sam Liptzin of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, and many other speakers in English and Jewish. See to it that you are present at this meeting and bring your friends along to hear the message of the Communist candidate for governor and others bring the message of Communism to the workers of Brooklyn.

Remember: Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, 949 Willoughby Ave.

Remember: Monday evening, October 27.

Watch the press for further announcements of Cannon meetings which will be held in the various sections of the city.

WORKERS PARTY FIGHT AGAINST CAPITALIST PARTIES EXPOSES ELECTION FRAUD OF RULING CLASS

In a telegram of greeting to the Workers (Communist) Party of America, Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, hails the election campaign now being conducted by the American Communists against the parties of capitalism as a political act and a courageous act.

Zinoviev points out that in addition to the double fraud perpetrated on the workers by the capitalists in the past, in the form of two capitalist parties, they have now a triple fraud in the third capitalist party, led by the most shrewd betrayers of the workers.

The message declares that the participation of the Workers Party in this election campaign is a "courageous act" and a "political act" and hails the Party and its candidate William Z. Foster as the leaders of the revolutionary workers of America. The telegram reads:

To the Workers Party: Dear Comrades, in the name of the Communist International we greet your independent fight against the power and the election machine of capitalism in America. It cannot be expected that the politically backward and unawakened majority of the working class of the United States can be aroused and won over by your party already during this year's election campaign. That requires more time and many more fights.

On this occasion, deceit and bribery will once again attract the necessary number of votes for an agent of the capitalist magnates, but the first militant appeal of Communism in the United States was enough to shake the old capitalist election fraud, the old double fraud had to be turned into a triple fraud by the introduction of a third party.

The leadership of this last reserve of the capitalist election machine is made up of the shrewdest betrayers of the working class in America. They no doubt know better than the vote catchers of the republican and democratic parties how to deceive the unawakened masses of workers and farmers. That is what they are there for. But this time the Workers Party will do its utmost to herald the truth about the proletarian revolutionary class struggle to the workers and farmers.

For the first time in the history of the United States a party of the revolutionary proletariat has put forward its own candidate in the presidential elections. Comrades, this is a political act, a courageous act of the vanguard of Communism in America. We are convinced that this struggle of yours will not be without its lasting effects.

Hail the fight of the Workers Party.

Hail Comrade William Z. Foster, candidate of the Workers Party.

Long live the Communist International.

The Executive Committee of the Communist International.

(Signed) G. Zinoviev.

Won't Hurt Fur Workers.

CLEVELAND COMRADES BE AT PUBLIC SQUARE AT 3 THIS AFTERNOON

C. E. Ruthenberg, national secretary of the Workers Party and candidate for congress from the 20th Ohio district, will be the principal speaker at a tremendous campaign rally and demonstration at the Public Square at 3 p. m. today.

Every member of the party in Cleveland must be present at this meeting. Sunday, Oct. 26, Comrade Ruthenberg will speak at a mass meeting at Jaitte's Hall, 6006 St. Clair Ave., Cleveland.

UNION WORKERS AID COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN IN N.Y.

Needle Trades Arrange Big Meetings for Party

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The needle trades workers of this city, aroused by the betrayal of their officials in endorsing LaFollette, have taken matters into their own hands and are staging one of the most spectacular and effective drives for the Workers Party candidates throughout the city, ever carried on in this city.

Won't Have LaFollette.

Members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union have organized a campaign committee and are holding a series of three and four meetings each night in the various congressional districts for the Workers Party candidates. The members refuse to have anything to do with the LaFollette campaign and are backing the Workers Party ticket as the only revolutionary ticket in the field.

Distribute Special Literature.

They are using as speakers their most active members and are distributing special literature which they have printed. They had a very successful meeting on Thursday night at Stone and Pitkin Aves., Brownsville, Brooklyn.

Saturday night Harlem will see the main big rally at 110th St. and 5th Ave., where many speakers will address the meeting and literature will be distributed. There will also be big meetings Tuesday, Oct. 28, at Prospect and Longwood Aves., Bronx, New York; Thursday, Oct. 30, at Grand Street Extension, Brooklyn, and Saturday, Nov. 1, at Rutgers Square.

Furriers Back Communism.

The furriers of New York City are also lining up for the Workers Party ticket and have organized a special Fur Workers' Campaign Committee for the Workers Party candidates in New York City. They have hired a number of trucks and have three platforms and will hold a series of five meetings in the various sections of the city.

The following is a schedule of the main meetings that the Furriers will hold:

Oct. 25, Longwood and Prospect Aves., Bronx; Oct. 27, 110th St. and 5th Ave., Harlem; Oct. 28, Stone and Pitkin Aves., Brownsville; Oct. 29, 10th St. and 2nd Ave.; Oct. 30, Rutgers Square; Oct. 31, 110th St. and 5th Ave., Harlem; Nov. 1, Stone and Pitkin Aves., Brownsville.

Cloakmakers Assist in Campaign.

At a meeting held last week by active members of the Cloakmakers' Union, it was decided to assist in the campaign that the Workers Party is conducting in this city. They have hired trucks and platforms and will hold many meetings in the various congressional districts in this city. The following is a list of the main meetings that they will hold:

Oct. 27, Stone and Pitkin Aves., Brownsville; Oct. 28, 10th St. and 2nd Ave.; Oct. 29, Grand Street Extension, Brooklyn; Oct. 30, Rutgers Square.

Open Forum, Sunday Night, Lodge Room, Ashland Auditorium.

FOSTER SPEAKS TO WORKERS OF READING SHOPS

Steel and Metal Trades Workers at Meeting

By JOSEPH MANLEY. Campaign Manager, Workers Party. William Z. Foster, presidential candidate of the Workers Party, addressed the largest revolutionary gathering held in recent years in Reading, Pa., a former stronghold of the socialist party.

Reading in the home of James Maurer, president of the State Federation of Labor. Many of Maurer's friends were present at the meeting and their LaFollette enthusiasm was very much dampened when they observed the large gathering of workers who responded to the Communist address made by Foster.

A feature of the meeting, which moved the audience deeply, was the appearance on the platform of Jacob Dolla, formerly sentenced to a term in the Eastern Penitentiary because of his activity in the 1919 steel campaign. Dolla made a stirring appeal. He was roundly applauded when he declared: "When they sent me to jail, I was only a trade unionist, but when I came out I was a communist."

Workers Understand Foster To this strictly working class audience, composed mostly of railroad men from Reading shops, steel workers and metal trades workers, Foster in the language of the worker, got across the Communist message and the election program of the Workers Party. His castigation of Coolidge, Dawes, Davis, and LaFollette was none the less ruthless because of its touch of humor.

Speaking of LaFollette, Foster pointed out that the Wisconsin senator instead of attacking and destroying the force of capitalism's power, was attempting to patch it up. He derided the LaFollette plank advocating a referendum on war, and stated that: "This protector of capitalism is chasing a will of the wisp."

Foster Attacks Navy Day Foster dealt at some length with the question of imperialism, centering his attack upon the latest scheme of American imperialists to celebrate October 27 as Navy Day. Foster declared: "The meaning of the Navy Day is precisely the same as that of Defense Day. Both are steps by the employers to organize powerful armies and naval armadas with which they are to crush all opposition at home and abroad. The fact that we have special days set aside for the militarist and navalist propaganda shows clearly that our ruling class is beginning another campaign of preparedness."

New Wars Looming "We have troops in six South and Central American countries today, protecting the investments of the capitalists. War with Japan is looming, because of the struggle by the American capitalists and Japan, for control of the Pacific." He declared: "Nothing can end capitalist war but a social revolution, the dictatorship of the proletariat, and the organization of soviets."

The League should not be judged by what it is today but by what it can be made in the future, he says. If Karl Kautsky will be judged by what he is today and not what he was in the past, his place in history will be so low that Mussolini will shine like a star in comparison.

THE Workers Monthly is almost here. As the typewriter is clicking off these lines, the new magazine is coming off the press. You will like the cover, tho everybody may not know what it all about. This does not mean that it is not an artistic design. That is the trouble. Artists take a keen delight in puzzling, the unartistic section of the working class, which comprises about 99 per cent. The Workers Monthly is a combination of three magazines: The Labor Herald, The Liberator and the Soviet Pictorial. It is three in one.

THOSE who thought The Liberator had croaked and were painted in consequence, will dig up a quarter when the cover design runs foul of their optics. Earl Browder, editor of the Workers Monthly and Jack Johnstone Assistant Secretary of the Trade Union Educational League confessed under a sever grilling that they could interpret the cover design, but refused to go into the details on the ground that they were not artists. Jim Cannon on his way to New York to tackle Al Smith, refused to commit himself, suspecting some political plot. Others, less cautious, ventured various guesses. This is not a dirty Irish trick to get you buy the magazine: it's simply the way I feel about it. The picture is pretty.

NOW, for the inside of the picture. The less said about this the better. There is no reason why your delight should be anticipated. Suffice it to say that the place of honor will be held by G. Zinoviev who knows more about revolutions than Calvin Coolidge knows about nothing. If you are interested in the confessions of great criminals you will first read Alexander Bittelman's story, entitled "Exit Savinkoff." There are pictures, poems and editorial comment. Articles by the leading writers in the Communist movement, Dunne, Olgin, Foster, Ruthenberg, Harrison George, and many others. A class war prisoner in Leavenworth writes: "We who enjoyed the Liberator, Labor Herald and Pictorial are anxiously awaiting The Workers Monthly." That comrade will receive The Workers Monthly. The Monthly has a very warm spot in its heart for the rebels of whatever workingclass organization, who are in the battle against capitalism, and particularly for those who are in the capitalist dungeons.

EVERY class-conscious worker will want to have the first issue of The Workers Monthly. It will be something to treasure. But we can assure our readers that the first issue will make them long for the next. Therefore, if it has not occurred to you before, subscribe and don't depend too much on newsstands. The manager informs me that only enough copies to fill the orders received and to cover the subscription list will be printed. Therefore send in your subscription immediately to The Workers Monthly, 1113 West Washington Blvd., Chicago. Send along a Two Dollar bill to keep it company.

ONE of the most interesting places in Chicago to spend a Sunday evening is at the open forum of the Workers Party, in the Ashland Auditorium. Harrison George, whose articles in THE DAILY WORKER, the Labor Herald and other Communist publications, stamp him as the kind of a person who would make an audience comfortable waiting for the main speaker, is master of ceremonies. Comrade Ruthenberg opened the forum last Sunday, and J. Louis Engdahl, editor of THE DAILY WORKER is scheduled to speak next Sunday evening. The time is eight o'clock. Admission is twenty five cents.

Bazaar Committee Calls for Help

The Chicago committee in charge of the bazaar for the benefit of the DAILY WORKER and Labor Defense has issued a call to all Workers Party comrades, branches and units and sympathetic organizations to speed up and intensify the work of getting donations, selling tickets and generally preparing for the affair. They point out that only four weeks remain, as the bazaar is to begin on Nov. 26.

The bazaar workers' conference, composed of delegates from branches, etc., is to meet Saturday, Oct. 25, at 3:30 in the afternoon, at 722 Blue Island Ave.

KLAN JOINS WAR ON SILK STRIKERS OF PATERSON, N.J.

Nightshirts Join Mayor Against Workers

(By The Federated Press) PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 24.—The Ku Klux Klan of Passaic county, New Jersey, has declared itself on the strike of silk workers which is in its third month in Paterson. The Klan announces support of Mayor McLean in his efforts to have noncitizen strikers deported and blames the strike "that paralyzes the silk industry, one of the industrial cornerstones upon which rests the prosperity of our city" on foreign-born workers.

Peddle Some Old Bunk. The Klan charges that "foreign agitators who are not American citizens, who are in this country solely thru the sufferance of our people and who in most instances have no intention of becoming American citizens" maintain the strike.

"Preservation of the constitutional rights of free speech to the end that it shall remain a matter of liberty and not of license to spread propaganda for the overthrow of orderly constitutional government and the establishment of bolshevism and a state of chaos or anarchy" is claimed as one of the "great principles of our noble order" in the preamble of the Klan resolution against the strikers.

Hits Klan Charges. Associated Silk Workers' Union officers, in charge of the strike, say the Klan charges are ridiculous and at variance with the facts.

I. W. W. Member Stages Very Queer Attack on the C. I.

(Continued from page 1) kinds of disruption in our organization," said Rumbaugh in his speech. He did not say that the Communists love capitalist judges, and he gave no names or substantiation.

Griffith Is Subdued. James Griffith, who has been fired from the G. E. B. by Rowan, and suspended by the convention, is now very subdued. Altho he was the first to sign the original injunction, the convention has tamed him. Griffith has taken his books to the I. W. W. headquarters at 1001 West Madison St., for auditing by the convention.

The convention ruled that at the expiration of his final term, of office no official of the I. W. W. general administration shall be allowed to work in the offices without a year's work in industry.

The Proceedings Drag. The convention of the Industrial Workers of the World dragged along yesterday, again postponing investigation of the controversy in order to await the outcome of court proceedings, in the injunction brought by the Rowan-Bowerman group. Meanwhile Master-in-Chancery Fred Bernstein did not attend the hearing scheduled for yesterday, and no future date has been set for it, according to William Cunnea, attorney for the Doyle-Fisher group.

The convention has several times postponed action on the controversy between the two groups because of the impending court action, and the injunction hearing has been twice postponed during the sessions of the convention so far.

Fred Morris, making a report as suspended assistant secretary-treasurer, declared he had carried on no work in that capacity except to indorse checks. He said he was a "rubber stamp" or "pen and ink" officer. A telegram was received from the Portland branch of Industrial Union 510, indorsing the convention and indorsing the statement sent out to the membership by the convention last week.

Discussion of reorganization of the General Defense was in progress when the convention adjourned at noon.

Hillquit and Berger in Political Circus Stunt Have Very Hard Going

By J. LOUIS ENGDALH.

TODAY, in two states, the socialists in the political arena are performing the circus stunt of riding two horses. It is an interesting and spectacular sight. It is more hair-raising than anything ever provided by Barnum and Bailey, or the Ringling Brothers.

The same feat in this year's presidential struggle might be attempted by socialists in other states, if the socialist organization extended beyond the confines of New York and Wisconsin. But it doesn't. So we must be content to view the antics of Morris Hillquit, in New York; Victor L. Berger, in Wisconsin.

In the real circus the rider in the two-horse stunt has some chance of retaining his mounts. The horses are trained to do what is expected of them. They have a circular course they must follow. Everything is prepared before hand so that the act will be a howling success.

But how different in New York State. There Hillquit is astride the LaFollette presidential candidacy on the one hand, and the Thomas socialist gubernatorial candidacy on the other. But practically the whole of the LaFollette following, with the exception of a few rank and file socialists, is out for "Al" Smith, the Tammany Hall candidate, not Thomas, for governor.

Thomas is a good steed. He wants to carry his load. But he finds that he must fight the Tammany Hall-Compers labor politicians, who have been very successful in luring away the LaFollette wing of Hillquit's little political stunt. The New York socialists are very angry that Communists should charge that deals have been made with the Tammany Hall-Compers outfit for the support of the Smith candidacy against that of Thomas.

The daily service of the Federated Press from New York City has just arrived and reports that a list of '68 New York labor officials' have signed an appeal for the support of Thomas as against "Governor Smith, the hope of the Wall Street lawyer, John W. Davis." The report gives, as heading the list of names, the signatures of a few labor officials of lesser importance, practically unknown.

We scan the list in vain for the names of Morris Sigman, head of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; Morris Kaufmann, of the Furriers' Union; Sidney Hillman, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and others who have come out for LaFollette. The only inference is that these so-called "socialists" are also out for Al Smith. Election Day and after will find Hillquit riding his lone steed, Thomas, with his following exterminated.

Then there is Berger in Wisconsin. He is also trying to ride LaFollette for the presidency and his own candidacy for governor. In Wisconsin the endorsement of Governor Blaine, for re-election by LaFollette, is open and energetic. LaFollette backed Blaine in the primaries against Berger's attack.

There can be no doubt, however, that the officialdom of labor, in Wisconsin, as in New York, will cut the traces that tie them to the Berger political combination, and give their support to Blaine, the LaFollette man, the "sure winner."

Rich fields of timothy and clover, warmed by the sun of political victory, is the tempting attraction that makes the little circus stunt of Hillquit and Berger impossible of success.

What is left of the socialist party in these two states will be stripped, on the side of LaFollette, Al Smith and Blaine, of all elements ready to continue their present treason against the interests of the working class.

New masses of workers and poor farmers, who come out of this political contest, with their vision cleared, having learned the lesson that they have gone wrong temporarily in their struggle for power, must turn to the Communist movement.

They will realize that political power cannot be achieved thru a straddle, with one foot planted in the capitalist political organizations and the other suspended in midair. Labor must base its struggle for victory on Communist principles. It is learning that lesson thru dearly bought experience in this presidential campaign.

THE SEVENTH VICTORIOUS YEAR

Raise High the Banner

The Red Flag must fly its highest this SEVENTH anniversary of the RUSSIAN REVOLUTION. Every mass demonstration held must be BIGGER and BETTER than all that have gone before.

And here is where you come in—you, the party member.

You come in—to help! Truth is you ARE IN TO HELP.

Rather, you're in the revolutionary movement, HELPING, or you're not in it at all.

You have heard of the lazy man who bought a decrepit Ford, so that while out taking the air, he would not have to knock the ashes off his cigar!

But you're not he—are you? And not being he you'll go to your local secretary at once and say—

"WHAT CAN I DO TO MAKE OUR CELEBRATION OF THE SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION THE TALK OF THE TOWN?"

On a Labor Faker's Trail

FARRINGTON IS FORCED TO GIVE AN ACCOUNTING

Had Peabody Boss on Payroll in 1922

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY. (Article Twelve.)

Frank Farrington crushed the 1919 strike but it cost the district treasury $27,000 to do so, and of this sum he failed to give an itemized account as required by the district constitution, section 13, article 8, outlining the duties of the secretary treasurer, which reads: "He shall submit to the locals, quarterly, an itemized statement of salary and expenses of each officer and employe of the district organization in separate items, and detailing the receipts and disbursements of all money belonging to the district union."

This strike and the methods he used to crush it rose up continually to plague Farrington like Banquo's ghost to Macbeth. The president stated that he had never seen a bill for any part of the $27,000 yet every dollar of that amount if spent had to be legalized by his signature before such a check could be cashed.

Locals Appealed
Nesbit refused to give an itemized statement claiming that the executive board of the district ordered him not to do so. Several locals appealed to the International Executive Board against this decision and the case came up in Indianapolis on Dec. 3, and 4, 1920.

When the so-called outlaw strike was practically at the end President Farrington made the following statement: "They say a hundred men are on the payroll of the district organization in Springfield. A hundred men. Never did a story have less basis for a statement than that one. Not a single man has been placed on the payroll of the district organization in that district—I repeat that not a single man has been placed on the payroll of the district since the trouble began."

The locals which insisted on having an itemized report did not know but this statement may be true, so they were more anxious than ever to find where the mysterious $27,000 went to.

Committee Appointed
The International Executive Board appointed a committee to conduct an investigation into the expenditure of the money. The committee after holding conferences with all concerned in the matter made the following report:

"Mr. John L. Lewis, President, United Mine Workers of America, Indianapolis, Ind.

"Dear Sir and Brother:
The Committee selected by the International Executive Board to conduct an investigation and render decision concerning appeal of aforesaid local union, in which it accuses Secretary Walter Nesbit of improperly accounting for approximately $27,000 of the district organization funds expended during a so-called unauthorized strike which occurred the summer of 1919, desires to submit the following report:

"We proceeded to Illinois as per instruction, conferred with Secretary Nesbit most extensively, relative to the matter and afterwards sought to arrange a meeting of all interested parties at Majestic Hotel, Sept. 15, which matured and was represented by numerous representatives of the local union together with representatives of various other local unions who had also registered complaint in this connection.

"The appellant local union alleges that the secretary in his quarterly reports seeks to account for expenditure herebefore named in lump sum, under title "Wild-Cat-Strike" instead of itemizing same, basing their contention on Section 13, Article 8, District No. 12, Constitution (section quoted already given in opening of this article)

Paid From District Funds
"The secretary makes no denial of this charge, but in defense of his action he states that an insurgent organization became very active in Illinois during the summer of 1919, which resulted in the district organization employing, temporarily, several men to prevent such insurgents from interrupting the United Mine Workers; that such special employes were paid out of the district funds and that he has in his possession receipts for same, but the district executive board authorized him to enter this appropriation in his report in the way and manner he did.

"In view of Section 13, Article 8, District Constitution hereinbefore reproduced, if it has any meaning at all, we are forced to the conclusion that the District Executive Board was in error when it took occasion to authorize Secretary Nesbit to not publish an itemized account of the expenditures over which this controversy arose. Thus the appeal of the local union is sustained and we therefore, decided that the district executive board stand reversed and the expenditures shall be itemized."

The report was signed by the committee. Farrington appealed from this decision to the International Executive Board and the case was heard on Dec. 3 and 4, 1920.

Were Not Friends
Farrington and Lewis at this time were not on friendly terms as a transcript of the case shows. They had not then reached the conclusion that it was better for them to hang together than hang separately, so Lewis was quite willing to make his then hated enemy sweat blood over the $27,000.

After listening to a reading of the appeals from the various locals, Farrington stated that he did not think it was the business of the International union to interfere in any way with the manner in which District 12, spent its funds. He charged Lewis with putting out propaganda about the matter and repeated that "not a single man has been placed on the payroll since the trouble started."

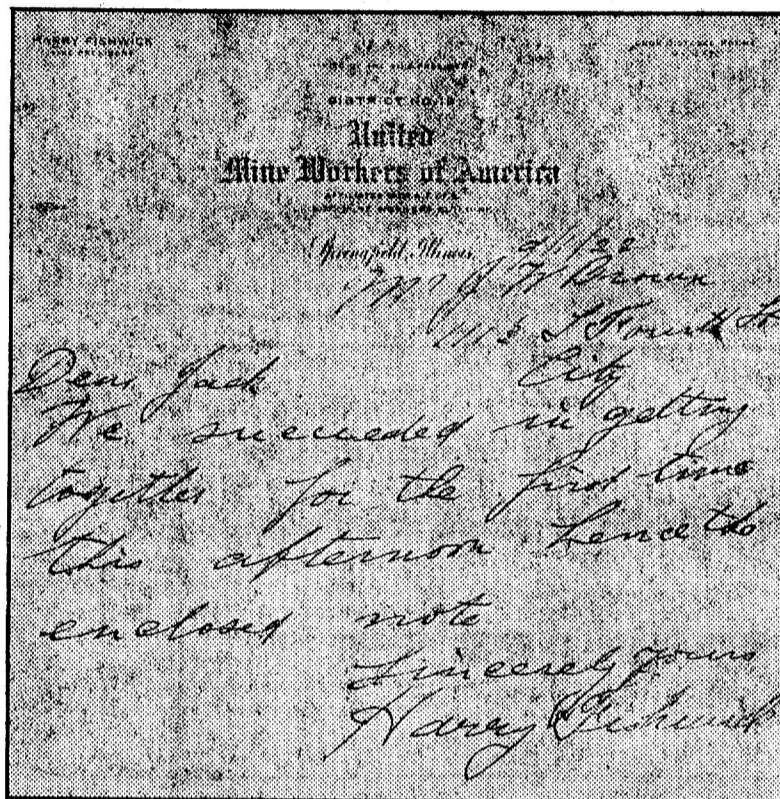

But Secretary Treasurer Nesbit, made the statement that "I think we had on the payroll at the time between four and six hundred men who were going around denying statements those other men were making and persuading men to stay at work."

It was not surprising that Farrington and his henchmen were opposed to giving an itemized account of the expenditure of the $27,000 as it was ing Farrington of the time of departure of the Collinsville committee, so that Brown, Maher and Wall, the slugging committee, could meet them. The miners were beaten in front of the hotel where Farrington stayed by the three thugs. Wall and Maher are running for the jobs of legal investigators in the district election.

A letter written by Harry Fishwick, vice-president of the Illinois Miners' Union, to the notorious crook Brown, on Sept. 1, 1922, is hereby reproduced, also a note mentioned in the letter. It should be remembered that at the time this letter was written by Fishwick and addressed to Brown that the latter was a boss at the Peabody Coal company of which Farrington is reported to be a member.

Fishwick's Letter to Peabody Boss

Farrington Note to "Slugger" Jack Brown

later on learned when the miners forced, Lewis to compel Farrington give an itemized report of the $27,000 that $320.50 was paid to one Jack Brown a boss for the Peabody Coal company at Andrews, Illinois, and that this money was paid to him for slugging the Collinsville delegates on the streets of Springfield.

This man Brown is still a Peabody boss at Kincaid, and is still lined up with Farrington, or at least was in 1922 as we shall show. We have already published the telegram notify-

The day on which this letter was written coincides with the time district officers were nominated, elections taking place every two years. The note came due six months from the date or just about the time Farrington announced the results of the last district election.

The rank and file of the miners of Illinois believe that Farrington has an invisible payroll, with bosses, gamblers and other criminals on it. These fellows must be paid without a record of such transactions appearing in the official publications of the union. Therefore the best and safest way to pay them is from the jackpot provided by padded payrolls.

Had Reason to Fear.

In view of the relationship between Farrington and the underworld on one side, and the bosses and Farrington on the other, it is not surprising that he should loathe the radicals who are out to rid the union of his crooked gang of looters. It is not surprising that he should hate the Communists and The DAILY WORKER for exposing his slimy trail in the Illinois Mine Workers' Union. The motley crew of payroll patriots who surround Farrington know that once the radicals get control of the miners' union, their days of luxury and ease, lounging around small town hotels, will be at an end and that their opportunity to share in the prosperity of the coal operators at the expense of the coal diggers will come to an end.

Farrington's henchmen are now skulking thru the Illinois coal fields denouncing The DAILY WORKER. They have very good reason for this hate. The DAILY WORKER will not be deterred from exposing the labor fakers and Farrington is only one of the thousands with which this country is infested, but it must be admitted that while he has never risen to the heights that his once hated foe John L. Lewis has risen to (or sunk perhaps) as one of Coolidge's right hand labor fakers, Farrington is a distinguished member of the labor leutenants of capitalism. Sunk Low Enough In politics Farrington has never gone beyond being a lackey for Len Small, one of the cheapest political crooks in the nation. For this dirty work, Farrington gets well paid. Len and Frank are birds of a feather; Farrington looting and wrecking the miners union while Len Small and his gang of burglars rob the state treasury.

After a hard fight Farrington was obliged to give an itemized account of the $27,000. Many facts were brought out at the Indianapolis trial which go to prove what kind of cattle were used to smash the 1919 strike.

It was shown that an embezzler named Lee, a member of the union, was appointed deputy sheriff by the sheriff of Sangamon County at the request of Farrington. Others who had stolen money from the union were beneficiaries of the $27,000 fund and roamed around the streets of Springfield unmolested. One of the district board members, a man by the name of Hutton, and one of Farrington's

PARALYSIS CURE POSSIBLE SAYS NOTED SURGEON

Last Year Brod Many Successful Results

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A simple operation, discovered recently by two Australian surgeons, which will restore to normal functioning the limbs of sufferers from rigid paralysis, was announced here this afternoon by Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., Dr. Mayo is attending the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons here.

The operation, Dr. Mayo said, had been tried several times within the last year with success. Other doctors attending the congress predicted that, as a result of Dr. Mayo's description and his endorsement of the operation, it soon would come into general use in the United States.

Dr. Mayo gave warning that the operation was dangerous in the hands of inexperienced men and said that paralytics should consult none but surgeons expert in its workings. Mistakes, he said were apt to prove fatal.

LET'S MAKE A DATE!

If you were there last Sunday night, you'll want to come next Sunday night, too. If you weren't there, and don't know what you missed, you will come Sunday after next, if you come next Sunday night. This sounds like a habit, and it is. It is the excellent habit of coming to the OPEN FORUM at the lodge room (not the big hall) of the Ashland Auditorium, every Sunday night.

Next Sunday night, Oct. 26, at 8 p. m., the editor of the DAILY WORKER, J. Louis Engdahl, will speak on "Spolansky and the Reds" — which sounds interesting, don't it? Take the Metropolitan "L" to Marshfield station or the surface lines to Ashland and Van Buren. Enter hall from Van Buren street. Every Sunday night, don't forget.

A Stupid Flunkey

Why the capitalists retain some of their hirings whose stupidity is so painful that it becomes the butt of ridicule is somewhat of a puzzle. Of course they hang on to Coolidge, but "Silent Cal" at least knows enough to keep his mouth shut, except for an occasional speech on the Bible which is a safe field to cover. The less one knows about anything in particular the more he is sure to know about religion.

There are capitalist flunkies who are abysmally ignorant, so much so that they insist on everybody knowing it. One is T. V. O'Connor, formerly official head of the International Longshoremen's Union and still the real boss of that organization. O'Connor is now chairman of the United States shipping board and a lusty ballyhooper for Coolidge.

While speaking in Buffalo recently, O'Connor made the astounding statement that Soviet Russia had sent a big sum of money into the United States via Mexico in order to bring about the election of LaFollette. This yarn was so fantastic that even the considerable moron population was not deceived by it. They had more respect for the political judgment of the Soviet leaders than to think they would put their money behind a capitalist politician like LaFollette.

O'Connor was subpoenaed by the Borah investigating committee in Washington to prove his assertion. He blandly admitted that he did not have the slightest grounds for making such a statement except that he believed it himself. Since William J. Burns was booted out of the department of justice, T. V. O'Connor stands head and shoulders among his co-workers in the capitalist government as the biggest ass in the paddock. He is also one of the biggest crooks that ever "worked" the trade union movement.

A Hubbub in the Hub

The staid and dignified, even the crooked, city of Boston, is all set up over a tempest that is raging in the Boston symphony orchestra, because of the use of "Leningrad" in the books of that organization.

The conductor's name being Koussevitsky, suspicion immediately centered on him and without waiting to ask Jacob Spolansky whether he was a member of the "Knights of the Red Star" or not, the Commercial Bulletin, owned by Courtenay Guild, a name suggestive of the Mayflower, opened fire on Koussevitsky, suggesting that he was an agent of Trotsky.

Koussevitsky, however, soon routed any suspicion that his artistic and musical soul had any love for the Soviet government. Did he not call one million dollars in American money his own in the glorious days of the czar, when Leningrad was known as St. Petersburg?—And did he not lose that cold million when the Bolsheviks took over the country in the name of the workers and peasants? This confession established Koussevitsky immediately in the affections of the wrinkled aristocracy of the Back Bay, and the newspapers opened fire on Leningrad.

The Boston Herald, owned by the United Shoe Machinery company, exonerated Koussevitsky, but deplored that the war on Leningrad by the supporters of the Boston symphony orchestra was rather fruitless, as Leningrad was a fact and St. Petersburg and Petrograd were not, any more than the czar and his regime. The worthy Herald, in true Puritan style, regretted this, but hoped for better days.

The venerable Transcript dealt historically with Leningrad and after cursing Lenin, in true New England fashion, suggested that out of consideration for the million dollar feelings of Koussevitsky, those responsible for drawing up the program should leave Leningrad out. The Transcript winds up with: "In the meantime it is open to all of us to look forward with a sigh to the time when Russia shall return to her senses and to a respect for the historical proprieties..."

The Transcript is hopeful, even more so than Boris Savinkoff who for years fed the fires of the Transcript's optimism, only to finally surrender, broken and hopeless. Soviet Russia is so strong today after the worst the murderous capitalists could do, that every important government in the world has recognized or is about to recognize the Workers' Republic except that of the United States.

The million dollar soul of the symphony conductor must make the best of the unavoidable.

Nov. 7th Special Issues

The DAILY WORKER plans to issue two special editions this year in honor of the seventh anniversary of the Russian Revolution, the greatest event in all human history.

When the workers of Russia struck the shackles of czarism and capitalist rule off their limbs in November, 1917, even the most sanguine did not dream that seven years afterwards would see the Soviet Republic, firmly established, rapidly forging ahead on the road to prosperity for its producers and in a position to make the mighty capitalist nations of the world recognize her power.

Yet such is the case. Today Soviet Russia is a power to be reckoned with. Her influence throughout the world is increasing and the toiling masses of mankind are looking more and more to the Workers' Republic of Russia for inspiration and help in their struggle to free themselves from the yoke of wage slavery.

The best writers in the international Communist movement will contribute to the special anniversary Soviet numbers of THE DAILY WORKER. Our readers should now send in their orders for extra bundles.

Using the Party Registration

By JAMES P. CANNON, Assistant Executive Secretary, Workers Party.

THE important task of registering the entire party membership is now nearly complete and the great majority of the party branches have sent in their returns. A large number of branches however are still behind in their duty, and this is causing some difficulty. The complete utilization of the registration requires that the whole party be registered and to this end it is a first duty of every party branch to see that its registration is completed and sent in the National, District and Local offices without delay. There can be no let-up in the campaign until every single branch in the party has given an account of itself.

The registration cards already filled out give us a fairly good bird's-eye view of the party. We can already get a fairly good line on its class composition, trade union affiliations, etc. This information is a prerequisite to the successful carrying out of a number of necessary activities.

How to Use the Industrial Registration

The local and district offices should utilize the registration material to the fullest extent without delay for the carrying out of three cardinal tasks.

1. Classify the registration cards first of all according to industries and shops. Wherever the information discloses that a number of party comrades are working in the same shop or factory they should be called together and the preliminary steps taken to organize them into a shop nucleus which is to become a basic unit of the party. The detailed organizational steps for the foundation of shop nuclei, which will make allowances for the complicated problem of the existence of so many language federations in the party, is now being worked by the C. E. C. and will finally be adopted in the near future. In the meantime the local and district organizers should take the first steps of calling the comrades together and effecting a preliminary shop nucleus organization wherever possible.

2. Do not lose sight of the fundamental importance of this activity. The 5th Congress of the Communist International makes it mandatory upon all the parties of the International to completely reorganize themselves on the basis of shop nuclei and declares that there is no such thing as a genuine Communist Party which has any other form of organization. Therefore, let us get to work at this task without delay. The information contained in the party registration affords the basis for a beginning.

Communist Trade Union Fractions. 2. A second most important work which will be greatly facilitated by a utilization of the registration is the organization of Communist nuclei in the various trade unions to which party members are affiliated. In order to accomplish this it is necessary to reorganize the registration cards according to trade unions and industries. The best method is to make general divisions according to industry with subdivisions according to the different unions in the given industry. Whenever the information discloses that several party members, or even a single member, belong to a trade union, they should be brot together and organized into a fraction for work in the union. These fractions should be connected together and arrangements made for their systematic co-operation. The party members should be familiarized with our general practical program of work in the unions and they must be given special directions to undertake the organization of a branch of the Trade Union Educational League in their union without delay. The various national trade union committees of the T. U. E. L. have worked out detailed practical programs for each trade and industry in printed form. These programs must be made familiar to our party members in the various local unions and they should set to work at once to create an agitation for them. The party must dig its root ever deeper into the trade unions and steps must be taken to enroll them in the daily life. This work can be done systematically only if our party members are organized into fractions and carry out their work according to a general plan. The trade union work of the party should and will receive a tremendous impetus if the local and district offices will utilize the priceless material gained by the industrial registration for this purpose.

Getting Party Members into Unions

The Party registration will disclose that a very large percentage of our Party members who are working in organized trades are not yet affiliated to their respective unions, their value in the Party and their efficiency in the class struggle is thereby greatly decreased. The Party will make it its aim to enroll the entire Party membership, which is eligible, in the trade unions. There can be no slackness or good-natured toleration on this point. The comrades whom the registration discloses to be unconnected with trade unions must be called together and thoroly informed as to the Party's role and task and program in the trade unions and steps must be taken to enroll them in the unions without delay. In shops and industries which are not yet organized, the industrial registration will provide a basis for the organization of local unions in many fields. The great and necessary slogan "Organize the Unorganized," will get real significance when the Communists themselves take the lead all along the line in forming new unions. If the Communists take the initiative in actually forming labor unions, it can be safely calculated that they will succeed in permeating them with their spirit and doctrines and in directing their activities into the channels of the militant class struggle.

From the matters lightly touched on above it becomes clear that the industrial registration of the Party members is of the greatest value to the Party and provides the material for the beginning of some of the most pressing and necessary tasks of the Party. Local and district organizers must therefore persist in their efforts to get 100 per cent registration, to utilize the material of the registration to the utmost and to take special care, along the line of directions already sent to them, for the safeguarding of the Party membership in the registration.

By HARRISON GEORGE.

THE French have a saying—"Voler au secours de la victoire"—meaning, "To fly to the assistance of the victors, after the victory is won." An amusing instance of this ironic situation is that of the demagogic editor of the Industrial Worker of Seattle, who, after waging a persistent war month after month to create a split in the I. W. W.—now, suddenly discovering that his injunctonite co-conspirators are losing out, rushes courageously into print in his editorial of October 22, to assert melodramatically "Disruption is silenced in the unity of the membership." And in the "Student Corner"—"Jim loves his union."

It is too bad that this sycophant is not nearer the basis of Jim Rowan's headquarters, from whence the dauntless James marshals his hosts of two lawyers and a corporal's guard of stool pigeons. Rowan's publicity department seems to have bet on the wrong horse and is now exclaiming that the dagger they came onto the stage with was not meant to stab the organization in the back, not at all and by no means, but merely to "rescue" the I. W. W. from those who from the beginning fought the injuncton and urged unity, those Communists, those "politicians."

Facts are blithely tossed aside. That for months he ran the address of the injunctonites as the proper address of the I. W. W. headquarters, that he (and presumably the Industrial Worker Committee agreed) printed the convention call for 180 West Washington, a move that J. A. Griffith confessed—and everyone knew—was deliberate call for a split, that he editorially injected all sorts of arguments into the paper to uphold the injunctonites—that he ranted against Communists as "outsiders" while swallowing the "outsider" of a capitalist judge without batting an eye—these crimes against unity in the I. W. W. are tossed aside. "Can't you take a joke?" he asks, "Don't you see I was for unity all along?"

True enuf, this gambler for a split is a little apprehensive. He discovers an unusual reason, for him, for not printing any "news story." It is that he has "no information." This slight obstacle does not, of course, prevent him writing a long editorial concerning "politicians" and the convention. He needs no facts for that, indeed they are a positive detriment. But the one fact of unity makes him disturbed. "This is no time for guess work," he observes. And aside he adds, "It looks bad for me, this unity; but maybe it's an injunctonite unity. This suspense is awful. Why don't Rowan write? I'll just write some attack on the Communists and say—"This is no time for guess work. That means nothing, and whichever side wins, I'm safe."

But fear overtakes our Sir Galahad, charging to the rescue of solidarity. "If it means unity against the injunctonites and against Rowan, if they look at my 'Students' Corner' where I speak of a clause relative to its antecedent and see "Those who are class conscious should be considered," then it's curtains for me. So I'll write a plea for magnanimity like this—"All the wild talk of punishments and expulsions egged on by interested politicians will disappear now." Whenever in doubt, attack the "politicians," such is the best effort of this amusing yet dangerous fool who is allowed to play with ink and paper.

Unions Endorse Workers Party Ticket

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 24.—Another local of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of this city, Local No. 140, has endorsed the Workers Party candidates for president and vice-president. Bakers' Union, Local No. 201, endorsed the Workers Party ticket and sent in a $15 check. A $15 check was also received from Upholsterers' Local Union No. 77. The question of endorsing Foster and Gitlow was raised in the Amalgamated local after a delegation of the LaFollette campaign committee appeared before the executive board of that local asking for the endorsement of LaFollette. The matter was referred to a general membership meeting of the local in order to give a chance to the rank and file to decide the question. The general membership meeting rejected the motion to endorse LaFollette for president. A motion made by Brother Rubin calling for the endorsement of the Workers Party ticket then carried by a big majority vote. This is the second biggest local of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of this city going on record in favor of Foster and Gitlow while the joint board rejected a proposition to endorse LaFollette.

4. The Results of the War and the Beginning of the Decay of Capitalism.

The war of 1914-18 brought about a destruction of productive forces unprecedented in history; it led to the immediate annihilation of gigantic means of production and of the best living forces of humanity; it caused an unheard of waste of energy as a result of the use of productive power for unproductive purposes.

The total disorganization of the world's traffic thus brought about, the chaos in the division of labor hitherto obtaining throughout the world, the collapse of the reciprocal and regulated modes of payment, the disturbed rates of exchange, and the unprecedented state debts, all these factors intensify still more the ruin of capitalist world economies.

The imperialistic economic system underwent essential changes, for the colonial and semi-colonial countries took advantage of the slackening of the imperialist grip to gain for themselves greater economic independence. This circumstance undermined the sources of the affluence of the mother countries, and intensified the general crisis.

All the above stated fundamental facts of the war and post-war periods are expressed in the diminution of the total income of society.

The diminution of the collective income of society led in the first place to an acuter struggle in the re-division of income, not only in the competitive struggles of the colonies with the mother countries, but in the class war of the proletariat against the bourgeoisie, in which the intermediate groups display the tendency to join the proletariat in those cases where they have particularly suffered during the war.

The post-war position of capitalism can in general be characterized as being absolutely unstable in every sphere of its existence: economic, political, social, and even on the ideological and cultural fields; for in the background of the general crisis there appear obvious signs of the decomposition of the bourgeoisie, the return to religion, to mysticism, to occultism, and so forth, which demonstrate the coming fall of bourgeois civilization.

The period of capitalist decay will not be kept in check by part restoration of its regime and in the further development of productive forces. Every fresh development of capitalism at the same time develops its contradictions, revealing the inevitability of even greater conflicts, involving even more formidable and destructive methods (e. g. chemical warfare), and menacing the further existence of human society.

5. The Breach in the Imperialist Front and the Epoch of Social Revolution.

The growing intensification of the class war, which became apparent during the war itself, led to a breach being made thru the imperialist front at its most vulnerable spot—Russia.

The November revolution of the Russian proletariat, which was able to overthrow the bourgeois regime, thanks to specially favorable fighting conditions, started a new era of international revolution, and became the first link in the chain.

The proletarian uprisings which followed the Russian revolution, and which ended in the defeat of the proletariat after a brief victory (Finland, Hungary, Bavaria), or which remained standing halfway, owing to the treachery of the social-democrats who were actively engaged against revolutionary Communism (Austria, Germany), formed stages in the general development of international revolution—stages in which the bourgeois illusions are being shattered and the forces of Communist revolution are being mobilized and consolidated.

It is just for the above reasons that the mere fact of the existence of the Soviet Union is of such significance as an organizing center of the proletarian world movement. By the mere fact of its existence the Soviet Union drives a wedge into the capitalist system, since, with a fundamentally anti-capitalist structure, it comprises one-sixth of the globe. Besides this, it represents the most powerful vanguard of the proletarian movement, for here the working class has all the means and auxiliaries of state power at its disposal.

In the course of development of international revolution, social-democracy and the trade unions under its leadership became an extraordinarily powerful counter-revolutionary force.

Not only did these abandon the interests of the workers during the war, in that they supposed their "own" imperialist governments (social patriotism and social chauvinism), but they also supported the rapacious treaties of peace (Brest-Litovsk, Versailles); they stood by the side of the generals (Noske), as an active force, when proletarian uprisings were being drowned in blood; they led an armed struggle against the first proletarian republic (Russia); they treacherously betrayed a proletariat which had already attained power (Hungary); they became members of the rapacious league of nations (Thomas); they openly took sides with the employers against the colonial slaves (the British "labor" party). The pacifist wing of the social-democrats (center) demoralized the workers by their varied pacifist illusions and anti-force propaganda, thereby providing capitalism with the best weapons in acute revolutionary situations. International social-democracy of all shades thus forms the last reserve and strongest support of bourgeois society.

Alongside social-democracy, thru which and by means of which the bourgeoisie either suppresses the workers or lulls their class vigilance, we see the emergence of fascism, another form of utilizing the discontent of the masses, and of directing this discontent into anti-revolutionary channels. Both these methods, which are unusual for "normal" capitalism and which betoken a general crisis of capitalism, at the same time check the onward march of the revolution.

The abandonment of imperialist illusions in the ranks of the working class has freed the proletariat from the influence of social-democracy and fascism, and forms the soil for the development of the Communist parties which are uniting in the course of the struggle in a mighty revolutionary association of revolutionary workers: the Communist International. From out of the chaos and the misery, out of the falling debris of decaying capitalism, out of the mad and monstrous new wars in which the bourgeoisie is ready to destroy millions of workers and the last remnants of its own culture—out of all this, the Communist International will lead humanity on to a new path, from the depths of death and destruction to Communism.

II. The Emancipation of the Workers and the Communist Order.

1. The Abolition of the Fundamental Contradictions of Capitalism.

The goal towards which the Communist International strives is the substitution of the capitalist order by the Communist order of society. The Communist order of society, prepared by the whole course of evolution, is the sole means of escape for humanity; it alone is capable of removing the fundamental contradictions of the capitalist system which lead to inevitable and unavoidable ruin.

The Communist order of society does away with the division of society into classes, that is, it destroys social anarchy. The opposing classes are replaced by members of one great equal working community. The gigantic unproductive expenditure caused by human beings combating one another, in a society composed of classes, now disappears, and the energy thus released is employed in the struggle with nature, and for the progress and development of the power and dominance of mankind.

By the abolition of the private ownership of the means of production, and the passing of these means into common property, the Communist society replaces the unregulated force of competition and the blind course of production by a rational organization and an appropriate plan. The abolition of anarchy in production and of competition implies the simultaneous disappearance of war. The colossal waste of productive energy, and the spasmodic development of society will here be substituted by a systematic utilization of all sources of help, and by a harmonious, painless, economic evolution.

The abolition of private property does away with the exploitation of one human being by another. The work done is no longer done for others; differences between rich and poor disappear.

The abolition of classes will be accompanied by the abolition of all monopoly of education. All education, including the very highest, becomes general. Such a state of affairs in the first place renders a dominance of any group of persons over another group impossible, and in the second place, offers a wide field of selection and sifting of talent and genius in every branch of culture.

Here, there are no barriers of a social nature placed in the way of productive forces. In Communist society there is no private property, no profit-making for personal benefit, no artificially maintained ignorance among the masses, nor poverty which retards technical progress in capitalist society, nor gigantic unproductive expenditure.

The uniting of technique and science, the scientific organization of production, statistics, social book-keeping, the utilization of every economic possibility (correct apportioning of enterprises, concentration, the best possible productivity of labor) set human energy free for the mighty task of developing science and art.

The development of productive forces is conducive to the improvement of the general wellbeing of the whole of humanity in the new society and consequently creates a degree of culture hitherto unexampled in history.

This new culture of a humanity united for the first time, and having now abolished all limits set by intermediate state boundaries, will be founded on clear and unalloyed reciprocal relations among human beings. Hence it will bury all mysticism, religion, and superstition for all time, and give a mighty forward impetus to the development of the all-conquering human mind.

Program of the Communist International

DRAFT ADOPTED AT THE FIFTH WORLD CONGRESS.

INTRODUCTION.

In the revolutionary fight against capitalist domination, the international proletariat must unite the efforts of its separate detachments and merge these detachments into one international proletarian army. The organization, which unites the fighting revolutionary proletariat, regardless of state boundaries, nationality, race, creed, sex, or occupation, is the International Workers' Association, the Communist International. The Communist International, uniting all the Communist parties and constituting in itself the militant world party of the proletariat, aims at the emancipation of labor from the yoke of capital; it openly advocates the violent overthrow of the bourgeois order by means of the Communist revolution, and thus continues the revolutionary tradition of the Communist association, and the First International founded by Marx. It entirely and unreservedly maintains the standpoint of revolutionary Marxism, which found its most complete expression in Leninism which is pure and simple Marxism of the epoch of the direct proletarian fight for the conquest of power. The Communist International is fighting on this basis for clarity in the class consciousness of the masses by placing its dialectic materialism in opposition to the teachings of the bourgeois ideology, and thereby leading the fight against any kind of bourgeois influence over the proletariat, such as religion, idealistic and non-materialist dialectic philosophy, the doctrine of harmony between capital and labor, socialistic opportunism—thereby consistently maintaining the basis of the class struggle. The Communist International formulates its entire fundamental principles, aims and fundamental methods for struggle on this basis, and in the program, which unites millions of toilers, explains the position of the oppressed under capitalist rule, and shows them the way to victory over the bourgeoisie, and to the construction of the Communist society.

I. Capitalist Wage Slavery.

1. General Characteristics of Capitalism as a System of Exploitation.

At the present time almost the whole globe is under the rule of capitalism. Only in the Soviet Union has the domination of capital been superseded.

This rule is based upon private property and the production of commodities for the market. A small group of persons is in possession of the monopoly of the means of producing these goods, and of the means of distributing them, this group is the capitalist class. This monopoly assures to this class an undivided economic domination over millions of proletarians, who possess no means of production, and who are forced to sell their labor power.

The relation of wage-labor to capitalism is the basis of bourgeois society.

The economic domination of the bourgeoisie is secured by its political rule, and by its state organization, which secures it a monopoly over arms and all other means of applying physical force.

The rule of the bourgeoisie is also secured culturally, for it possesses the monopoly of education, which is in the hands of the capitalists.

The working class, economically oppressed, subjected politically and culturally, is the wage-slave of capital.

The working class, which forms a constantly growing section of the population, thus serves as a living source of profit to the bourgeoisie, which exploits its labor.

2. Contradictions in the Development of the Capitalist System.

The hunt for profits forced the bourgeoisie to develop its productive powers continuously and increasingly, and to extend the sphere of operations of capitalist production. The fundamental contradictions of the capitalist system, however, reveal themselves at the same time with ever growing distinctness; these defects inevitably lead to the complete breakdown of the capitalist system.

Capitalist society, built upon the exploitation of an overwhelming majority of the population by an inconsiderable minority, is torn in two, and its whole history is one of conflicts between the classes.

The rule of private property imparts an anarchic character to production, and leads to blind production regulated by no conscious power. This is shown on the one hand in the severe conflicts between various competing concerns and groups of concerns, causing an enormous waste of energy; on the other hand the unregulated production—absence of proportion between its various branches, and the result of this anarchy of production—the contradiction between the increased production and the restricted consuming ability of the proletarian masses—causes periodically recurring crises, accompanied by destruction of productive forces, and mass unemployment among the proletariat.

The struggle of the capitalists for world domination leads to a special form of competition among the capitalist states, finally expressed in wars which are inevitable accompaniments of capitalism, as are crises and unemployment.

The extension of capitalist production, involving the development of productive forces, is accompanied by the decay of pre-capitalist economic forms in the competitive struggles, the decay of a part of the peasantry, by the disappearance of handicrafts, by the economic defeat of small and middle capital, and by the open plundering and merciless exploitation of the colonial countries. This process leads on the one hand to an accumulation of capital, to its concentration in the hands of a few millionaires, and is, on the other hand, accompanied by a tremendous increase in the numbers of the proletariat which, having passed thru the severe school of the capitalist system, become the deadly enemy of the bourgeoisie and its system of society.

The process of the concentration of capital, and of the extension of the capitalist system, constantly reproduces the fundamental contradictions of capitalism on an ever-increasing scale. The competition among small capitalists ceases, only to be replaced by that among big capitalists; where competition among big capitalists comes to a standstill, it widens its radius and becomes a competition between the gigantic associations of the millionaires and their states; the crises change from those of local and national character to crises extending over a number of countries, and finally to world crises; the local wars are replaced by alliances and world wars; the class war develops from isolated actions of single groups of workers, first to a national struggle, and then to an international struggle of the world proletariat against the world bourgeoisie.

The inevitable aggravation of class antagonism is accompanied by a simultaneous consolidation of the antagonistic class forces. On the one hand, the capitalist bourgeoisie forms its associations, secures its state power, and organizes its armed forces; on the other hand, the working class, brought into one camp and united by the mechanism of capitalist production itself, creates its own powerful organizations, which are sooner or later transformed into weapons of the proletariat in the war against the bourgeoisie and its main support—state power.

The natural course of capitalist evolution thus inevitably sharpens the contradictions of the capitalist system, and finally renders the existence of the system itself impossible. The living force which overthrows the capitalist system is the proletariat, which revolts against its bondage, annihilates the regime of capital, and organizes the systematic economics of socialism, the premises of which are created by capitalism itself.

These pre-requisites of the new form of society which have to replace capitalism, are: the concentration of the means of production, the powerful capitalist technique, the science created by capitalist evolution, the workers' organizations which will be able to furnish the first organizers of the new order of society; finally, the Marxian theory, the greatest weapon of the proletarian struggle, which is becoming a powerful force, as soon as it captures the masses.

3. Imperialism the Last Stage of Capitalism.

The last decades of the rule of capital are characterized by special features of evolution, rendering the internal contradictions intensely acute, resulting in the unheard-of war crisis of 1914, and leading to the mighty revolutionary crisis (beginning with the Russian October, 1917, revolution) and the general capitalist crisis.

Capitalism became world capitalism; a universally dominant force. The survivals of the social relations of the past—primitive Communism, feudal relations, chattel slavery, merchant capital, the simple exchange of commodities of the handicraftsman, peasant barter and commodity exchange—all these forms, scattered in the various parts of the globe, are being destroyed partly by force, and partly by "peaceful" means, and subjected to the rule of big capital.

The numerous private undertakings competing with one another and destroying each other in this competition, have been replaced by mighty associations of industrial magnates (syndicates, trusts, cartels and companies consolidated by the banks.) This new form of capital, in which banking capital amalgamates with industrial capital, in which the possessions of the large landowners also become a part of the general organization thru the agency of the banks, where there are cliques of enormously rich financial oligarchies almost possessing the character of hereditary dynasties, bears a sharply accentuated monopolistic character. Free competition, which has taken the place of the feudal monopolistic economics, now changes into a monopoly of finance capital.

This organization of capital, essentially monopolistic in character, and frequently causing separate groups of the bourgeoisie of different branches of industry to unite, also gives rise to substantial changes in the type of competitive struggle. Instead of competing by means of low prices, there is a growing tendency to use force openly: boycotts and other forms of pressure within the country itself; high protective duties, tariff wars, the employment of armed force backed by state power—in international relations. This increasing acuteness of competition is, in international economic relations, largely due to two facts: first to the general division of the colonies among the greatest capitalist states; secondly, to the extraordinary increase in the export of capital, accompanied by the increased endeavor to occupy and control the territories fully to which the exported capital flows.

Under such conditions state power and its armed forces assume a special significance for the bourgeoisie. The policy of finance capital is directed to rapacious activity of the utmost intensity (imperialism), requiring enormous reinforcements for armies, air fleets, and every description of means of annihilation. The gigantic development of competition is one of the causes of the increasing acuteness of the competitive struggle which ends in disastrous wars.

The process of the centralization of capital on a world scale has thus led to the creation of great powers of finance capital, which have become the center of the capitalist pressure extending thruout the world, of the capitalist predatory raids, and of the exploitation and enslavement of enormous numbers of proletarian, semi-proletarian, and peasant elements. The weaker bourgeois states exist in direct or indirect dependence on these mighty powers, and are at their mercy. A definite object for enslavement and exploitation is supplied by the colonies, which possess hundreds of millions of working and exploited inhabitants.

There are two main forces being organized under the hegemony of the proletariat against the mighty organized forces of finance capital; the workers of the capitalist states, and the peoples of the colonies oppressed by foreign capital. The basic revolutionary tendency is, however, temporarily paralyzed by the corruption of a considerable section of the European and American proletariat by the imperialist bourgeoisie. The bourgeoisie of the most powerful imperialist states, which have reaped enormous profits by plundering colonies and semi-colonies, have raised the wages of a section of their own workers out of the booty of their plunder, thereby interesting these workers in allegiance to the imperialist "fatherland" and in its plunderings. This systematic bribery has taken special effect among the labor aristocracy (the workers in the particularly privileged trades, the highly skilled workers, the workers in state and municipal enterprises, and so on), and among the leading bureaucratic elements of the working class, social-democracy and trade unions, which have become absolute tools in the hands of the bourgeoisie.

The keen competition among the most powerful of the great powers for the possession of the colonies led to the world war of 1914. This war shook the foundations of capitalist economics to such an extent, rendered the position of the working class so much worse, destroyed so many imperialist illusions among the proletariat, that it introduced a new historic phase in the disintegration of capitalist production, on a world scale.

Campaign Notes of a District Organizer

By ARNE SWABECK.

LA FOLLETTE or Foster," said the secretary of the miners' local at Johnston City, Ill. to me, "is the issue amongst the Illinois miners in this election. As far as we are concerned the old parties are not considered, we are thru with them." He was a LaFollette supporter.

This statement vividly illustrated the distance traversed in rapid tempo during a short span of political development in this country. LaFollette, versus Foster—the representative of the small capitalists and certain sections of the labor aristocracy or the representative of the revolutionary proletariat—that is the issue which demands a definite decision by the workers, not only now but after this election as well. It represents a certain analogy with conditions of the politically more developed countries of Europe. An intensive struggle for the leadership of the masses of workers between the socialist traitors and their supporters, the labor bureaucrats, and the petty bourgeoisie on the one hand and the Communists on the other, preceding the establishment of a real united front for the victory over capitalism.

Perhaps the beginning of this struggle was more clearly indicated thru the Chicago factory straw vote conducted by the local Workers Party. First the general break away from the old parties and secondly the heated debates as to the issue—LaFollette versus Foster.

The great majority of the factory workers canvassed by this straw vote and even a good proportion of office workers employed by the same concerns showed that they were thru with such outstanding tools of capitalist exploitation as Coolidge and Davis. While many would step up to deposit their straw, looking slyly at the canvassers, indicating that they had taken the "great step away from their old party" and voted for LaFollette, whom some of the bosses call radical, others would proudly announce "I am for Foster," knowing that theirs was the class conscious part. Those were also the ones who would immediately set out to convince their fellow workers that this was a class issue—Communism versus Capitalism—even though the latter may wear the mask of LaFollette progressivism.

Getting on the ballot by nominating petitions is tedious work. Yet the circularizing of petitions offers splendid opportunities to bring this issue to the workers. One of our Chicago party members confessed to me that nine hours' work on one Sunday for one of the Communist congressional candidates had netted him only 61 signatures, but he had missed no opportunity to explain to the workers the issues that were at stake. And then—nine hours, voluntarily, of such tedious work show the stuff that some of our party members are made of.

Evenings, when our party workers went out to get signatures, time was too precious to allow for lengthy discussions. One respectable citizen, after having signed his name to a Workers Party petition presented to him exclaimed, "I will sign for anybody except these d— bolsheviks." Our comrade was in a hurry to leave but he managed to leave a DAILY WORKER in this citizen's hands and get the promise that he would read it. Butting into another family this comrade had no sooner mentioned the word petition than the man of the house curtly informed him that there was only one kind of petition that he would ever sign his name to. "What kind?" queried our comrade. "Only a Communist petition will do for me," came the reply. Well, all adults in that family were immediately signed up.

Canvassing the outskirts of the city one young chap, in informing one of our party workers that his father was not home, said, "You may come back later. Of course, I cannot guarantee that my father will sign his name to your petition, you see, he is only a socialist."

Seemingly nothing could stop LaFollette in his own state, Wisconsin. Nay more—supported by the Milwaukee socialist party, bankrupted by the traitorous selling out of their official leadership, LaFollette was ready to annihilate all working class opposition. Although filing nominating petitions containing nearly twice the amount of signatures required by the state, his chief satellite, Attorney General Herman L. Ekern ruled that the names of the Worker Party candidates for president and vice president, Wm. Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow could not appear on the ballot. That privilege would be reserved only for LaFollette and Wheeler even though they were nominated in the same manner. Meanwhile the police under the jurisdiction of the socialist mayor of Milwaukee discovered that the "restricted zone" rule could conveniently be applied against Workers Party street speakers, no matter what part of the city that might be. Never Capitalist solidarity knows many methods. When one fails another will be tried. And so when our comrades of Gary, Ind., approached the banker who is in charge of the armory of that city to make arrangements to rent the premises for a meeting, bringing with them the necessary amount of money, he asked who was to speak and for what party. Upon being informed that the speaker would be Wm. Z. Foster, the candidate for president of the Workers Party, he said: "Nothing doing, Foster is not a good citizen." This was the verdict of a banker.

Nevertheless Foster will be on the ballot in Indiana and he will also speak at Gary. The steel workers will know that a vote for Foster means the first step toward class action. To many of them the issue LaFollette versus Foster has gone a long way towards complete clarification. The brutal capitalist exploitation, as particularly manifested in the steel mills, breeds class consciousness and continually strengthens the foundabor party has prompted many workers to look toward the LaFollette movement—believing that that is it. Said the secretary of the big miners' local of Staunton, Ill. to me: "I am for LaFollette because I believe it is the beginning toward a labor party. On most of the other progressive issues I agree with you fellows. I am with you in the fight to rout the labor fakers who have infested themselves upon our movement."

He did not realize that the LaFollette movement has served as the main factor to defeat the labor party.

While the LaFollette movement has two faces ready made, in Illinois it takes great care to appear primarily under its labor face, yet the state campaign committee is dominated by representatives of non-labor elements, progressive republicans, republicans, progressive democrats, Irish-Americans, German-Americans, etc. Not that this composition is anything incidental or for that matter different from any other state.

Nowhere has the manipulations in the pre-election maneuvers of the astute but visionless trade union bureaucrats become as politically corrupt as in Illinois. The labor endorsements of the "progressives" was skillfully engineered to include Governor Small; the champion among corrupt capitalist politicians; the "good roads governor" who builds hard roads in the state paying the workers 40 cents an hour, working ten hours a day. As the miners, due to unemployment were compelled to engage in this kind of work, they realized why these were called "hard roads." This Governor Small as soon as the zero hour for the filing of independent nominating petitions had struck, announced himself as a regular republican; a supporter of Coolidge and Dawes and all that Wall Street stands for. This, however, did not disturb the labor politicians in the least. They knew the game and are continuing their indorsements of capitalist politicians.

Meanwhile unemployment is increasing in Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois. The big factories are laying off help, steel production is at a low ebb and many mines have remained closed for months. The workers are feeling the realities of the capitalist method of production.

Two hundred Illinois mines have remained closed for more than six months, the remaining 197 are operating, averaging one-third time. Forty-three thousand Illinois coal miners have been unemployed for more than six months, the remaining 62,000 average two days a week. September, 1924, found 97,000 fewer workers employed in the factories of the state than the same month last year. The free employment agencies report 142 applicants for each 100 jobs while 68 per cent of the entire working population of the state are on less than full-time schedule—starvation and misery in prospect.

From the old parties nothing can be expected. From the capitalist government or the capitalist manufacturers' organizations nothing but ruthless prosecution of the capitalist aims in the class struggle can be expected. The LaFollette movement offers no hope of relief for this prospective starvation and misery. On the contrary its avowed aim is to keep capitalism in power and maintain the capitalist system of production. Only the Workers Party organizes and prepares the workers thru a militant struggle for their immediate needs and for the overthrow of capitalism.

mind the regular republicans, the LaFolletteites and the Salvation Army that were holding forth in the same zones.

Our party fought both obstructions compelling a reversal of the rulings on the ballot, and our street speakers, interrupted now and then by involuntary visits to the Milwaukee police station, addressed thousands of workers. The names of our presidential candidates are now on the ballot while ever growing numbers of workers come to listen to the Communist message delivered by our speakers. Actual demonstrations teaching these workers that the capitalist face is by far the predominating part of the LaFollette movement. They are turning toward the leader of the revolutionary proletariat—the Communist Party.

Strange enough, precisely the same methods to hamstringing the revolutionary workers attempted in the state dominated by LaFollette were pursued in Indiana, dominated by the steel kings, the Ku Klux Klan and home of the headquarters of the grandest collection of reactionary union fakers. But they failed just as miserably there.

The political lackeys and lickspittles of these dominant powers in Indiana secured an injunction restraining the Board of Election Commissioners from placing the candidates of the Workers Party with those of other so-called minor parties on the ballot, giving their usual flimsy excuses for such action. It is interesting to note that the injunction appeared as soon as nominating petitions of the Workers Party had been filed. But no matter how endeared the injunction weapon has become to this gentry, this time it could not stand the test. A demand for a rehearing finally resulted in a reversal of the injunction tion for the revolutionary movement. Down in Christopher, Ill., the Ku Klux mayor and his Ku Klux helpers and sheriffs closed the hall on Mother Bloor, the Workers Party campaign speaker, and drove the assembled workers on the streets. He prohibited any Communist meeting in the town. Then the miners who filled the streets to hear the Communist message marched to the city limits followed by their wives carrying children in their arms. "A pathetic but impressive sight," said an eye-witness. Under the flickering glare of a lantern the meeting was held. That, however, did not end the fight. One week later Wm. F. Dunne, Communist candidate for governor of the state, spoke to a much larger gathering right in the heart of the town.

The mayor of Madison, Ill., issued the same sort of an edict against Communist campaign meetings and closed the halls. It only resulted in a bigger protest meeting addressed by Mother Bloor at Granite City which is virtually built together with Madison and ruled by the same steel trust. The numbers of this gathering was further increased at the subsequent meeting addressed by Comrade Duane.

Surely great efforts are being exerted to line up the Illinois workers for LaFollette. Here is where this campaign is being particularly concentrated to attempt to carry in a popular sweep all the less conscious working class votes. But with this concentration the issue LaFollette versus Foster has become more pronounced.

Illinois is supposed to be a cinch for LaFollette. Undoubtedly the experiences of the great industrial proletariat of this state will manifest itself in a confused rebellion against the strike-breaker president and the Morgan-Rockefeller lawyer and all that they stand for. Geneva and Moscow

By R. Merino Gracia

IT is well that the bourgeoisie tries to dazzle the working masses with its pacifist farce of the League of Nations. There is something of sincerity in this desire of France and England to reach an accord in order that, in the near future, new capitalist wars in Europe might be avoided.

This desire is born from the fear that capitalism is beginning to have of the proletariat as a class that each day acquires greater political maturity and greater resolution to seize for itself the direction of society. The example of the Russian Soviet Union is sufficiently eloquent and speaks more clearly than all the tracts of social economy. Karl Marx never could have dreamed that his fundamental work "Capital" would find a citadel in the vast proletarian republic.

If, before October, 1917, the bourgeois classes neither feared nor believed possible the loss of their privileges, today they believe and fear it. If, before October, 1917, the proletariat was politically disunited and vacillating, today, united and compact, it marches with sure tread toward the accomplishment of its historic mission.

Against the revolutionary danger, against the proletarian menace, the governments unite in the holy alliance of capital and go to Geneva, to the League of Nations, to form agreements to avoid these disasters and to perpetuate their mutual domination.

It is an international tragedy that the liberties and rights of the people are locked in the wardrobe of "democracy." This has no other end than to perpetuate the rule of the Anglo-American banks, to form a bond of mutual protection against the workers and to continue the exploitation of these workers and of the colonial countries. And this farce is staged precisely by those most abject servants of the god of capital who, in other times, called themselves "socialists."

Look at MacDonald; he of the Spithead naval review, talking of the "peace union," of the "rights of peoples!" He, that organizes naval reviews to show to the London Conference! He, that brutally stamps upon the populations of Egypt, Sudan and India! He, representative of a "labor government," a worker, and of artillery. That is the League of Nations, the capitalist international, served by the reformists of Amsterdam. A bourgeois periodical has called the sessions of the League of Nations "The Parliament of the World." It is true, but there is need to add of "World Capitalism."

Beside that organism, which synthesizes the agony of the world bourgeoisie, we have something that is worth infinitely more. We have our glorious Communist International! We have, in the Kremlin, our Parliament. It is the only nation that has an international policy, clear, conscious, concrete. This policy is derived from its internal constitution. Russia is proletarian, and its international policy is an alliance of steel and a heroic defense of the whole world of Labor, of the working and oppressed classes, of the enslaved colonial peoples.

We can well understand, then, the hatred of the imperialist countries against the Soviet Union. International capitalism, that has in Asia an enormous field of exploitation of the natives, encounters now the Soviet Union, civilized, exemplary, and animating those oppressed peoples to free themselves from the tyranny of oppressing nations. England is unable to pardon Russia for making Moscow a Holy City for all the oppressed, the disinherited, the wonder city that gives asylum to the suppressed and exploited and which teaches them the way of liberation.

From the pale-cheeked workers of London, that falter of hunger in the midst of a fastuous world metropolis; to the poor pariahs of India, lost in the jungles, all turn their eyes to Moscow, and pronounce the names of Marx and Lenin with fervorous ecstasy!

Geneva and Moscow! The League of Nations, capitalist, rapacious and oppressive! And the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics! Two worlds, between which there is stages a war to the death! A war that can only end with the triumph of Moscow.

This is the great battle of our time! Every worker should understand where his post is, and advance to occupy it, courageous and decided!

The Vanguard Group of the Junior Section has broken into the field of journalism. This group recently issued an oral paper, which was read at their affair. This activity is noteworthy and shows that the Juniors are not neglecting any opportunities to reach the children with Communist ideas. Below are excerpts from the paper:

NEWS TRAVELS FAR.

Several months ago, the Jewish Workers Relief Committee gave a bazaar. It lasted four days with one Saturday afternoon being set aside for a costume party the best costume to receive a prize.

The Juniors, under the leadership of Comrade Abe Harris were to give a drill. Dressed in their costumes, they first went to Humboldt Park with Comrades Harris and Bill Kruse. Comrade Kuse took moving pictures of the costume exercise.

Then, after we finished the drill, we formed into a group and Comrade Kruse took a standstill.

The pictures turned out good. The movies were sent to Soviet Russia. The standstills were sold to us at ten cents each. One Comrade bought three, one for herself, one to send to England and one to send to an uncle in Soviet Russia.

Her uncle sent back a letter telling what he did with the picture. What do you suppose? He gave it to the Young Communists' daily newspaper in Odessa! The picture was published in several newspapers. And another thing, we got the first prize at the bazaar. It was a set of two books. E. S.

VANGUARD JUNIOR ORGANIZES A NEW GROUP.

One of our Comrades, Eva Stolar, has organized a new group which has named itself the John Reed Group of the Jr. Y. W. L. They elected officers after Comrade Rose Cohen, city organizer of the Juniors made a little speech.

Comrade Rose's speech proved to be interesting to the new Juniors. A Comrade from the Workers Party was also present. He helped the new Comrades very much.

At present the group has 25 members.

Youthful Communists At Minneapolis, Minn., Hold Junior Circus

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 24.—The Junior section of the Young Workers League in Minneapolis is preparing to show that the children of the working class are just as capable of entertaining the workers, as are even the well financed boys' clubs.

This Sunday they are to have a junior circus at the Labor Lyceum, 1426 N. 6th Ave., at 8 p. m. Here the workers of Minneapolis for the first time will be given the opportunity of seeing the Juniors in action, as acrobats.

This is only one phase of their activity. The comrades have been preparing for many weeks and a good time is assured to all. Tickets are 15c for grown-ups and 10c for children.

Juniors! Wake up! Send in your news to the Children's Column of the DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

There's No Law Against Throwing Bricks!

Not on a construction job. When you're hired and you have the job of assisting in the building of a greater newspaper (and subscription "bricks" will surely do it!)—there's no law against it.

Of course your boss won't like it. Neither will a Labor Faker who has "no use for them Bolsheviks"—but there's no law against it.

And it wouldn't matter if there was—if you have the Labor movement at heart. There's a "brick" somewhere in this issue.

"Without a Revolutionary Theory a Revolutionary Party is Impossible."

Principles of Communist Education

Thesis Adopted by Fifth Congress of Communist International.

I. The Crises in the Communist Parties as Ideological Crises.

1. The political and organizational crises arising in the Communist International are at the same time ideological crises in the respective parties. All right and left deviations are due to deviations from the class ideology of the proletariat, from Marxism-Leninism.

The crises that arose at the second congress, and subsequent to it, were caused by the "infantile sickness of leftism" which betrayed an ideological deviation from Marxism-Leninism in the direction of syndicalism. (Dutch Marxism, Communist Labor Party of Germany, anti-parliamentarism, etc.). The present internal conflicts in several of the Communist Parties, which became evident at the time of the German October defeat, are the result of the influence of the remnants of the old social-democratic ideology which has been brought over into the Communist Parties. The way to overcome this, is: To bolshevize the Communist Parties. The bolshevization of the parties in this sense means: The final ideological victory of Marxism and Leninism (or in other words: of Marxism in the period of imperialism and the epoch of the proletarian revolution) and to reject the Marxism of the Second International and the remnants of the elements of syndicalism.

2. The complete and rapid bolshevizing of the Communist Party can be attained in the process of the deliberate revolutionary activity of the sections of the Communist International, by more deeply hammering Marxism and Leninism into the consciousness of the Communist Parties and the party members. Only by the theoretical understanding of revolutionary practice in this way can the Communist Parties become real leaders of the masses, conscious of their aims. Only by a real and organized assimilation of Marxism-Leninism can the parties reduce the possibilities of political, tactical, and organizational errors to a minimum and bring about the emancipation of the working class. "Without a revolutionary theory, a revolutionary movement is impossible." A party can play the role of the vanguard only if it is guided by a "vanguard theory" (Lenin). One of the first tasks of the Communist International and its sections consists in popularizing this vanguard theory—Marxism-Leninism—among the members. Cadres of party members must be formed who have complete command of this theoretical weapon and are able to train the widest circle of the party membership in the use of it. Particularly important is the greatest possible assimilation of this theory by the youth. Hence all necessary organizational measures must be taken by the sections for furthering the development of these cadres and this training for the youth.

The condition precedent for the development of propaganda work is that every Communist Party must realize the importance of theoretically mastering Marxism-Leninism. All Communist Parties must be careful to see to it that the activity for attaining practical results is not carried on to the neglect of the theoretical problems of the emancipation of the working class and of the demands of the theoretical struggle. On the contrary: the precedent for attaining practical results in the revolutionary struggle is a clear theoretical understanding and theoretical clarity among as great a number of members as possible.

3. The ideological quality of the leading cadres and of the masses in the Communist Parties demand continual self-control. Although the organizational pre-requisite for such a control on the basis of concrete facts, and material are not yet possible, it is nevertheless true that the extent and depth of the dissemination of the Marxism-Leninism idea is not keeping pace with the rapid growth of the influence of the party. Stagnation on the field of theoretical work in the spirit of Marx, Engels, and Lenin is observable in all sections of the Communist International. This is all the more dangerous because theoretical work by facilitating analysis of concrete conditions, and more definite formulations of the conditions and perspectives of the revolutionary upheaval, would render greater results achieved in the political work of the parties. Only these circumstances and the indifference of some of the leading comrades towards the theoretical question make it possible for "theories" to arise within the Communist International, which stand in sharp contradiction to Marxism-Leninism. The immediate result of these "theories" is the confusion which reigns in the minds of the leading cadres and of the masses in the party on philosophic, theoretical-economic questions. Later they are naturally observed on the field of policy and tactics, in the form of "left" or "right" deviations. (The attitude of certain leaders of the Swedish party on the religious questions; the false conception held by certain leaders of the German party on the nature of the bourgeois state and on the class roots of opportunism among the labor aristocracy; the philosophical deviation of certain groups of intellectuals of the German Communist Party, who are seeking to rob dialectical materialism of its materialist aspect and put idealism into its place; attempts in the Communist Party of Italy to revise the economic theory of Marxism). Even the propagandist training of the party masses is also far from satisfactory. This is a natural result of the fact that the necessity of this propagandist work has not yet been understood by the party leadership. A very great percentage of the masses in the Communist Party joined the party because they became convinced empirically, in the midst of their everyday political and economic struggles, of the treacherous character of opportunism and reformism, and of the exclusively proletarian class character of the Communist Party. This fact represents a great advantage for the Communist Parties, and indicates the superiority of the Third International, over the Second International; it means nevertheless that the proletarian masses of the party may themselves still be imbued with remnants of social democratic ideology. This social-democratic heritage cannot be eliminated mechanically, particularly among the party masses; it must be overcome, in addition to instruction in the principles of revolutionary practice, by systematic propaganda of the ideas of Marxism-Leninism, and of thoroly imbuing the minds of the broad masses with at least the fundamental principles and methods of Marxism-Leninism.

4. In the person of Lenin—the most orthodox of Marxists, who continued the theoretical and practical work of Marx—the Communist International and all the Communist Parties possessed a reliable guide indicating every "right" or "left" deviation on the field of theory and political practice. Only Leninism, which Lenin and his co-workers, the old bolshevist guard, developed as the theory of the proletarian revolution, can take Lenin's place. The death of Lenin must give as great an impetus to the propaganda of the theory of Marxism-Leninism, and to the diffusion and intensification of this propaganda in all the sections of the Communist International, as it did in the Communist Party of Russia.

In view of the ideological condition of the parties in general and especially because of the absence of cadres in the party capable of effectively guiding the work, this task must be assumed by the Communist International.

II. General Organizational Measures on the Field of Propaganda.

5. The most characteristic feature of the present state of propaganda activity is that up till now the Communist International and the various Communist Parties have not set up special organs for propaganda work, or where they have, they are inadequate. Too little has been done so far to carry out the decisions of the Fourth Congress on educational work, consequently no concrete results can be expected. In default of suitable organs, it was out of the question to speak of gathering and examining the experiences of the various sections, of summarizing, generalizing, and exchanging these experiences, or of systematically putting the propaganda work into shape; consequently the development of party organs and party institutions, of departments for agitation and propaganda, which must organize the propaganda of Marxism-Leninism, will still be a fundamental task of the Communist International after the Fifth World Congress.

6. A further obstacle to the propaganda of Marxism-Leninism is the insufficient dissemination of Marxism-Leninism literature. There is a dearth of original writings as well as of suitable popular text books which would facilitate the work. The classics of Marxist literature are bibliographical rarities in a great number of western countries. There are almost no new editions. Only very seldom do new books appear which indicate new developments of Marxism thought or of the broad popularization of the theory. In order to consolidate the propaganda of Marxism-Leninism, it is absolutely necessary that the literary works of Marx and Lenin (at least the most important standard works) for study purposes, and text books, supplementary books, and popular writings which discuss the methods of party training and study, be published in as many languages as possible.

7. Another obstacle to this work in the Communist International, is the inadequate co-ordination of the energies devoted to theoretical Marxist study work. There is not sufficient contact between the Marxists in the various sections of the Communist International active on the field of theory or deeply interested in theory, to render division of labor possible or an exchange of experiences, and consequently a fruitful development of the work. This circumstance, as well as the isolation from each of the few theoretical and propaganda periodicals that do exist, render impossible the utilization as propaganda of the results of the Marxian-Leninist investigation and the mutual examination and utilization of results obtained. The work of co-ordinating the Marxian-Leninist forces in the international Communist movement and the division of labor among these forces is also necessary to the organizational dissemination and intensification of propaganda work. It is necessary also to encourage the sections of the Communist International to publish theoretical and propaganda periodicals which would be suitable for satisfying the needs of educational work.

8. The immediate concrete tasks of the Communist International in centrally guiding and furthering propaganda activity are:

a) Organization and development of the department for agitation and propaganda. Furnishing this department with forces trained in Marxism-Leninism, and skilled in the organization of propaganda work. Systematic control of the propaganda activity of the parties. Generalization and exchange of experiences. Support of the parties in developing concrete methods and forms of party trainings.

b) Rearrangement and extension of the publication activity of the Communist International with the view to furnishing the parties not only with political literature, but also with theoretical and propaganda literature. Publication of the most important works of Marx, Engels, and Lenin, and the production of popular literature consisting of text books and supplementary books on the fundamental questions of the Communist program and of Communist tactics and organization.

c) Publication of a monthly propaganda periodical for the purpose of instructing party officials and above all, the propagandists. The task of the monthly must be to act as a medium for the exchange of experiences, in elaborating questions of program, in generally guiding and systematizing the educational work of the party, in elaborating papers and introductions, in investigating and working out the best methods and forms of propaganda work, in communicating systematic bibliographical material, and in suitably utilizing for propaganda the results of the Marxian-Leninist investigations. In providing instructive material, the periodical would also supply the needs of the agitators. The periodical should appear in German, French, and English.

d) In order to supply at least the most important parties with qualified theoretical workers, the Communist International will co-opt a number of party workers for some length of time from the German, British, American, Czechoslovakian, Italian, and French sections to Moscow, where they will devote themselves solely to the study of the theory and practice of Marxism-Leninism.

Comrades will be selected for this purpose (workers, if possible) who, under general instructions, will be capable of doing scientific work and of further educating themselves independently in Marxism-Leninism. The purpose of the study is to assimilate a more thorough Marxian-Leninist training and to equip these comrades for independent, theoretically well-grounded political work.

e) Convene and prepare for a conference of officials entrusted with propaganda work in the most important sections, and of conductors of the party schools, for the purpose of working out the most important concrete tasks of party training, and adequately specializing and co-ordinating the methods.

f) Effective support of the Young Communist International by properly organizing the training of Communist youth.

STARVATION WAGES DANGEROUS EVEN IN DAWES' GERMANY!

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A mild bombshell struck the foreign trade forum of the National Association of Credit Men here when J. Henry Scattergood, president of the American Dyewood corporation, who has recently visited Germany, said:

"A modern nation cannot continue with its workmen getting $7.50 a week. German labor is already in a disturbed condition and there will certainly be trouble if these starvation wages are not increased."

LETTERS FROM MOSCOW

By ANNA PORTER

A little incident in child-reclamation came accidentally to my notice the other day. The government is making headway slowly but surely in this respect as in most others, but the waits do not take altogether kindly to being reclaimed from the gutters and their adventurous life, and being troublesomely civilized. It is so much easier in summertime to curl up in the angle of a wall at night in your dirty clothes, and not bother about baths and hair-brushing. But here the Young Leninists come in. These little folk at an age below that of the Young Communists—down in fact to the tots who struggle so valiantly to keep up in the processions, all understand, to the youngest, what their task is in building the new Russia. Several hundred thousand of these there are throughout the country. "Be prepared," is their salute, and quick as a flash from the tiniest comes the response with hand high, "Always prepared!"

The following incident shows one direction in which they are working—"always prepared" to handle it efficiently. I had been having a sort of dinner-lunch—in the Russian fashion anywhere from three to six—in the co-operative restaurant across the way, under the Second House of the Soviets,—where officials of one sort or another are housed in the old Hotel Metropole,—with a Russian speaking comrade who is especially interested in the child problem. It was Sunday and as we finished, we saw great companies of the Young Leninists come marching from the Red Square,—so many that I think it must have been their "Day." Past and past they tramped with bands and banners, dressed in their varied gymnasium suits and uniforms, all united by the red neckerchief, until finally one company stopped just in front of our entrance, and went through their drills, interpretive posturing it might be called, in perfect accord with the music, while a half dozen little beggar boys who had been hanging about the restaurant dodging the manager, joined the crowd who stood to watch the marchers.

This last company then swung about and marched into the building to a clubroom or hall they have, and the crowd dwindled away, leaving us alone with the beggar boys. My companion tried to interview them. They were reluctant of course, but they gained courage and gathered around as he craftily shifted his attention to a young Pole who stopped and became interested. He had run away from a reactionary family to Russia, he said, and joined the Communist Party. Then gradually the boys allowed themselves to be drawn in, but before we had made any headway, two Young Leninists, in their red handkerchiefs, a bright-faced stocky girl of perhaps fourteen, and a slender boy of the same age, came out from the hall, swooped down without warning upon the boys and carried them off by storm, herding them alone with loving arms about the ragged shoulders and dusty towled heads.

All but one! The toughest of the lot refused to surrender—a bull-doggy little boy in a coat of ragged gunny-sacking. We talked to him—to his back—as he tried to escape us by burrowing in a stone wall with his hand. Yes, he would like to go into a home and be fed—but he was grumpy and skeptical in the acknowledgment. Again we were supplanted by the two little Leninists of his own age, generalised by the bright-faced, competent girl, and after a very short comradely struggle, they carried him off in triumph—with a sulky reluctance on his part it is true—nevertheless they had him. It took childhood to capture childhood. These little folk are psychologists!

But what can they do with them? I asked. Is there any hope of helping them at once? Not all of them, was the reply. The children's homes are full, housing is hopelessly inadequate, all the energy at present—and funds are put into repairing the old buildings to keep them from falling to pieces. Children are swarming in Russia inadequately cared for in groups, everyone is clamoring to send proteges into this or that home or colony which is already crowded. But at least the children can interest these and teach them, show them how the Leninists work and play, share the Communist ideal with them, and give them the desire to be the comrades of the other children. Above all show them active workers in the organization who have been reclaimed from the same wretched life. It seemed so hopeful, suddenly, getting a glimpse of the practical work thru the children themselves.

And the older ones. The new psychology is working there even among the youth of the dispossessed. However much they dislike adapting themselves to the new life, they are learning to understand sympathetically. Recently I took breakfast at a small cafe near by—the kind of cafe which hangs a sign reading, "Do not give fees—Giver and taker are master and servant, and since October this must not be," and "October" means of course, Red October. Some misunderstanding caused the proprietor to ask a young man in a good-looking overcoat and soft hat—which marked his bourgeois caste!—to explain to me in French. When he found I spoke English, in which he was equally at home, he said, "Oh, I am so glad to meet English-speaking people. There are too many Russians here!" I couldn't help laughing at the unreasonableness of it. He explained in a discouraged way that he was furnishing the cafe with cakes his mother had made, and he got out a sifter and sifted sugar carefully over each layer as they were taken from the boxes. I waited for him and we walked down the street together. His father had been a rich merchant, and he was too young to understand much when the Revolution came, he made with his family, "great opposition." "I am not afraid to tell you," he said. "They know me and I am doing my work and making no trouble and they let me alone." He is doing "dirty work" for the army—being a strong young fellow and not eligible during this probation, to the ranks—and is "learning." "There are only hundreds of us," he said, "and there are millions of workers benefited by the change, but oh, if only the rest of Europe would hurry up, and help us, and so get things along." He understands the sincerity of Russia's "war on war," compared with the pretence of other nations. "We have our army, but Russia will never fight another imperialistic war." I said I supposed he had no chance in the university and he replied, "No, for there is not room for all, and that is dreadful for me, but then before, the workers never had a chance."

This is what he is "learning," poor young fellow, learning with weariness and resignation, but I think with understanding and sympathy, for he is young and he too has a part in Russia's future, as big and interesting a part as he shall prove himself fit to play. But the old are not so easily reconciled. They are indignant and critical and can only see that their pleasant and comfortable life has been upset, and that there is no immediate prospect of anything better than the present confusion of their lives. If, as the youth said, Europe would only hurry up!

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA!

Old Compositions Jazzed up to Suit the Popular Taste

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Paul Whitman, the emperor of jazz, gave a concert of jazz music at the Studebaker theater last Sunday. He opened his program with a composition played by the small five-piece dance orchestra of six years ago, showing what a foolish, insipid effect the quintet of blaring noise makes.

Then came Whitman's orchestra of today. Some thirty instrumentalists played over forty instruments. He showed how well-known standard compositions can be turned into comedy numbers thru burlesquing them. "The Carnival of Venice," turned into "So This Is Venice" and into good dance pieces by speeding up the rhythm.

There were a good many straight dance numbers, and a few compositions written expressly for Whitman.

The technique of the orchestra is astounding. One of the performers, Ross Gorman, seems to play all reed instruments. Clarinets, saxophones, oboes, English horns and a few outlandish instruments such as the octavin, the all but obsolete bass oboe, and a queer machine that looks like a cross between a saxophone and a sarrusophone, and sounds like a cow with a cold, have no terrors for him. He gets around them all, and seems to play them all at once. The effects in the brass instruments produced by various freak mutes range all the way from bull frog grunts to a finely spun out, silky violin like tone.

In short, the conclusion to draw from Whitman's concert is that while the rendition of jazz music is one of the finest of fine arts, the composition of it is a trade. After two hours of the popular songs of commerce, one has the sensation of being bathed in sugar up to the neck. There is no originality of invention in them, and the form is absolute and unvariable. Whitman's orchestra is as perfect an instrument as Frederick Stock's, but where Stock has an unlimited field of music to choose from, Whitman has only a lot of plagiarism and burlesques of well-known music. The form of a popular song is as mathematically worked out as that of a locomotive, and variation in the number of bars allotted to any section of a jazz song is unheard of.

There exist, however, three pieces of music pointing a way out. Whitman played two of them, a suite of serenades by Victor Herbert, and a "Rhapsody in Blue" for piano and orchestra by George Gershwin. Herbert's serenades are in conventional

PHILADELPHIA TURNS OUT TO MOVIE TO AID STRIKE FUND

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—(I. W. A. Service) Lulu Temple was jammed for two shows of "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" and "Russia in Overalls." Both pictures came in for their share of praise, and the feature so interested the big crowd that its five reels ended all too soon. The local committee is so delighted with its success that it expects to put on the films again for a three or four day run in co-operation with other friendly labor organizations.

A feature of the showing was a collection of $345.19 for the benefit of the Paterson Silk strikers. The proceeds of the show will be about a thousand dollars.

Alex Bail, the able secretary of the Philadelphia committee for International Workers' Aid, writes: "A very successful showing of the new films, which is not surprising considering their character. We are very glad to hear of the plans to expand this work to the extent of producing and distributing American and German labor films. The field is fruitful and as yet untouched. During a talk with the secretary of the Pennsylvania state board of censors a couple of weeks ago, he said 'The silver screen can be made a powerful weapon for revolution.' Be that as it may, we know that it is already a valuable instrument for working class education. All efforts to extend the work are greeted with enthusiasm in this burg and we will do all we can to help along this important work." form, with a lively melody that sounds good no matter how played. But the arrangement for saxophones, gagged trumpets and trombones and percussion instruments handled as only a jazz drummer can handle them, makes the suite a real jazz work.

Gershwin has gone a good deal further. There are real jazz tunes in his rhapsody and the symphonic handling of them, combined with a sweeping, wild and excessively difficult piano part, knocks the highbrows off their feet. This is the first really serious and worthwhile handling of popular rhythms.

The third work mentioned above is John Alden Carpenter's "Krazy Kat." Carpenter has written a ballet around the familiar cartoon. Herriman, the cartoonist, designed the scenery and Adolph Bolm, who used to be the ballet master of the Chicago opera, has produced the ballet a number of times.

In other words, jazz must free itself from the quantity production of dance tunes and come out into worthwhile forms. The means by which such music can be played is here. And one "Rhapsody in Blue" is worth a thousand "Mother, Dixie and You" songs.

The Present World Situation

By A. STALIN
Secretary of the Russian Communist Party.

I think that in order to characterize the present international situation, there is no need to consider all of the important events and all the peculiarities of the present international situation. It is only necessary to consider the basic, decisive factors operating today. At the present time, there are, in my opinion, three such factors: a. the "era" of bourgeois democratic "pacifism"; b. America's participation in the London agreement of the entente; c. the strengthening of the left elements in the European labor movement and the growth of the international position of the Soviet Union.

1. The Period of Bourgeois Democratic Pacifism.

The entente has shown itself impotent to digest its military victories. They were completely successful in defeating Germany and isolating for a while the Soviet Union. They were also successful in drawing up a plan to rob Europe. The innumerable conferences and treaties of the entente are evidence of this. But in the fulfillment of the plan of robbery, the entente proved impotent. Why? Because the antagonism between the entente states were too great. Because they have not succeeded and will not succeed in agreeing on the division of the spoils. Because the resistance of the countries which are to be subjugated is becoming more and more powerful. Because the realization of the plan of robbery is fraught with military clashes, while the masses do not want to fight. It is now clear to "all" that the frontal imperialist attack upon the Ruhr, calculated to destroy Germany, has proved a danger to imperialism itself. It is also clear that the open imperialist policy of ultimatums intended to isolate the Soviet Union is producing opposite results. A situation has been created by which Poincare and Curzon, both serving imperialism heart and soul, have intensified by their "work" the growing crises in Europe, have aroused the masses against imperialism and stimulated them on to revolution. This makes it inevitable for the bourgeoisie to go over from a policy of direct attack to a policy of compromise, from open imperialism to masked imperialism, from Poincare and Curzon to MacDonald and Herriot. It has become unsafe to rob the world openly. The labor party of England and the left bloc of France have to cover up the nakedness of imperialism. Therein lies the explanation of "pacifism" and "democracy."

Some think that the bourgeoisie came to "pacifism" and "democracy" not from need, but by their own free will, by a free choice. It is assumed that the bourgeoisie, having defeated the working class in decisive battles (Italy, Germany) began to feel itself victorious and decided that it will go over to democracy. In other words, while decisive battles were in progress the bourgeoisie needed a militant organization, fascism; now that the proletariat has been smashed, the bourgeoisie no longer needs fascism, and can supplant it by "democracy" as a better means of consolidating its victory. From this the conclusion is drawn that the power of the bourgeoisie has been strengthened, that "the era of pacifism" will last long, and that the revolution in Europe has been indefinitely postponed.

This assumption is entirely erroneous. First, it is untrue that fascism is merely the militant organization of the bourgeoisie. Fascism is not only a military-technical category. Fascism is the militant organization of the bourgeoisie, leaning upon the active support of the social-democracy. Objectively the social-democracy is the moderate wing of fascism. There is no ground for supposing that the militant organization of the bourgeoisie could achieve decisive victories in battles or in the government of the country without active support of the social-democracy. There is just as little ground to suppose that the social-democracy could achieve decisive successes in battles or in the government of the country without the active support of the militant organization of the bourgeoisie. These organizations do not negate, but supplement each other. They are not antipodes, but twins. Fascism is the informal political bloc of these two main organizations developed under the conditions of the post-war crisis of imperialism and designed to fight the proletarian revolution. The bourgeoisie cannot maintain itself in power without the presence of this bloc. Therefore, it would be wrong to think that "pacifism" signifies the end of fascism. "Pacifism" under the present conditions is the consolidation of fascism with its moderate social democratic wing moved to the forefront.

Secondly, it is untrue that the decisive battles have already taken place, that the proletariat was defeated in these battles, and that the power of the bourgeoisie has consequently been strengthened. There have been no decisive battles because there have been no mass, truly bolshevist parties capable of leading the proletariat to the dictatorship. Without such parties decisive battles for dictatorship under conditions of imperialism are impossible. In the west de-resort to "democratic pacifism."

And finally, it is untrue that "pacifism" is a sign of power instead of weakness of the bourgeoisie, that "pacifism" will lead to the consolidation of the power of the bourgeoisie, to the postponement of the revolution for an indefinite period. Present day pacifism signifies the accession to power, direct or indirect, of the parties of the Second International. But what does the accession to power of the parties of the Second International mean? It means their inevitable self-exposure as lackeys of imperialism, as traitors of the proletariat, for the governmental practice of these parties can bring only one result: their political bankruptcy, the growth of conflicts within these parties, their demoralization and decay. And the demoralization of these parties leads to the inevitable demoralization of the power of the bourgeoisie, for the parties of the Second International are the buttress of imperialism. Would the bourgeoisie agree to such a risky experiment in "pacifism" without a special urge and of its own free will? Of course not. Since the end of the imperialist war the bourgeoisie has experimented with

"democratic pacifism" is no Kerenskyism, for a Kerensky regime presupposes duality of power, the collapse of bourgeois rule and the inception of the proletarian reign. But that pacifism signifies the greatest stirring up of the masses, their entrance into politics, that pacifism loosens up the bourgeois power and paves the way for revolutionary upheavals, hardly anyone can doubt. And precisely because of this pacifism must lead not to the strengthening, but to the weakening of bourgeois power, not to the indefinite postponement of the revolution, but to its acceleration.

This does not, of course, mean that pacifism is not a serious menace to the revolution. Pacifism leads to the undermining of the foundation of the bourgeois power, it prepares the conditions favorable to the revolution. But pacifism must lead to these results only despite the conscious will of the "pacifists" and "democrats" themselves, only through unswerving exposures by the Communist parties of the imperialist and counter-revolutionary nature of the pacifist-democratic rule of Herriot and MacDonald. As regards the will of the pacifists and democrats themselves, as regards the policy of the imperialists themselves, they in taking up pacifism pursue only one object, to fool the masses by ringing phrases about peace in order to prepare for new wars, to blind them by the glitter of "democracy" in order to consolidate the dictatorship of the bourgeoisie, to lull the masses to sleep by songs of the "sovereign" rights of nations and states, in order the more successfully to prepare interventions in China, slaughters in Afghanistan and Sudan, dismemberment of Persia, to dupe the masses by pompous chatter of "friendly relations" with the Soviet Union, about these or other "agreements" with the Soviet power, in order the more intimately to connect themselves with the ousted counter-revolutionary plotters to begin bandit raids upon White Russia, Ukraine and Georgia. In this camouflage lies the chief danger of pacifism. Whether the bourgeoisie will achieve its object, to fool the people, depends upon the energy with which the Communist parties of the west and east will prosecute their exposing activities upon their ability to tear off the mask of the imperialists in pacifist disguise. Undoubtedly the events and acts will work in favor of the Communists, driving a wedge between the pacifist words and imperialist deeds of the democratic henchmen of capital. It is the duty of the Communists not to lag behind events and mercilessly to expose every step and every act of servility to imperialism and treason to the proletariat on the part of the parties of the Second International.

Class Against Class

cisive battles are still a matter of the future. There have only been initial attacks and they were repulsed by the bourgeoisie, a first serious test of force which showed that the proletariat is still too weak to overthrow the bourgeoisie, while the bourgeoisie is already too weak to disregard the proletariat. And just because the bourgeoisie is already powerless to force the working class on its knees, it has been compelled to abandon the frontal attack, to attempt flanking action, to agree to compromises, to pacifism twice: the first time directly after the war, when the revolution appeared to be knocking at the door, and the second time, now, after the risky experiments of Poincare and Curzon. Who would dare to deny that this running of the bourgeoisie from pacifism to brazen imperialism and back will not leave imperialism unaffected, that it throws out of the usual peaceful rut millions of workers, that it draws into politics the most backward elements of the proletariat, that it facilitates their revolutionization? Of course

Jan Mirko's Poem

By JOHN LASSEN.

Jan Mirko was a poet. Not an ordinary, everyday poet but one for whom writing was the one wonderful thing in life. And yet Jan Mirko wrote but few poems, for his lot was bound up with the lot of millions of workmen. He was a proletarian, a man who worked with his hands.

Jan worked on the beach where a bridge was being built. On Monday he had a day off. He stretched himself, walked along the beach, lay down upon the white sand, covered himself up with the tiny grains of sand and looked towards the bridge. Lying there he forgot his weariness.

Tonight he is going to work. Seen from afar the crowd of human beings seemed beautiful to him.

And suddenly the feeling overcame him which he will call happiness, but which a poet like Jan Mirko calls ecstasy. In his soul a poem was born. He wanted to form his ecstasy into words. What could he write about but work? Mirko's whole soul was filled by the glory of work. He forged and modelled the words.

Oh work, you who give fruitfulness to the earth and make the corn grow. Work, who shortens distances and makes the earth smaller. Work who controls all forces: water, earth and air.

Oh work. . . Who draws lightning out of the air and makes the heavens shake. . . Who perfects the fruit of the earth and gives an exquisite taste to bitter food. . .

Work, creator of heat and of cold. The sun's last purple rays made the white sand flame. . .

And work is building the new bridge. Mirko trembled. Caught in the throes of creation he understood the magic significance of the new bridge. And he thought: bridge of work, uniting men with the universe. Bridge of eternity, being built by tiny human beings upon the sand.

This bridge leads to the universe, its radiant arch spans the sea. His breast heaved.

The song of work ought to be written. It was growing dark. The sun had disappeared, leaving but a pale ray of light. Here and there a small light was mirrored in the water. On the bridge lamps were being lit. A motorboat rushed along, a heavy rumbling noise sounded through the air.

Time to go to work. Jan Mirko walked towards the bridge. He put on his overalls. His arm kept time.

He did not feel the beauty of work any longer. He only knew that he had to pay attention, that he had to keep time with the other men: one . . . two . . . one . . . two . . .

If he forgets to keep time the chain of work will be interrupted. He put out his arm, caught hold of the bucket, poured out the cement, passed the bucket on. The water gurgled.

On and on, the everlasting, monotonous gurgling of the water. Jan Mirko had forgotten all about work's splendid rhythm, he only thought of the one . . . two . . . one . . . two . . .

All around the night was black and threatening, only the bridge was shining, the bridge of work.

Jan Mirko forgot his daydream. He felt nothing but unspeakable weariness. Fatigue crept into his arms and further down into his legs. His back ached.

When the new shift came Jan Mirko had lost all connection with human life, he was nothing but an aching body. He wanted to sleep, to forget.

Jan Mirko, the workingman-poet, dragged himself home. He was hardly able to undress before he tumbled into bed.

He slept. . . Jan Mirko never wrote the song of triumphant work.

Preparing For the Coming Struggles

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN

EVERYBODY is preparing for the coming struggles but the workers and the poorest sections of the America. The working masses of America seem to be living now in a fool's paradise, dreaming dreams and cherishing illusions which can profit no one except the enemies of the working class.

Big Capital on the Job. Big capital knows its mind and is proceeding in a business-like fashion to entrench its positions. Take the Dawes plan. What is it if not a clever device by the big capitalists of America to extend their power abroad in order to make more secure their domination at home?

Or, take the presidential election campaign. See how cleverly the big capitalists have manipulated the affairs of the two old parties. Both have nominated for their presidential candidates servants of Wall Street. Both have formulated programs which, despite some differences in language, equally suit the interests of big capital.

Thus, no matter which of the two is elected president, republican or democrat, the interests of monopolized industry and finance capital will be in safe keeping.

Then see how resourcefully big capital is directing the election campaign. First the manipulations of the grain market. All of a sudden there was a general rise in prices of wheat and corn. The capitalist press seized upon this "news" to usher in a new era of prosperity for the farmers of the United States. Was it real prosperity for the toiling masses of the farms? Of course not. The only beneficiaries of this short-lived boom in the grain market were the grain speculators, big bankers and a small section of the rich farmers. But the psychological effect upon the farming masses was no doubt political confusion and hesitation, which was all that the big capitalists were aiming at.

Another example of the political strategy of big capital will be found in the recent decision of the federal supreme court "upholding" a provision in the Clayton Act which prescribes jury trial in certain contempt cases, namely, contempt cases which arise out of violations of anti-strike injunctions. On the face of it this ruling of the supreme court seems for workers who violate injunctions the right to a trial by jury. An important concession to labor, isn't it? The capitalist press is already sermonizing on the magnanimity and impartiality of the supreme court, attempting to prove that by this ruling the injunction ceases to be an unconstitutional method for breaking strikes.

But what is the truth? The power of the courts to issue injunctions has not been touched at all. The courts still enjoy that right. And once an injunction has been issued, all the powers of the government automatically come into operation to enforce the injunction, that is, to break the strike. Even upon superficial examination this ruling of the supreme court will be found to be nothing else but a political maneuver by big capital to confuse and demoralize the workers. Big capital is on the job. It knows what it wants and it knows how to get it.

Small and Medium Capital. The small and medium capitalists have become very conscious of late of their respective groups and sectional interests. They, too, know what they want, and are working pretty hard to get it. The LaFollette movement is a good indication.

As between the big and small capitalists, the latter are naturally less resourceful than the former in defending their interests, for the simple reason that small capital is not a dominating class. Economically it is completely in the hands of big capital. However, when driven by necessity to political action independent of the big capitalists, the smaller capitalists in alliance with the labor bureaucracy have managed to execute a maneuver which strengthens considerably the political power and prestige of the middle classes.

This is the LaFollette movement. Led and dominated by the petty bourgeoisie this movement has succeeded in drawing into its wake large sections of workers and poor farmers. The petty bourgeoisie is leading, the masses are following. And what is the result? The bourgeois middle classes are forging for themselves a political weapon to be used in their own interests and against the interests of the working class. Why, even now, when LaFollette still needs the votes of the workers, he finds it possible to say, in a speech delivered recently in Omaha, Nebraska, that he "will not indulge in ill-advised experiments with government ownership of railroads." What does it show? It shows that in order to placate the bourgeois middle classes LaFollette is even now ready to go back on his own platform, to repudiate the only plank in his program which deals with important labor legislation.

The middle classes, too, are preparing for the coming struggles. What About the Workers? They are not preparing. They think they have found a political movement—the LaFollette combination—which will stand by them in time of need. Empty dreams. Baseless hopes. Illusions that are bound to be shattered at the first touch of reality. The working masses of America are living in a fool's paradise.

Gompers and his crew don't have to worry. As long as they can continue in "labor" banking, in class-collaboration with the capitalists through various schemes of arbitration on the economic field and in alliances with the petty bourgeoisie on the political field, these agents of capital in the labor movement are safely entrenched in power. True, this power of theirs is not absolutely secure, but as long as the masses do not actually revolt and begin fighting on their own initiative, the Gompers crowd need not become hysterical.

But the masses will revolt. The industrial depression is continuing. Unemployment is growing. The general standard of living of the American working masses is going down. We are fast approaching a situation where capital in the United States will again resume the offensive in new wage-cuts and open-shop campaigns. What will the masses do?

They Will Demand Leadership. They will demand leadership in struggle, and they will find that leadership neither in the trade-union bureaucracy nor in the LaFollette movement. What will be the result? Spontaneous, unorganized struggles by the rank and file in defiance not only of the capitalists but also of the labor bureaucracy. The masses will be driven to fight irrespective of whether they have or they have not an organized and conscious leadership. They will create, if necessary, their own organs of struggle and will proceed to defend themselves.

What will be the duty of the Communists? What will be the task of the Workers Party? To assume leadership of these struggles. To assist and encourage the masses in resisting the offensive of capital by the creation of direct rank and file organs of struggle (shop-committees, councils of unemployed, labor congresses, etc.), by compelling the amalgamation of craft unions into militant industrial unions, and by assuming direct charge of the daily proletarian struggles against capital.

The workers of America are entering upon a period of sharp industrial and political conflicts with their old leadership completely bankrupt. The Workers Party, as the vanguard of the American working class, must therefore prepare itself in time for the fulfillment of its duties. In entering this election campaign under its own name and with its own program and candidates, the Workers Party has merely laid the basis for more militancy and a greater measure of self-assertion of the organized Communists of America in the everyday struggles of the American working class. In other words, we only made a beginning. Now, let us follow it up.

Edo Fimmen Exposes Anti-Soviet Lies

(Extract from a speech delivered by Edo Fimmen on the 12th of September at a sitting of the Presidium of the Railwaymen's Union in Moscow.)

I should have been very pleased had I been able to appear officially in the name of the Transport Workers' International at the negotiations with the R. I. L. U. but unfortunately there still exists in the International of Transport Workers a very strong section which is of the opinion that connections with the Russian organizations can only be set up under certain definite conditions. I am glad to have the opportunity of being in Moscow in order to become acquainted with the achievements of the Russian proletariat. I cannot at present give a definite opinion as to the impression which Moscow and Soviet Russia have made upon me. In spite of this I must say that everything which I have seen up to now has made a very great impression upon me. The first thing which came to my mind, was that the silly gossip one hears in Europe, that in Soviet Russia there exists not a dictatorship of the proletariat but a dictatorship over the proletariat, is a brazen lie. The European workers would be very glad if they could enjoy the same freedom as the workers in Soviet Russia.

I hope that the European workers, including the non-party and even the social democratic workers, will become more and more convinced that the bourgeois press and even a portion of the labor press is deceiving them regarding life in Soviet Russia. The broad masses of the workers will sooner or later learn the true state of affairs, and when these masses have learned the truth regarding Soviet Russia the struggle for the unity of the trade union movement will receive a great stimulus.

You know that two years ago I was still like all other leaders of the European trade union movement, an opponent of the Russian trade unions and of the Russian Revolution. Now, however, I am personally convinced that this was a great mistake. I will not say that everything which has been said in Soviet Russia regarding the West-European trade union movement, and everything which you have undertaken in relation to the European trade union movement, was right in every detail. Many mistakes were also committed on our side. Your impatience is quite understandable. The workers in the West have not shown so much courage, they have not made so many sacrifices as the Russian proletariat. There the trade unions are partly bound by tradition and partly by their leaders. There they still seriously believe that it is possible to achieve something by negotiations, by going cap in hand to the bourgeoisie. Therein lies the greatest mistake of the European trade union movement.

I understand therefore why the Russian proletariat so sharply criticize the leaders of the West-European trade unions. They have a right to criticize them so sharply. I myself became convinced of this in 1922, when I began to follow events in Germany. The bourgeoisie replied to the Hague Trade Union Peace Congress with the occupation of the Ruhr, and the European proletariat not only failed to take up the struggle for the liberation of the German proletariat, but it did not even make a single attempt to do so.

On the whole, I maintain that the Russian tactics were correct. It will only be possible to achieve anything when all sections of the trade union movement are working hand in hand. Only then will it be possible to overthrow the bourgeoisie and to establish Communism. When I arrived at this conviction I commenced the fight for unity. I set myself a definite aim and to this aim I will devote all my powers. I am convinced that unity must come, or else the labor movement is lost.

Two or three years ago there was in the Amsterdam International a united front against the Russian trade unions. Today the situation is otherwise. Today there exists in the Amsterdam International a revolutionary minority which considers it necessary to unite with the Russian trade unions. This minority varies from 10 to 40 per cent in the different organizations. But whatever it may be it is still a minority, and so long as it is only a minority, the Russian trade unions cannot be accepted.

With us in the Transport Workers International the situation is as follows: The question regarding admission of the Russian unions to the International Congress of the Transport Workers was dealt with at the sitting of the executive. The minority fought for admission, but the decision rested with the majority. This minority, however, is growing continually stronger and will soon be the majority; the International Transport Workers will then be pleased to admit the Russian unions into their ranks. I have devoted myself entirely to this struggle, I have entirely broken with the past and am convinced that we, along with the Russian organizations will be able to make a step forward on the road to world revolution.

"Pacific 231" Spurs Conventional Rules

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

"Pacific 231," a description of a locomotive in action, was the novelty on the program of the Chicago Symphony orchestra last Friday and Saturday. "Pacific 231" is the work of Arthur Honegger, one of the so-called French "Six," famed for their disregard of the conventionalities of music. The title is the name of a certain type of French heavy duty railway engine. He, and then "the change from the Honegger describes it chugging slowly to the pathetic" in the aspect of a train weighing three hundred tons rushing along at a hundred and twenty miles an hour. He does this by a tremendous, powerful crescendo. The only thing one misses in his description is the persistent, jolting rhythm of a train.

The symphony of the evening was Rachmaninov's second. This is far below the standard of the composer's other works. It is too long for one thing, and too reminiscent of Brahms at his plattitudinous worst.

Two lively and beautiful works opened and closed the concert, a fantastic bourée by Samuel Chabrier, and a set of dances from Borodin's "Prince Igor."
