

JURY SATISFACTORY TO ALL

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 6. Both sides seem to be well pleased with the jury in the Adams case. Attorney Knight, leading counsel for the prosecution, stated he was willing to leave the outcome of the case in the hands of the present jury.

Complexion of the Jury.

The jury and its occupation and politics are: M. Barto, Sucker Lake, rancher, and votes mixed ticket; Geo. Price, Post Falls, millhand, republican; C. A. Waters, Coeur d'Alenes boat captain, democrat; D. W. Gorwood, Lake creek, farmer, democrat; Charles Detemarl, Post Falls, merchant, democrat; S. A. Varnum, Coeur d'Alenes, carpenter, republican; John C. Corton, Rathdrum, farmer, democrat; P. A. McArthur, Mica Bay, farmer, republican; Milton Piper, Athol, farmer, democrat; Mathew Miller, Rathdrum, farmer, democrat; J. T. Harlan, Ross, farmer, democrat; H. F. House, Rathdrum, rancher, democrat.

Varnum was labor candidate for mayor at Coeur d'Alenes last spring. Miller, Dittmore and Horlan have been members of labor unions. Nine of the jurors have been homesteaders.

The state exercised all its peremptory rights while the defense used only seven peremptory challenges, passing the panel twice. Each time this privilege is employed it exhausts a peremptory, and when the jury was complete the defense had but one left in reality.

Clarence Darrow, leading counsel for the defense, entered objection to the state having 10 peremptory challenges, saying the law giving it this privilege was passed after Steve Adams was tried once and was expost facto. The objection was overruled. It was made on the third peremptory challenge of the state last week and met with the same fate. An exception was entered.

Trial Begins.

Wednesday morning the first witnesses were called by the prosecution. Mrs. Thomas, mother of Fred Tyler, was first on the stand, and related the facts about her family coming out from Michigan from the timber country—herself and two daughters and after wards Fred. She described the appearance of Tyler and the taking up of claims through a locator, one Jack Kuerstein.

Darrow's cross examination brought out that Tyler worked in the woods in Michigan that he had no money of his own but was furnished money to build his cabin and get supplies, and that the mother and sisters were to be located on claims in the same way.

In several of Tyler's letters he had written his mother not to worry about him. When Darrow asked her what there was to worry about, she said the wild animals in the woods where her son was going.

Darrow said, "Are you sure you were not afraid of the homesteaders instead of the congers?"

The evidence show that in all probability the Tylers were simply a family of jumpers brought out from the Michigan woods by B. R. Lewis to take up lands from the homesteaders for the big lumber capitalists.

B. R. Lewis is one of the vilest criminals that ever enriched himself in a new country by overriding the rights of the poor, stealing and law-breaking in order to obtain his riches. He is a banker and wealthy lumber man and has made himself rich by his crimes.

In one of Tyler's letters he said it was part of the bargain that they were to get medicine from Kuerstein, the locator.

Tyler's sister gave him a revolver to take with him on this trip, showing that he anticipated danger.

The mother said that Kuerstein had informed her that lawyers had been retained to take charge of the contests if there should be any.

Mr. Thomas, the stepfather of Tyler, told his tale of the events preceding Tyler's death, and identified the clothes, hair and skull, which were exhibited.

Darrow went after him strenuously on this testimony, and asked him how he could identify the hair as Tyler's when he admits that he could not identify his wife's or that of his sons. He attacked him on the shape of the skull in the same way. He also brought out that no post mortem examination was ever held, nor was there ever a coroner's jury.

Ida Crouch-Hazlett.

GOVERNMENT BY INJUNCTION

We are opposed to government by injunction. We are opposed to any method of jurisprudence which makes a czar of a judge, allows him to make arbitrary laws, and sentence men to jail for violation of his self made law. We are opposed to government by injunction because it deprives a man of the right of a trial by a jury of his peers. We do oppose and will oppose any and all acts of court or king subversive of democratic institutions and destructive of all liberty.

LATEST FROM SCENE OF BATTLE

Rathdrum, Nov. 10.

Mr. Millard, the uncle of Steve Adams, is an interesting figure at the trial. Steve was arrested on his ranch at Haines, Oregon, a short distance out from Baker City. The kind-hearted old gentleman is a fine specimen of the old soldier, having served through the civil war on the confederate side. He is 71 years of age but straight and vigorous with hair and beard yet dark. His mind has been so agitated by the shocking injustices he has perceived in connection with the arrest of his nephew that he has lost all faith in any justice or rectitude under this government. He has become entirely devoted to the progress of this case, and says he means to see it through no matter what it costs. He says his wife is equally determined to stay with the sad and tragic situation till its final issue.

As an instance of the kind heart of the old gentleman he not only has reared eight children of his own but besides these has provided and cared for ten orphan children till they were grown. He raised Steve and his two brothers, although they were fairly fairly well grown when their mother died.

Adams came from Park City, Utah, to his uncle's ranch in June. He had not been in hiding at all as the mine owners' side of this proposition has spread broadcast. He was arrested the next February. He was hauling hay when Steunenberg was killed. He had located a ranch near Baker City. His troubles and detention have very nearly caused him to lose it, but his uncle says he thinks he can save it for him.

After Orchard's "confession" a Caldwell attorney filed the complaint against Adams on which he was arrested. Detective Thiele went out and made the arrest and announced that he had "located" Adams, whereas it had never been the slightest difficulty to "locate" him. Instead of being taken to the Caldwell jail, he was taken straight through to Boise with his family and lodged in the penitentiary where he was kept for seven months without bail, and without a charge being lodged against him.

Closely Guarded.

No one was allowed to see him except the guards and the aristocrats of the Idaho republican administration—Gooding, Borah, Hawley and all that swarm of capitalist parasites. Three times his uncle tried to see him, but could never get to him except in the presence of the guards. His mail was all opened and read by the warden. He was shut off from any communication with the outside world or any confidential relations with his friends.

Immediately after the arrest of Adams, Mr. Millard, who was in Texas, wrote a former friend of his, one M. S. Bond, to get C. A. Moore, a lawyer of Baker City, and go to Boise and try and get bail for him. Moore and Bond went to see Gooding the first thing when they arrived at Boise.

Through some unexplained oversight Adams lay in the penitentiary a long time with no attention from the Federation. It was then that Gooding furnished the traitor Moore with money to go to Colorado and see the governor, and see if he could not obtain immunity for Adams, provided he would corroborate Orchard.

There can be no question about this latter instance as Moore admitted this in the office of ex-Governor Morrison before a number of witnesses.

Deep Plotted Conspiracy.

Adams was held without charge or preliminary examination until after his uncle got him out on a writ of habeas corpus through ex-Governor Morrison whom he employed as attorney.

The day of the irrigation congress Mr. Millard had asked to take dinner with his nephew in the penitentiary. To his surprise Warden Whitney granted the request, and he had a fine dinner with Steve and his family. This was the first time he had got to see him alone since his arrest.

Whitney called in during the visit and made this statement, "If Steve stays with the state and helps hang these men (referring to the Western Federation officials) he will be given complete immunity."

Torture Begins.

After this visit, on a pretense of searching Steve for anything that his uncle might have given him, he was stripped, taken from the woman's ward where he had been living in comparative comfort, and put in a murderer's cell. The Pinkerton scavengers were then admitted to him—the whole gang of harpies, Hawley, Gooding, McParlan, Thiele and all the rest.

Steve had been jailed for 93 days in Colorado at the time of the industrial troubles and was then turned out without any trial or charge. The hardships he endured then seem to have unerved him. When he was re-arrested, he was made to believe that he would be mobbed if taken back to Colorado.

When Thiele pretended to "locate" him, he phoned Brown, the sheriff at Baker City, who came out bringing several others with him. Brown said to Steve, "I am on the inside; do what they want you to, and you'll be back in a few days." At Mr. Millard's expense on the preceding trial Brown came to Wallace and testified to this for the defense. So one can see which side would have the incentive to blow him up, the Pinkertons or the defense.

In regard to the Phillips' yarn about dynamite being found in their yard in Spokane, it is fishy with a Pinkerton flavor from the start. If the tale were genuine why has no investigation been made. It is hardly likely that Thiele's Pinkertons would overlook a bet like that. Yet, no detectives have been put to work. And why 10 pounds with caps in a pail when one pound would blow up the whole neighborhood?

Forcing the Confession.

So far as the "confession" is concerned, Steve couldn't have written it if he had tried. He has no education. The human harpies fixed it up to suit themselves, took Steve to a notary, and he signed it. He thought he was gone anyway and it made no difference what he did.

Although Mr. Millard could not see his nephew alone, he could see him in the presence of Moore, the man who had betrayed him.

The real purpose of this whole shameful persecution is to get Steve to swear against the Colorado men, and thus support Orchard's wonderful revelations, otherwise unsupported.

The traitor Moore admits that Gooding, Borah and Hawley paid him a handsome fee.

Continued on Page 4.)

EVIDENCE FAVORABLE TO ADAMS

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 9.

Everything is encouraging for the defendant in the Steve Adams case so far. There is nothing that directly connects him with the crime of killing Fred Tyler, and the indirect evidence is only such as might be adduced in any frontier warfare; where there are two factions in a community that hate each other, and especially where there is so much at stake as a bitter contest of farmers and poor men who have settled on the land under the provisions of the government, to make homes for themselves, and have a place on God's green earth, and a bunch of robber jumpers paid by great capitalist interests to break the law and deprive the working class of their rights.

Steve was with his friend Simpkins whose claim had been jumped. Both were members of the Western Federation and that was enough to connect them with murders and dynamite according to that avenging angel of the Mine Owners' Association, Sleuth McParlan.

It is the opinion of those who have followed the chain of events closely that not a hair of Steve Adams' head will ever be touched. Not only is all evidence lacking against him but it is not believable that any jury of poor hard-working farmers in this country, as these men are, will ever bring in any verdict anywhere in favor of the timber robbers and against honest settlers.

Fair Trial.

The court proceedings are being conducted in as fair a manner as could be expected under a system of laws and institutions based upon the monumental crime of the despoilation of the working class and the robbery and murder of the highest hopes and opportunities of the human race.

Judge Woods is a very kind, pleasant man, and his rulings are giving the defendant the extreme latitude that the law allows him. No one can complain of his lack of courtesy to the attorneys for the defense. In fact he has said that Darrow was the strongest man he ever saw at the bar.

Very little interest is manifested in the case by the townspeople of Rathdrum, even the tiny courtroom being filled only a portion of the time.

Steve is being treated as well as could be expected under the circumstances. The sheriff has relaxed the close confinement in which he was held at first. It was having a very bad effect on the eyes of Adams, and finally the doctor said he would go blind unless he was given outdoor exercise, and now every day he may be seen out with Sheriff MacDonald or a bailiff taking a walk about town. He is always very neatly dressed, and as one meets the two men there is nothing to indicate that a desperate Federation murderer is walking loose around town.

Corrupting Capitalist Press.

The capitalist papers are doing exactly as they did in southern Idaho, using every sinister and vicious means to misrepresent the facts, malign the Federation, and prejudice the minds of the public against the Federation men through the avenues of this case. Every absurd and on the face of it fake tale is trotted out in sober earnest as reliable material. The Federation men are branded as criminals in every line of its prostituted reports. It is even rivaling the Statesman in its unprincipled fight against these working men and is making itself so obnoxious to the working class, and in fact all fair minded people throughout the Rathdrum community that its circulation has fallen off perceptibly.

In fact a movement is on foot to boycott it completely throughout this district. Its reporter, Statle, has aroused a great deal of antagonism and dislike not only by the utterly false reports he is printing but by his unpopular and bulldozing ways. It is even stated that he is one of the craftiest Pinkertons and spies employed against the Federation. Of a brutal and stocky physical demeanor, he is most insulting to the socialists about town, even using violence and offensive language. So unpopular is he that there is liable to be trouble over his presence at the trial as the representative of the Review.

The Rathdrum Tribune makes a feeble echo of its pace setter, the Review, aiming to prejudice and poison the minds of the people through its untruthful reports. It stated that the Spokesman reporter went on the stand and reiterated that Mrs. Hazlett had stated to him that she was going to Rathdrum to educate the Adams jury; a deliberate falsehood as the reporter had denied expressly that she said that, the statement being in the headlines which he admitted were written by another party. But what is a little one-horse capitalist sheet for that is starving on the ragged edge of syco-phancy if it is not to lickspittle to its capitalist bosses that feed it on the political crumbs from the plutocratic table.

Ida Crouch-Hazlett.

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 9.

On Thursday the prosecution undertook to introduce the testimony of her and Mrs. Archie Phillips that was given at the Wallace trial.

The Phillips people were jumpers from the Marble Creek district who gave the most emphatic evidence against Adams at the previous trial. They belonged to the crowd of claim jumpers who were banded together to deprive the lawful settlers of their rights. Prosecuting Attorney Knight made affidavit that the state had tried in every possible way to get these valuable witnesses to be present. But they had left the jurisdiction of the state and gone out of the country entirely and could not be found. Mr. Knight further affirmed that the Phillips people had stated that they had been so terrified by threats of violence, the attempted dynamiting of their home and other outrages that they feared to give any more testimony against the Federation members. Mrs. Phillips' health was in a state of nervous collapse and Phillips had lost his job and could not get work, and since the blowing up of Sheriff Brown, he thought the best thing he could do for himself was to get out of the country.

Heyburn, the Demagogue.

A sensation which was a veritable explosion of a political bomb in the Idaho situation, was caused by Knight reading a letter from Senator Heyburn relative to Phillips' appointment to a government job because of the service he had rendered the state by his testimony in the Adams case.

It seems that the understanding was that Phillips was to be rewarded for his zeal in behalf of the state in these cases by an appointment to a government position as timber cruiser upon the Coeur d'Alenes Indian reservation. C. J. Shoemaker, treasurer of Kootenai county, a political go-between, made application for Phillips to Senator Heyburn. But Heyburn had got wise. His party is after the scalps of the officials of the Federation, but he can't get along without their votes.

He knows the voting strength of the Federation in Idaho. Hence in spite of the service that claim jumper Phillips has rendered the state authorities in trying to bring about the conviction of Adams, Heyburn is suddenly struck by gripping pains in his hitherto elastic conscience and writes to Shoemaker that he has discovered that Phillips was a jumper, and a judgment was in court against him on that charge, and his appointment was out of the question.

It leaked out that Shoemaker himself was the man that wrote to the land office about Phillips, and thence informed Heyburn of the facts in the case. However, Heyburn throws Phillips overboard rather than go before the Federation voters with him as an incubus. According to the letter presented by Knight, Phillips gets it back by cutting his job as informer, and the Adams prosecution is left dangling in the air metaphorically where it is their dear desire to have Adams dangling physically.

Pinkertonish Rubbish.

The melodramatic phish of blood, thunder and brimstone, has the old Pinkerton flavor. But the frame-up was effective.

Violate Constitutional Right.

Mr. Darrow made vigorous protest against any documentary evidence being introduced against Adams where the defendant had no opportunity to face his answers. The judge sent the jury out and the case was argued. Knight said the parties were beyond the jurisdiction of the court. He had traced them to Portland, and from the best he could learn, they were now in British Columbia.

Mr. Knight made these statements under oath on the stand. Darrow asked him if when he was in Spokane hunting the dynamite, he saw Thiele, the detective also. Knight admitted that he talked to Thiele. Mr. Darrow then wanted to know if he had heard anything about who had killed our witness, Harvey Brown.

Judge McBell made the argument on the competency of absent witnesses. The Idaho statute carries no provision for such evidence. The right is a fundamental one derived from Magna Charta that a man accused must be faced by his accusers. The state has not this right, but a defendant has. The Idaho law is explicit and the utmost that can be done is to de-

(Continued on Page 2.)

MRS. HAZLETT ON TRIAL

On Friday, November 15, Mrs. Hazlett's trial comes off in the superior court at Spokane. The struggle she is making against the unjust tyranny and imposition of the capitalist courts is all the harder as Local Spokane, led by a number of would-be pseudo socialists, has deserted to the enemy.

This free speech struggle that the state of Washington is waging with the authorities is of the utmost importance to the future dissemination of the socialist doctrine. Whatever aid the fellow workers of Mrs. Hazlett can bring to the issue, will never be more needed. She is fighting this battle for us all, not in her own interest at all but against it, and certainly no one but a coward will leave her to bear the brunt of the fight alone.

If we cannot all be arrested and go to jail for maintaining the rights of a free people, we can loyally stand by and support those who do.

The report of the trial will be given our next issue.

JURY SATISFACTORY TO ALL

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 6. Both sides seem to be well pleased with the jury in the Adams case. Attorney Knight, leading counsel for the prosecution, stated he was willing to leave the outcome of the case in the hands of the present jury.

Complexion of the Jury.

The jury and its occupation and politics are: M. Barto, Sucker Lake, rancher, and votes mixed ticket; Geo. Price, Post Falls, millhand, republican; C. A. Waters, Coeur d'Alenes boat captain, democrat; D. W. Gorwood, Lake creek, farmer, democrat; Charles Detemarl, Post Falls, merchant, democrat; S. A. Varnum, Coeur d'Alenes, carpenter, republican; John C. Corton, Rathdrum, farmer, democrat; P. A. McArthur, Mica Bay, farmer, republican; Milton Piper, Athol, farmer, democrat; Mathew Miller, Rathdrum, farmer, democrat; J. T. Harlan, Ross, farmer, democrat; H. F. House, Rathdrum, rancher, democrat.

Varnum was labor candidate for mayor at Coeur d'Alenes last spring. Miller, Dittmore and Horlan have been members of labor unions. Nine of the jurors have been homesteaders.

The state exercised all its peremptory rights while the defense used only seven peremptory challenges, passing the panel twice. Each time this privilege is employed it exhausts a peremptory, and when the jury was complete the defense had but one left in reality.

Clarence Darrow, leading counsel for the defense, entered objection to the state having 10 peremptory challenges, saying the law giving it this privilege was passed after Steve Adams was tried once and was expost facto. The objection was overruled. It was made on the third peremptory challenge of the state last week and met with the same fate. An exception was entered.

Trial Begins.

Wednesday morning the first witnesses were called by the prosecution. Mrs. Thomas, mother of Fred Tyler, was first on the stand, and related the facts about her family coming out from Michigan from the timber country—herself and two daughters and after wards Fred. She described the appearance of Tyler and the taking up of claims through a locator, one Jack Kuerstein.

Darrow's cross examination brought out that Tyler worked in the woods in Michigan that he had no money of his own but was furnished money to build his cabin and get supplies, and that the mother and sisters were to be located on claims in the same way.

In several of Tyler's letters he had written his mother not to worry about him. When Darrow asked her what there was to worry about, she said the wild animals in the woods where her son was going.

Darrow said, "Are you sure you were not afraid of the homesteaders instead of the congers?"

The evidence show that in all probability the Tylers were simply a family of jumpers brought out from the Michigan woods by B. R. Lewis to take up lands from the homesteaders for the big lumber capitalists.

B. R. Lewis is one of the vilest criminals that ever enriched himself in a new country by overriding the rights of the poor, stealing and law-breaking in order to obtain his riches. He is a banker and wealthy lumber man and has made himself rich by his crimes.

In one of Tyler's letters he said it was part of the bargain that they were to get medicine from Kuerstein, the locator.

Tyler's sister gave him a revolver to take with him on this trip, showing that he anticipated danger.

The mother said that Kuerstein had informed her that lawyers had been retained to take charge of the contests if there should be any.

Mr. Thomas, the stepfather of Tyler, told his tale of the events preceding Tyler's death, and identified the clothes, hair and skull, which were exhibited.

Darrow went after him strenuously on this testimony, and asked him how he could identify the hair as Tyler's when he admits that he could not identify his wife's or that of his sons. He attacked him on the shape of the skull in the same way. He also brought out that no post mortem examination was ever held, nor was there ever a coroner's jury.

Ida Crouch-Hazlett.

GOVERNMENT BY INJUNCTION

We are opposed to government by injunction. We are opposed to any method of jurisprudence which makes a czar of a judge, allows him to make arbitrary laws, and sentence men to jail for violation of his self made law. We are opposed to government by injunction because it deprives a man of the right of a trial by a jury of his peers. We do oppose and will oppose any and all acts of court or king subversive of democratic institutions and destructive of all liberty.

LATEST FROM SCENE OF BATTLE

Rathdrum, Nov. 10.

Mr. Millard, the uncle of Steve Adams, is an interesting figure at the trial. Steve was arrested on his ranch at Haines, Oregon, a short distance out from Baker City. The kind-hearted old gentleman is a fine specimen of the old soldier, having served through the civil war on the confederate side. He is 71 years of age but straight and vigorous with hair and beard yet dark. His mind has been so agitated by the shocking injustices he has perceived in connection with the arrest of his nephew that he has lost all faith in any justice or rectitude under this government. He has become entirely devoted to the progress of this case, and says he means to see it through no matter what it costs. He says his wife is equally determined to stay with the sad and tragic situation till its final issue.

As an instance of the kind heart of the old gentleman he not only has reared eight children of his own but besides these has provided and cared for ten orphan children till they were grown. He raised Steve and his two brothers, although they were fairly fairly well grown when their mother died.

Adams came from Park City, Utah, to his uncle's ranch in June. He had not been in hiding at all as the mine owners' side of this proposition has spread broadcast. He was arrested the next February. He was hauling hay when Steunenberg was killed. He had located a ranch near Baker City. His troubles and detention have very nearly caused him to lose it, but his uncle says he thinks he can save it for him.

After Orchard's "confession" a Caldwell attorney filed the complaint against Adams on which he was arrested. Detective Thiele went out and made the arrest and announced that he had "located" Adams, whereas it had never been the slightest difficulty to "locate" him. Instead of being taken to the Caldwell jail, he was taken straight through to Boise with his family and lodged in the penitentiary where he was kept for seven months without bail, and without a charge being lodged against him.

Closely Guarded.

No one was allowed to see him except the guards and the aristocrats of the Idaho republican administration—Gooding, Borah, Hawley and all that swarm of capitalist parasites. Three times his uncle tried to see him, but could never get to him except in the presence of the guards. His mail was all opened and read by the warden. He was shut off from any communication with the outside world or any confidential relations with his friends.

Immediately after the arrest of Adams, Mr. Millard, who was in Texas, wrote a former friend of his, one M. S. Bond, to get C. A. Moore, a lawyer of Baker City, and go to Boise and try and get bail for him. Moore and Bond went to see Gooding the first thing when they arrived at Boise.

Through some unexplained oversight Adams lay in the penitentiary a long time with no attention from the Federation. It was then that Gooding furnished the traitor Moore with money to go to Colorado and see the governor, and see if he could not obtain immunity for Adams, provided he would corroborate Orchard.

There can be no question about this latter instance as Moore admitted this in the office of ex-Governor Morrison before a number of witnesses.

Deep Plotted Conspiracy.

Adams was held without charge or preliminary examination until after his uncle got him out on a writ of habeas corpus through ex-Governor Morrison whom he employed as attorney.

The day of the irrigation congress Mr. Millard had asked to take dinner with his nephew in the penitentiary. To his surprise Warden Whitney granted the request, and he had a fine dinner with Steve and his family. This was the first time he had got to see him alone since his arrest.

Whitney called in during the visit and made this statement, "If Steve stays with the state and helps hang these men (referring to the Western Federation officials) he will be given complete immunity."

Torture Begins.

After this visit, on a pretense of searching Steve for anything that his uncle might have given him, he was stripped, taken from the woman's ward where he had been living in comparative comfort, and put in a murderer's cell. The Pinkerton scavengers were then admitted to him—the whole gang of harpies, Hawley, Gooding, McParlan, Thiele and all the rest.

Steve had been jailed for 93 days in Colorado at the time of the industrial troubles and was then turned out without any trial or charge. The hardships he endured then seem to have unerved him. When he was re-arrested, he was made to believe that he would be mobbed if taken back to Colorado.

When Thiele pretended to "locate" him, he phoned Brown, the sheriff at Baker City, who came out bringing several others with him. Brown said to Steve, "I am on the inside; do what they want you to, and you'll be back in a few days." At Mr. Millard's expense on the preceding trial Brown came to Wallace and testified to this for the defense. So one can see which side would have the incentive to blow him up, the Pinkertons or the defense.

In regard to the Phillips' yarn about dynamite being found in their yard in Spokane, it is fishy with a Pinkerton flavor from the start. If the tale were genuine why has no investigation been made. It is hardly likely that Thiele's Pinkertons would overlook a bet like that. Yet, no detectives have been put to work. And why 10 pounds with caps in a pail when one pound would blow up the whole neighborhood?

Forcing the Confession.

So far as the "confession" is concerned, Steve couldn't have written it if he had tried. He has no education. The human harpies fixed it up to suit themselves, took Steve to a notary, and he signed it. He thought he was gone anyway and it made no difference what he did.

Although Mr. Millard could not see his nephew alone, he could see him in the presence of Moore, the man who had betrayed him.

The real purpose of this whole shameful persecution is to get Steve to swear against the Colorado men, and thus support Orchard's wonderful revelations, otherwise unsupported.

The traitor Moore admits that Gooding, Borah and Hawley paid him a handsome fee.

Continued on Page 4.

EVIDENCE FAVORABLE TO ADAMS

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 9.

Everything is encouraging for the defendant in the Steve Adams case so far. There is nothing that directly connects him with the crime of killing Fred Tyler, and the indirect evidence is only such as might be adduced in any frontier warfare; where there are two factions in a community that hate each other, and especially where there is so much at stake as a bitter contest of farmers and poor men who have settled on the land under the provisions of the government, to make homes for themselves, and have a place on God's green earth, and a bunch of robber jumpers paid by great capitalistic interests to break the law and deprive the working class of their rights.

Steve was with his friend Simpkins whose claim had been jumped. Both were members of the Western Federation and that was enough to connect them with murders and dynamite according to that avenging angel of the Mine Owners' Association, Sleuth McParlan.

It is the opinion of those who have followed the chain of events closely that not a hair of Steve Adams' head will ever be touched. Not only is all evidence lacking against him but it is not believable that any jury of poor hard-working farmers in this country, as these men are, will ever bring in any verdict anywhere in favor of the timber robbers and against honest settlers.

Fair Trial.

The court proceedings are being conducted in as fair a manner as could be expected under a system of laws and institutions based upon the monumental crime of the despoilation of the working class and the robbery and murder of the highest hopes and opportunities of the human race.

Judge Woods is a very kind, pleasant man, and his rulings are giving the defendant the extreme latitude that the law allows him. No one can complain of his lack of courtesy to the attorneys for the defense. In fact he has said that Darrow was the strongest man he ever saw at the bar.

Very little interest is manifested in the case by the townspeople of Rathdrum, even the tiny courtroom being filled only a portion of the time.

Steve is being treated as well as could be expected under the circumstances. The sheriff has relaxed the close confinement in which he was held at first. It was having a very bad effect on the eyes of Adams, and finally the doctor said he would go blind unless he was given outdoor exercise, and now every day he may be seen out with Sheriff MacDonald or a bailiff taking a walk about town. He is always very neatly dressed, and as one meets the two men there is nothing to indicate that a desperate Federation murderer is walking loose around town.

Corrupting Capitalist Press.

The capitalist papers are doing exactly as they did in southern Idaho, using every sinister and vicious means to misrepresent the facts, malign the Federation, and prejudice the minds of the public against the Federation men through the avenues of this case. Every absurd and on the face of it fake tale is trotted out in sober earnest as reliable material. The Federation men are branded as criminals in every line of its prostituted reports. It is even rivaling the Statesman in its unprincipled fight against these working men and is making itself so obnoxious to the working class, and in fact all fair minded people throughout the Rathdrum community that its circulation has fallen off perceptibly.

In fact a movement is on foot to boycott it completely throughout this district. Its reporter, Statle, has aroused a great deal of antagonism and dislike not only by the utterly false reports he is printing but by his unpopular and bulldozing ways. It is even stated that he is one of the craftiest Pinkertons and spies employed against the Federation. Of a brutal and stocky physical demeanor, he is most insulting to the socialists about town, even using violence and offensive language. So unpopular is he that there is liable to be trouble over his presence at the trial as the representative of the Review.

The Rathdrum Tribune makes a feeble echo of its pace setter, the Review, aiming to prejudice and poison the minds of the people through its untruthful reports. It stated that the Spokesman reporter went on the stand and reiterated that Mrs. Hazlett had stated to him that she was going to Rathdrum to educate the Adams jury; a deliberate falsehood as the reporter had denied expressly that she said that, the statement being in the headlines which he admitted were written by another party. But what is a little one-horse capitalist sheet for that is starving on the ragged edge of syco-phancy if it is not to lickspittle to its capitalist bosses that feed it on the political crumbs from the plutocratic table.

Ida Crouch-Hazlett.

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 9.

On Thursday the prosecution undertook to introduce the testimony of her and Mrs. Archie Phillips that was given at the Wallace trial.

The Phillips people were jumpers from the Marble Creek district who gave the most emphatic evidence against Adams at the previous trial. They belonged to the crowd of claim jumpers who were banded together to deprive the lawful settlers of their rights. Prosecuting Attorney Knight made affidavit that the state had tried in every possible way to get these valuable witnesses to be present. But they had left the jurisdiction of the state and gone out of the country entirely and could not be found. Mr. Knight further affirmed that the Phillips people had stated that they had been so terrified by threats of violence, the attempted dynamiting of their home and other outrages that they feared to give any more testimony against the Federation members. Mrs. Phillips' health was in a state of nervous collapse and Phillips had lost his job and could not get work, and since the blowing up of Sheriff Brown, he thought the best thing he could do for himself was to get out of the country.

Heyburn, the Demagogue.

A sensation which was a veritable explosion of a political bomb in the Idaho situation, was caused by Knight reading a letter from Senator Heyburn relative to Phillips' appointment to a government job because of the service he had rendered the state by his testimony in the Adams case.

It seems that the understanding was that Phillips was to be rewarded for his zeal in behalf of the state in these cases by an appointment to a government position as timber cruiser upon the Coeur d'Alenes Indian reservation. C. J. Shoemaker, treasurer of Kootenai county, a political go-between, made application for Phillips to Senator Heyburn. But Heyburn had got wise. His party is after the scalps of the officials of the Federation, but he can't get along without their votes. He knows the voting strength of the Federation in Idaho. Hence in spite of the service that claim jumper Phillips has rendered the state authorities in trying to bring about the conviction of Adams, Heyburn is suddenly struck by gripping pains in his hitherto elastic conscience and writes to Shoemaker that he has discovered that Phillips was a jumper, and a judgment was in court against him on that charge, and his appointment was out of the question.

It leaked out that Shoemaker himself was the man that wrote to the land office about Phillips, and thence informed Heyburn of the facts in the case. However, Heyburn throws Phillips overboard rather than go before the Federation voters with him as an incubus. According to the letter presented by Knight, Phillips gets it back by cutting his job as informer, and the Adams prosecution is left dangling in the air metaphorically where it is their dear desire to have Adams dangling physically.

Pinkertonish Rubbish.

The melodramatic phish of blood, thunder and brimstone, has the old Pinkerton flavor. But the frame-up was effective.

Violate Constitutional Right.

Mr. Darrow made vigorous protest against any documentary evidence being introduced against Adams where the defendant had no opportunity to face his answers. The judge sent the jury out and the case was argued. Knight said the parties were beyond the jurisdiction of the court. He had traced them to Portland, and from the best he could learn, they were now in British Columbia.

Mr. Knight made these statements under oath on the stand. Darrow asked him if when he was in Spokane hunting the dynamite, he saw Thiele, the detective also. Knight admitted that he talked to Thiele. Mr. Darrow then wanted to know if he had heard anything about who had killed our witness, Harvey Brown.

Judge McBell made the argument on the competency of absent witnesses. The Idaho statute carries no provision for such evidence. The right is a fundamental one derived from Magna Charta that a man accused must be faced by his accusers. The state has not this right, but a defendant has. The Idaho law is explicit and the utmost that can be done is to de-

(Continued on Page 2.)

MRS. HAZLETT ON TRIAL

On Friday, November 15, Mrs. Hazlett's trial comes off in the superior court at Spokane. The struggle she is making against the unjust tyranny and imposition of the capitalist courts is all the harder as Local Spokane, led by a number of would-be pseudo socialists, has deserted to the enemy.

This free speech struggle that the state of Washington is waging with the authorities is of the utmost importance to the future dissemination of the socialist doctrine. Whatever aid the fellow workers of Mrs. Hazlett can bring to the issue, will never be more needed. She is fighting this battle for us all, not in her own interest at all but against it, and certainly no one but a coward will leave her to bear the brunt of the fight alone.

If we cannot all be arrested and go to jail for maintaining the rights of a free people, we can loyally stand by and support those who do.

The report of the trial will be given our next issue.

JURY SATISFACTORY TO ALL

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 6. Both sides seem to be well pleased with the jury in the Adams case. Attorney Knight, leading counsel for the prosecution, stated he was willing to leave the outcome of the case in the hands of the present jury.

Complexion of the Jury.

The jury and its occupation and politics are: M. Barto, Sucker Lake, rancher, and votes mixed ticket; Geo. Price, Post Falls, millhand, republican; C. A. Waters, Coeur d'Alenes boat captain, democrat; D. W. Gorwood, Lake creek, farmer, democrat; Charles Detemarl, Post Falls, merchant, democrat; S. A. Varnum, Coeur d'Alenes, carpenter, republican; John C. Corton, Rathdrum, farmer, democrat; P. A. McArthur, Mica Bay, farmer, republican; Milton Piper, Athol, farmer, democrat; Mathew Miller, Rathdrum, farmer, democrat; J. T. Harlan, Ross, farmer, democrat; H. F. House, Rathdrum, rancher, democrat.

Varnum was labor candidate for mayor at Coeur d'Alenes last spring. Miller, Dittmore and Horlan have been members of labor unions. Nine of the jurors have been homesteaders.

The state exercised all its peremptory rights while the defense used only seven peremptory challenges, passing the panel twice. Each time this privilege is employed it exhausts a peremptory, and when the jury was complete the defense had but one left in reality.

Clarence Darrow, leading counsel for the defense, entered objection to the state having 10 peremptory challenges, saying the law giving it this privilege was passed after Steve Adams was tried once and was expost facto. The objection was overruled. It was made on the third peremptory challenge of the state last week and met with the same fate. An exception was entered.

Trial Begins.

Wednesday morning the first witnesses were called by the prosecution. Mrs. Thomas, mother of Fred Tyler, was first on the stand, and related the facts about her family coming out from Michigan from the timber country—herself and two daughters and after wards Fred. She described the appearance of Tyler and the taking up of claims through a locator, one Jack Kuerstein.

Darrow's cross examination brought out that Tyler worked in the woods in Michigan that he had no money of his own but was furnished money to build his cabin and get supplies, and that the mother and sisters were to be located on claims in the same way.

In several of Tyler's letters he had written his mother not to worry about him. When Darrow asked her what there was to worry about, she said the wild animals in the woods where her son was going.

Darrow said, "Are you sure you were not afraid of the homesteaders instead of the coppers?"

The evidence show that in all probability the Tylers were simply a family of jumpers brought out from the Michigan woods by B. R. Lewis to take up lands from the homesteaders for the big lumber capitalists.

B. R. Lewis is one of the vilest criminals that ever enriched himself in a new country by overriding the rights of the poor, stealing and law-breaking in order to obtain his riches. He is a banker and wealthy lumber man and has made himself rich by his crimes.

In one of Tyler's letters he said it was part of the bargain that they were to get medicine from Kuerstein, the locator.

Tyler's sister gave him a revolver to take with him on this trip, showing that he anticipated danger.

The mother said that Kuerstein had informed her that lawyers had been retained to take charge of the contests if there should be any.

Mr. Thomas, the stepfather of Tyler, told his tale of the events preceding Tyler's death, and identified the clothes, hair and skull, which were exhibited.

Darrow went after him strenuously on this testimony, and asked him how he could identify the hair as Tyler's when he admits that he could not identify his wife's or that of his sons. He attacked him on the shape of the skull in the same way. He also brought out that no post mortem examination was ever held, nor was there ever a coroner's jury.

Ida Crouch-Hazlett.

GOVERNMENT BY INJUNCTION

We are opposed to government by injunction. We are opposed to any method of jurisprudence which makes a czar of a judge, allows him to make arbitrary laws, and sentence men to jail for violation of his self made law. We are opposed to government by injunction because it deprives a man of the right of a trial by a jury of his peers. We do oppose and will oppose any and all acts of court or king subversive of democratic institutions and destructive of all liberty.

LATEST FROM SCENE OF BATTLE

Rathdrum, Nov. 10.

Mr. Millard, the uncle of Steve Adams, is an interesting figure at the trial. Steve was arrested on his ranch at Haines, Oregon, a short distance out from Baker City. The kind-hearted old gentleman is a fine specimen of the old soldier, having served through the civil war on the confederate side. He is 71 years of age but straight and vigorous with hair and beard yet dark. His mind has been so agitated by the shocking injustices he has perceived in connection with the arrest of his nephew that he has lost all faith in any justice or rectitude under this government. He has become entirely devoted to the progress of this case, and says he means to see it through no matter what it costs. He says his wife is equally determined to stay with the sad and tragic situation till its final issue.

As an instance of the kind heart of the old gentleman he not only has reared eight children of his own but besides these has provided and cared for ten orphan children till they were grown. He raised Steve and his two brothers, although they were fairly fairly well grown when their mother died.

Adams came from Park City, Utah, to his uncle's ranch in June. He had not been in hiding at all as the mine owners' side of this proposition has spread broadcast. He was arrested the next February. He was hauling hay when Steunenberg was killed. He had located a ranch near Baker City. His troubles and detention have very nearly caused him to lose it, but his uncle says he thinks he can save it for him.

After Orchard's "confession" a Caldwell attorney filed the complaint against Adams on which he was arrested. Detective Thiele went out and made the arrest and announced that he had "located" Adams, whereas it had never been the slightest difficulty to "locate" him. Instead of being taken to the Caldwell jail, he was taken straight through to Boise with his family and lodged in the penitentiary where he was kept for seven months without bail, and without a charge being lodged against him.

Closely Guarded.

No one was allowed to see him except the guards and the aristocrats of the Idaho republican administration—Gooding, Borah, Hawley and all that swarm of capitalist parasites. Three times his uncle tried to see him, but could never get to him except in the presence of the guards. His mail was all opened and read by the warden. He was shut off from any communication with the outside world or any confidential relations with his friends.

Immediately after the arrest of Adams, Mr. Millard, who was in Texas, wrote a former friend of his, one M. S. Bond, to get C. A. Moore, a lawyer of Baker City, and go to Boise and try and get bail for him. Moore and Bond went to see Gooding the first thing when they arrived at Boise.

Through some unexplained oversight Adams lay in the penitentiary a long time with no attention from the Federation. It was then that Gooding furnished the traitor Moore with money to go to Colorado and see the governor, and see if he could not obtain immunity for Adams, provided he would corroborate Orchard.

There can be no question about this latter instance as Moore admitted this in the office of ex-Governor Morrison before a number of witnesses.

Deep Plotted Conspiracy.

Adams was held without charge or preliminary examination until after his uncle got him out on a writ of habeas corpus through ex-Governor Morrison whom he employed as attorney.

The day of the irrigation congress Mr. Millard had asked to take dinner with his nephew in the penitentiary. To his surprise Warden Whitney granted the request, and he had a fine dinner with Steve and his family. This was the first time he had got to see him alone since his arrest.

Whitney called in during the visit and made this statement, "If Steve stays with the state and helps hang these men (referring to the Western Federation officials) he will be given complete immunity."

Torture Begins.

After this visit, on a pretense of searching Steve for anything that his uncle might have given him, he was stripped, taken from the woman's ward where he had been living in comparative comfort, and put in a murderer's cell. The Pinkerton scavengers were then admitted to him—the whole gang of harpies, Hawley, Gooding, McParlan, Thiele and all the rest.

Steve had been jailed for 93 days in Colorado at the time of the industrial troubles and was then turned out without any trial or charge. The hardships he endured then seem to have unerved him. When he was re-arrested, he was made to believe that he would be mobbed if taken back to Colorado.

When Thiele pretended to "locate" him, he phoned Brown, the sheriff at Baker City, who came out bringing several others with him. Brown said to Steve, "I am on the inside; do what they want you to, and you'll be back in a few days." At Mr. Millard's expense on the preceding trial Brown came to Wallace and testified to this for the defense. So one can see which side would have the incentive to blow him up, the Pinkertons or the defense.

In regard to the Phillips' yarn about dynamite being found in their yard in Spokane, it is fishy with a Pinkerton flavor from the start. If the tale were genuine why has no investigation been made. It is hardly likely that Thiele's Pinkertons would overlook a bet like that. Yet, no detectives have been put to work. And why 10 pounds with caps in a pail when one pound would blow up the whole neighborhood?

Forcing the Confession.

So far as the "confession" is concerned, Steve couldn't have written it if he had tried. He has no education. The human harpies fixed it up to suit themselves, took Steve to a notary, and he signed it. He thought he was gone anyway and it made no difference what he did.

Although Mr. Millard could not see his nephew alone, he could see him in the presence of Moore, the man who had betrayed him.

The real purpose of this whole shameful persecution is to get Steve to swear against the Colorado men, and thus support Orchard's wonderful revelations, otherwise unsupported.

The traitor Moore admits that Gooding, Borah and Hawley paid him a handsome fee.

Continued on Page 4.

EVIDENCE FAVORABLE TO ADAMS

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 9.

Everything is encouraging for the defendant in the Steve Adams case so far. There is nothing that directly connects him with the crime of killing Fred Tyler, and the indirect evidence is only such as might be adduced in any frontier warfare; where there are two factions in a community that hate each other, and especially where there is so much at stake as a bitter contest of farmers and poor men who have settled on the land under the provisions of the government, to make homes for themselves, and have a place on God's green earth, and a bunch of robber jumpers paid by great capitalist interests to break the law and deprive the working class of their rights.

Steve was with his friend Simpkins whose claim had been jumped. Both were members of the Western Federation and that was enough to connect them with murders and dynamite according to that avenging angel of the Mine Owners' Association, Sleuth McParlan.

It is the opinion of those who have followed the chain of events closely that not a hair of Steve Adams' head will ever be touched. Not only is all evidence lacking against him but it is not believeable that any jury of poor hard-working farmers in this country, as these men are, will ever bring in any verdict anywhere in favor of the timber robbers and against honest settlers.

Fair Trial.

The court proceedings are being conducted in as fair a manner as could be expected under a system of laws and institutions based upon the monumental crime of the despoilation of the working class and the robbery and murder of the highest hopes and opportunities of the human race.

Judge Woods is a very kind, pleasant man, and his rulings are giving the defendant the extreme latitude that the law allows him. No one can complain of his lack of courtesy to the attorneys for the defense. In fact he has said that Darrow was the strongest man he ever saw at the bar.

Very little interest is manifested in the case by the townspeople of Rathdrum, even the tiny courtroom being filled only a portion of the time.

Steve is being treated as well as could be expected under the circumstances. The sheriff has relaxed the close confinement in which he was held at first. It was having a very bad effect on the eyes of Adams, and finally the doctor said he would go blind unless he was given outdoor exercise, and now every day he may be seen out with Sheriff MacDonald or a bailiff taking a walk about town. He is always very neatly dressed, and as one meets the two men there is nothing to indicate that a desperate Federation murderer is walking loose around town.

Corrupting Capitalist Press.

The capitalist papers are doing exactly as they did in southern Idaho, using every sinister and vicious means to misrepresent the facts, malign the Federation, and prejudice the minds of the public against the Federation men through the avenues of this case. Every absurd and on the face of it fake tale is trotted out in sober earnest as reliable material. The Federation men are branded as criminals in every line of its prostituted reports. It is even rivaling the Statesman in its unprincipled fight against these working men and is making itself so obnoxious to the working class, and in fact all fair minded people throughout the Rathdrum community that its circulation has fallen off perceptibly.

In fact a movement is on foot to boycott it completely throughout this district. Its reporter, Statle, has aroused a great deal of antagonism and dislike not only by the utterly false reports he is printing but by his unpopular and bulldozing ways. It is even stated that he is one of the craftiest Pinkertons and spies employed against the Federation. Of a brutal and stocky physical demeanor, he is most insulting to the socialists about town, even using violence and offensive language. So unpopular is he that there is liable to be trouble over his presence at the trial as the representative of the Review.

The Rathdrum Tribune makes a feeble echo of its pace setter, the Review, aiming to prejudice and poison the minds of the people through its untruthful reports. It stated that the Spokesman reporter went on the stand and reiterated that Mrs. Hazlett had stated to him that she was going to Rathdrum to educate the Adams jury; a deliberate falsehood as the reporter had denied expressly that she said that, the statement being in the headlines which he admitted were written by another party. But what is a little one-horse capitalist sheet for that is starring on the ragged edge of sycophancy if it is not to lickspittle to its capitalist bosses that feed it on the political crumbs from the plutocratic table.

Ida Crouch-Hazlett.

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 9.

On Thursday the prosecution undertook to introduce the testimony of her and Mrs. Archie Phillips that was given at the Wallace trial.

The Phillips people were jumpers from the Marble Creek district who gave the most emphatic evidence against Adams at the previous trial. They belonged to the crowd of claim jumpers who were banded together to deprive the lawful settlers of their rights. Prosecuting Attorney Knight made affidavit that the state had tried in every possible way to get these valuable witnesses to be present. But they had left the jurisdiction of the state and gone out of the country entirely and could not be found. Mr. Knight further affirmed that the Phillips people had stated that they had been so terrified by threats of violence, the attempted dynamiting of their home and other outrages that they feared to give any more testimony against the Federation members. Mrs. Phillips' health was in a state of nervous collapse and Phillips had lost his job and could not get work, and since the blowing up of Sheriff Brown, he thought the best thing he could do for himself was to get out of the country.

Heyburn, the Demagogue.

A sensation which was a veritable explosion of a political bomb in the Idaho situation, was caused by Knight reading a letter from Senator Heyburn relative to Phillips' appointment to a government job because of the service he had rendered the state by his testimony in the Adams case.

It seems that the understanding was that Phillips was to be rewarded for his zeal in behalf of the state in these cases by an appointment to a government position as timber cruiser upon the Coeur d'Alenes Indian reservation. C. J. Shoemaker, treasurer of Kootenai county, a political go-between, made application for Phillips to Senator Heyburn. But Heyburn had got wise. His party is after the scalps of the officials of the Federation, but he can't get along without their votes. He knows the voting strength of the Federation in Idaho. Hence in spite of the service that claim jumper Phillips has rendered the state authorities in trying to bring about the conviction of Adams, Heyburn is suddenly struck by gripping pains in his hitherto elastic conscience and writes to Shoemaker that he has discovered that Phillips was a jumper, and a judgment was in court against him on that charge, and his appointment was out of the question.

It leaked out that Shoemaker himself was the man that wrote to the land office about Phillips, and thence informed Heyburn of the facts in the case. However, Heyburn throws Phillips overboard rather than go before the Federation voters with him as an incubus. According to the letter presented by Knight, Phillips gets it back by cutting his job as informer, and the Adams prosecution is left dangling in the air metaphorically where it is their dear desire to have Adams dangling physically.

Pinkertonish Rubbish.

The melodramatic phrase of blood, thunder and brimstone, has the old Pinkerton flavor. But the frame-up was effective.

Violate Constitutional Right.

Mr. Darrow made vigorous protest against any documentary evidence being introduced against Adams where the defendant had no opportunity to face his answers. The judge sent the jury out and the case was argued. Knight said the parties were beyond the jurisdiction of the court. He had traced them to Portland, and from the best he could learn, they were now in British Columbia.

Mr. Knight made these statements under oath on the stand. Darrow asked him if when he was in Spokane hunting the dynamite, he saw Thiele, the detective also. Knight admitted that he talked to Thiele. Mr. Darrow then wanted to know if he had heard anything about who had killed our witness, Harvey Brown.

Judge McBell made the argument on the competency of absent witnesses. The Idaho statute carries no provision for such evidence. The right is a fundamental one derived from Magna Charta that a man accused must be faced by his accusers. The state has not this right, but a defendant has. The Idaho law is explicit and the utmost that can be done is to de-

(Continued on Page 2.)

MRS. HAZLETT ON TRIAL

On Friday, November 15, Mrs. Hazlett's trial comes off in the superior court at Spokane. The struggle she is making against the unjust tyranny and imposition of the capitalist courts is all the harder as Local Spokane, led by a number of would-be pseudo socialists, has deserted to the enemy.

This free speech struggle that the state of Washington is waging with the authorities is of the utmost importance to the future dissemination of the socialist doctrine. Whatever aid the fellow workers of Mrs. Hazlett can bring to the issue, will never be more needed. She is fighting this battle for us all, not in her own interest at all but against it, and certainly no one but a coward will leave her to bear the brunt of the fight alone.

If we cannot all be arrested and go to jail for maintaining the rights of a free people, we can loyally stand by and support those who do.

The report of the trial will be given our next issue.

JURY SATISFACTORY TO ALL

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 6. Both sides seem to be well pleased with the jury in the Adams case. Attorney Knight, leading counsel for the prosecution, stated he was willing to leave the outcome of the case in the hands of the present jury.

Complexion of the Jury.

The jury and its occupation and politics are: M. Barto, Sucker Lake, rancher, and votes mixed ticket; Geo. Price, Post Falls, millhand, republican; C. A. Waters, Coeur d'Alenes boat captain, democrat; D. W. Gorwood, Lake creek, farmer, democrat; Charles Detemarl, Post Falls, merchant, democrat; S. A. Varnum, Coeur d'Alenes, carpenter, republican; John C. Corton, Rathdrum, farmer, democrat; P. A. McArthur, Mica Bay, farmer, republican; Milton Piper, Athol, farmer, democrat; Mathew Miller, Rathdrum, farmer, democrat; J. T. Harlan, Ross, farmer, democrat; H. F. House, Rathdrum, rancher, democrat.

Varnum was labor candidate for mayor at Coeur d'Alenes last spring. Miller, Dittmore and Horlan have been members of labor unions. Nine of the jurors have been homesteaders.

The state exercised all its peremptory rights while the defense used only seven peremptory challenges, passing the panel twice. Each time this privilege is employed it exhausts a peremptory, and when the jury was complete the defense had but one left in reality.

Clarence Darrow, leading counsel for the defense, entered objection to the state having 10 peremptory challenges, saying the law giving it this privilege was passed after Steve Adams was tried once and was expost facto. The objection was overruled. It was made on the third peremptory challenge of the state last week and met with the same fate. An exception was entered.

Trial Begins.

Wednesday morning the first witnesses were called by the prosecution. Mrs. Thomas, mother of Fred Tyler, was first on the stand, and related the facts about her family coming out from Michigan from the timber country—herself and two daughters and after wards Fred. She described the appearance of Tyler and the taking up of claims through a locator, one Jack Kuerstein.

Darrow's cross examination brought out that Tyler worked in the woods in Michigan that he had no money of his own but was furnished money to build his cabin and get supplies, and that the mother and sisters were to be located on claims in the same way.

In several of Tyler's letters he had written his mother not to worry about him. When Darrow asked her what there was to worry about, she said the wild animals in the woods where her son was going.

Darrow said, "Are you sure you were not afraid of the homesteaders instead of the congers?"

The evidence show that in all probability the Tylers were simply a family of jumpers brought out from the Michigan woods by B. R. Lewis to take up lands from the homesteaders for the big lumber capitalists.

B. R. Lewis is one of the vilest criminals that ever enriched himself in a new country by overriding the rights of the poor, stealing and law-breaking in order to obtain his riches. He is a banker and wealthy lumber man and has made himself rich by his crimes.

In one of Tyler's letters he said it was part of the bargain that they were to get medicine from Kuerstein, the locator.

Tyler's sister gave him a revolver to take with him on this trip, showing that he anticipated danger.

The mother said that Kuerstein had informed her that lawyers had been retained to take charge of the contests if there should be any.

Mr. Thomas, the stepfather of Tyler, told his tale of the events preceding Tyler's death, and identified the clothes, hair and skull, which were exhibited.

Darrow went after him strenuously on this testimony, and asked him how he could identify the hair as Tyler's when he admits that he could not identify his wife's or that of his sons. He attacked him on the shape of the skull in the same way. He also brought out that no post mortem examination was ever held, nor was there ever a coroner's jury.

Ida Crouch-Hazlett.

GOVERNMENT BY INJUNCTION

We are opposed to government by injunction. We are opposed to any method of jurisprudence which makes a czar of a judge, allows him to make arbitrary laws, and sentence men to jail for violation of his self made law. We are opposed to government by injunction because it deprives a man of the right of a trial by a jury of his peers. We do oppose and will oppose any and all acts of court or king subversive of democratic institutions and destructive of all liberty.

LATEST FROM SCENE OF BATTLE

Rathdrum, Nov. 10.

Mr. Millard, the uncle of Steve Adams, is an interesting figure at the trial. Steve was arrested on his ranch at Haines, Oregon, a short distance out from Baker City. The kind-hearted old gentleman is a fine specimen of the old soldier, having served through the civil war on the confederate side. He is 71 years of age but straight and vigorous with hair and beard yet dark. His mind has been so agitated by the shocking injustices he has perceived in connection with the arrest of his nephew that he has lost all faith in any justice or rectitude under this government. He has become entirely devoted to the progress of this case, and says he means to see it through no matter what it costs. He says his wife is equally determined to stay with the sad and tragic situation till its final issue.

As an instance of the kind heart of the old gentleman he not only has reared eight children of his own but besides these has provided and cared for ten orphan children till they were grown. He raised Steve and his two brothers, although they were fairly fairly well grown when their mother died.

Adams came from Park City, Utah, to his uncle's ranch in June. He had not been in hiding at all as the mine owners' side of this proposition has spread broadcast. He was arrested the next February. He was hauling hay when Steunenberg was killed. He had located a ranch near Baker City. His troubles and detention have very nearly caused him to lose it, but his uncle says he thinks he can save it for him.

After Orchard's "confession" a Caldwell attorney filed the complaint against Adams on which he was arrested. Detective Thiele went out and made the arrest and announced that he had "located" Adams, whereas it had never been the slightest difficulty to "locate" him. Instead of being taken to the Caldwell jail, he was taken straight through to Boise with his family and lodged in the penitentiary where he was kept for seven months without bail, and without a charge being lodged against him.

Closely Guarded.

No one was allowed to see him except the guards and the aristocrats of the Idaho republican administration—Gooding, Borah, Hawley and all that swarm of capitalist parasites. Three times his uncle tried to see him, but could never get to him except in the presence of the guards. His mail was all opened and read by the warden. He was shut off from any communication with the outside world or any confidential relations with his friends.

Immediately after the arrest of Adams, Mr. Millard, who was in Texas, wrote a former friend of his, one M. S. Bond, to get C. A. Moore, a lawyer of Baker City, and go to Boise and try and get bail for him. Moore and Bond went to see Gooding the first thing when they arrived at Boise.

Through some unexplained oversight Adams lay in the penitentiary a long time with no attention from the Federation. It was then that Gooding furnished the traitor Moore with money to go to Colorado and see the governor, and see if he could not obtain immunity for Adams, provided he would corroborate Orchard.

There can be no question about this latter instance as Moore admitted this in the office of ex-Governor Morrison before a number of witnesses.

Deep Plotted Conspiracy.

Adams was held without charge or preliminary examination until after his uncle got him out on a writ of habeas corpus through ex-Governor Morrison whom he employed as attorney.

The day of the irrigation congress Mr. Millard had asked to take dinner with his nephew in the penitentiary. To his surprise Warden Whitney granted the request, and he had a fine dinner with Steve and his family. This was the first time he had got to see him alone since his arrest.

Whitney called in during the visit and made this statement, "If Steve stays with the state and helps hang these men (referring to the Western Federation officials) he will be given complete immunity."

Torture Begins.

After this visit, on a pretense of searching Steve for anything that his uncle might have given him, he was stripped, taken from the woman's ward where he had been living in comparative comfort, and put in a murderer's cell. The Pinkerton scavengers were then admitted to him—the whole gang of harpies, Hawley, Gooding, McParlan, Thiele and all the rest.

Steve had been jailed for 93 days in Colorado at the time of the industrial troubles and was then turned out without any trial or charge. The hardships he endured then seem to have unerved him. When he was re-arrested, he was made to believe that he would be mobbed if taken back to Colorado.

When Thiele pretended to "locate" him, he phoned Brown, the sheriff at Baker City, who came out bringing several others with him. Brown said to Steve, "I am on the inside; do what they want you to, and you'll be back in a few days." At Mr. Millard's expense on the preceding trial Brown came to Wallace and testified to this for the defense. So one can see which side would have the incentive to blow him up, the Pinkertons or the defense.

In regard to the Phillips' yarn about dynamite being found in their yard in Spokane, it is fishy with a Pinkerton flavor from the start. If the tale were genuine why has no investigation been made. It is hardly likely that Thiele's Pinkertons would overlook a bet like that. Yet, no detectives have been put to work. And why 10 pounds with caps in a pail when one pound would blow up the whole neighborhood?

Forcing the Confession.

So far as the "confession" is concerned, Steve couldn't have written it if he had tried. He has no education. The human harpies fixed it up to suit themselves, took Steve to a notary, and he signed it. He thought he was gone anyway and it made no difference what he did.

Although Mr. Millard could not see his nephew alone, he could see him in the presence of Moore, the man who had betrayed him.

The real purpose of this whole shameful persecution is to get Steve to swear against the Colorado men, and thus support Orchard's wonderful revelations, otherwise unsupported.

The traitor Moore admits that Gooding, Borah and Hawley paid him a handsome fee.

Continued on Page 4.

EVIDENCE FAVORABLE TO ADAMS

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 9.

Everything is encouraging for the defendant in the Steve Adams case so far. There is nothing that directly connects him with the crime of killing Fred Tyler, and the indirect evidence is only such as might be adduced in any frontier warfare; where there are two factions in a community that hate each other, and especially where there is so much at stake as a bitter contest of farmers and poor men who have settled on the land under the provisions of the government, to make homes for themselves, and have a place on God's green earth, and a bunch of robber jumpers paid by great capitalistic interests to break the law and deprive the working class of their rights.

Steve was with his friend Simpkins whose claim had been jumped. Both were members of the Western Federation and that was enough to connect them with murders and dynamite according to that avenging angel of the Mine Owners' Association, Sleuth McParlan.

It is the opinion of those who have followed the chain of events closely that not a hair of Steve Adams' head will ever be touched. Not only is all evidence lacking against him but it is not believable that any jury of poor hard-working farmers in this country, as these men are, will ever bring in any verdict anywhere in favor of the timber robbers and against honest settlers.

Fair Trial.

The court proceedings are being conducted in as fair a manner as could be expected under a system of laws and institutions based upon the monumental crime of the despoilation of the working class and the robbery and murder of the highest hopes and opportunities of the human race.

Judge Woods is a very kind, pleasant man, and his rulings are giving the defendant the extreme latitude that the law allows him. No one can complain of his lack of courtesy to the attorneys for the defense. In fact he has said that Darrow was the strongest man he ever saw at the bar.

Very little interest is manifested in the case by the townspeople of Rathdrum, even the tiny courtroom being filled only a portion of the time.

Steve is being treated as well as could be expected under the circumstances. The sheriff has relaxed the close confinement in which he was held at first. It was having a very bad effect on the eyes of Adams, and finally the doctor said he would go blind unless he was given outdoor exercise, and now every day he may be seen out with Sheriff MacDonald or a bailiff taking a walk about town. He is always very neatly dressed, and as one meets the two men there is nothing to indicate that a desperate Federation murderer is walking loose around town.

Corrupting Capitalist Press.

The capitalist papers are doing exactly as they did in southern Idaho, using every sinister and vicious means to misrepresent the facts, malign the Federation, and prejudice the minds of the public against the Federation men through the avenues of this case. Every absurd and on the face of it fake tale is trotted out in sober earnest as reliable material. The Federation men are branded as criminals in every line of its prostituted reports. It is even rivaling the Statesman in its unprincipled fight against these working men and is making itself so obnoxious to the working class, and in fact all fair minded people throughout the Rathdrum community that its circulation has fallen off perceptibly.

In fact a movement is on foot to boycott it completely throughout this district. Its reporter, Statle, has aroused a great deal of antagonism and dislike not only by the utterly false reports he is printing but by his unpopular and bulldozing ways. It is even stated that he is one of the craftiest Pinkertons and spies employed against the Federation. Of a brutal and stocky physical demeanor, he is most insulting to the socialists about town, even using violence and offensive language. So unpopular is he that there is liable to be trouble over his presence at the trial as the representative of the Review.

The Rathdrum Tribune makes a feeble echo of its pace setter, the Review, aiming to prejudice and poison the minds of the people through its untruthful reports. It stated that the Spokesman reporter went on the stand and reiterated that Mrs. Hazlett had stated to him that she was going to Rathdrum to educate the Adams jury; a deliberate falsehood as the reporter had denied expressly that she said that, the statement being in the headlines which he admitted were written by another party. But what is a little one-horse capitalist sheet for that is starving on the ragged edge of syco-phancy if it is not to lickspittle to its capitalist bosses that feed it on the political crumbs from the plutocratic table.

Ida Crouch-Hazlett.

Rathdrum, Ida., Nov. 9.

On Thursday the prosecution undertook to introduce the testimony of her and Mrs. Archie Phillips that was given at the Wallace trial.

The Phillips people were jumpers from the Marble Creek district who gave the most emphatic evidence against Adams at the previous trial. They belonged to the crowd of claim jumpers who were banded together to deprive the lawful settlers of their rights. Prosecuting Attorney Knight made affidavit that the state had tried in every possible way to get these valuable witnesses to be present. But they had left the jurisdiction of the state and gone out of the country entirely and could not be found. Mr. Knight further affirmed that the Phillips people had stated that they had been so terrified by threats of violence, the attempted dynamiting of their home and other outrages that they feared to give any more testimony against the Federation members. Mrs. Phillips' health was in a state of nervous collapse and Phillips had lost his job and could not get work, and since the blowing up of Sheriff Brown, he thought the best thing he could do for himself was to get out of the country.

Heyburn, the Demagogue.

A sensation which was a veritable explosion of a political bomb in the Idaho situation, was caused by Knight reading a letter from Senator Heyburn relative to Phillips' appointment to a government job because of the service he had rendered the state by his testimony in the Adams case.

It seems that the understanding was that Phillips was to be rewarded for his zeal in behalf of the state in these cases by an appointment to a government position as timber cruiser upon the Coeur d'Alenes Indian reservation. C. J. Shoemaker, treasurer of Kootenai county, a political go-between, made application for Phillips to Senator Heyburn. But Heyburn had got wise. His party is after the scalps of the officials of the Federation, but he can't get along without their votes.

He knows the voting strength of the Federation in Idaho. Hence in spite of the service that claim jumper Phillips has rendered the state authorities in trying to bring about the conviction of Adams, Heyburn is suddenly struck by gripping pains in his hitherto elastic conscience and writes to Shoemaker that he has discovered that Phillips was a jumper, and a judgment was in court against him on that charge, and his appointment was out of the question.

It leaked out that Shoemaker himself was the man that wrote to the land office about Phillips, and thence informed Heyburn of the facts in the case. However, Heyburn throws Phillips overboard rather than go before the Federation voters with him as an incubus. According to the letter presented by Knight, Phillips gets it back by cutting his job as informer, and the Adams prosecution is left dangling in the air metaphorically where it is their dear desire to have Adams dangling physically.

Pinkertonish Rubbish.

The melodramatic phish of blood, thunder and brimstone, has the old Pinkerton flavor. But the frame-up was effective.

Violate Constitutional Right.

Mr. Darrow made vigorous protest against any documentary evidence being introduced against Adams where the defendant had no opportunity to face his answers. The judge sent the jury out and the case was argued. Knight said the parties were beyond the jurisdiction of the court. He had traced them to Portland, and from the best he could learn, they were now in British Columbia.

Mr. Knight made these statements under oath on the stand. Darrow asked him if when he was in Spokane hunting the dynamite, he saw Thiele, the detective also. Knight admitted that he talked to Thiele. Mr. Darrow then wanted to know if he had heard anything about who had killed our witness, Harvey Brown.

Judge McBell made the argument on the competency of absent witnesses. The Idaho statute carries no provision for such evidence. The right is a fundamental one derived from Magna Charta that a man accused must be faced by his accusers. The state has not this right, but a defendant has. The Idaho law is explicit and the utmost that can be done is to de-

(Continued on Page 2.)

MRS. HAZLETT ON TRIAL

On Friday, November 15, Mrs. Hazlett's trial comes off in the superior court at Spokane. The struggle she is making against the unjust tyranny and imposition of the capitalist courts is all the harder as Local Spokane, led by a number of would-be pseudo socialists, has deserted to the enemy.

This free speech struggle that the state of Washington is waging with the authorities is of the utmost importance to the future dissemination of the socialist doctrine. Whatever aid the fellow workers of Mrs. Hazlett can bring to the issue, will never be more needed. She is fighting this battle for us all, not in her own interest at all but against it, and certainly no one but a coward will leave her to bear the brunt of the fight alone.

If we cannot all be arrested and go to jail for maintaining the rights of a free people, we can loyally stand by and support those who do.

The report of the trial will be given our next issue.