he H-Bomb

Nuclear physicist, Ithaoa, N.

No official information on the hydrogen bomb and its effects has yet been released. All Atomic Energy Commission personnel are explicitly instructed not to discuss even those aspects which are generally known to science. But an excellent first estimate of what it means may be obtained from the official and authoritative semi-technical Los Alamos publication, The Effects of Atomic Weapons, issued in 1950. This work details the effects of such weapons; and while all its conclusions are based on the so-called nominal atomic bomb, like that of Nagasaki, with an energy release equal to the explosion of 20,000 tons of TNT, the book contains careful accounts of how to compute the figures for bombs of any strength. All that is to follow is based on application of the official public methods of calculation to the unofficial, widely-quoted and plausible statement that the Bikini test explosion of March 1 released energy equal to the detonation of 12,000,000 tons of TNT, or 660 times the energy of the "nominal" bomb.

MY STUDY WINDOWS look out on a wide view. On a clear day you can see the barns and the houses, the stor-age tanks and the factory windows of our little city. The lake lies far below, and the town clings close to the lakeshore in the valley. We can see field and wood, stream and road, spreading out of the horizon 15 miles away on tree-covered slopes of the Van Etten hills.

One thermonuclear bomb, exploding two or three miles high in the center of our landscape, would turn all we see into black char in a few seconds. Literally, all we can see—field and farm, town and countryside. And what we cannot see, beneath the rooftops and in the bottoms of the valleys cutting through the land, would feel in a minute the strong blast wave, and in the hours thereafter know the invisible searing rays of the radioactive dust.

Adjectives are not needed to give an account of such an event. It is for the reader to assume the task of turning the list of commonplaces which follows into language of human agony, and the greater task of resolving that that agony shall never come to any of the cities of man.

BLACK CHAR: Two and a half miles in the air of any city, on a clear sunny day, or a starry night, imagine that there bursts the man-made sun of Bikini. In a few seconds its heat would grow and dwindle again. Everyone on whom that great light shone, for a distance of about five miles from the point of aim, would find the clothing on his body burst into lively flame, and his unclothed skin char black. Up to six miles away the unprotected skin would suffer severe burn wherever that light shone directly upon it.

There is no noise yet. That now comes, above the screams, the concussion of the shock wave, and the irre-sistible blast wind after it. For two and a half miles from the point below the bomb, there would now come nearly total destruction. Even skyscrapers would experience massive destruction. The wrenched steel frames would shed their walls and floors. In 10 or 15 sec-onds the wave of havoc would have run out still further, and up to four miles away nothing could escape collapse and ruin. Autos would be smashed and tossed aside everywhere out to about four miles' distance.

THEN THE SOUND: As far away as eight miles, some 100 city blocks, ordinary houses would suffer ruin, caving in on their inhabitants, or stand with ruined walls ready to fall. A foot-thick brick wall will stand at this distance, but will crack severely. No common house out to a distance of 12 miles could be counted habitable without extensive shoring and repair. And only after the blast had rolled over the homes and the shops of the people for 20 miles would it have spent its energy so far that it could no longer smash every glass pane into flying splinters. It becomes only then a sound—a sound to wrench the heart.

In the high air, the terrible mush-room would grow. And while the wrecked city burned beneath, the winds aloft would start to spread the radioactive debris of the bomb. From that Secy. of State Dulles believes in "letting Asians fight Asians"—if you can get them to do it. The problem, in Indo-China: 98% of the Asians who live there are on one side (the Viet Minh), only 2% on the other (Dulles' side). Although the second "big bang" in the current Pacific series was announced two hours before Dulles went on the air, the Indo-Chinese status remained quo. Does the sending of American boys to "save Indo-China" come next on the program? It's up to you.

WAR & PEACE The Dulles speech: Washington prepa es nation for full-scale intervention in Indo-China

N a speech March 29, broadcast as widely to the world as the President's Dec. 3 address to UN, Secy. Dulles served notice that the Administration is preparing the American people for direct, ful-scale U.S. intervention in the Indo-China war.

Whatever the cost, he said in effect, the U.S. would block victory for

ago. (Ho's government would get 98% of the vote in free Indo-China elections today, according to "an authoritative on - the - spot estimate" quoted in Newsweek, 3/22.)

Noting how far Dulles went beyond past Administration statements of U.S. intentions in Indo-China, the N.Y. Times' James Reston wrote (3/30):

"Always in the past he had talked about what the U.S. would do if Red China sent its army into the Indo-China war. Tonight he made it clear that the U.S. would not tolerate Communist conquest of the area 'by whatever means.'"

LET THERE BF TIN: Dulles threatened "united action" to hold Indo-China's "tin, rubber, oil, iron ore . . . [its] great strategic value . . . astride the most direct and best developed sea and air routes between the Pacific and South Asia . . . [its] major naval and air bases" for Washington's "free world." But, said Reston, he "purposely did not define what he meant by taking 'united action.'"

The Wall St. Journal's Ray Cromley provided the definition (3/30):

rovided the definition (3/30):

1) The U.S. "will throw in whatever planes and supplies are deemed necessary to win the Dien Bien Phulbattle"; 2) "No concessions shall be made to the Reds at Geneva"; 3) "Recruit the aid of UN—or part of UN—to bolster units now fighting in Indo China"; 4) "an appeal to UN for quick indirect action like a naval blockade of Red China. This might be tried, if the Reds are recalcitrant at Geneva, even if the French are still fighting in Indo-China."

Joe Must Go!

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The movement for the recall of Sen. McCarthy is assuming sweep proportions in Wisconsin. Although it was recently started, apparently by LeRoy Gore, editor of the Sauk Prairie Star, a weekly paper in Sauk City, Wis., a Republican and a former friend of McCarthy, thousands of people of all political views are volunteering to help in this campaign. The effort needs organization; but the spontaneity, enthuriasm and breadth are there. The stratutes in this state provide for the recall of any office helder. There are some spheres, not necessarily McCarthyite, which are trying to magnify the obstacles involved and to minimize the efficacy of such an effort.

A little over 40,000 signatures are necessary in this state to secure a vote on McCarthy's recall. Milwaukee County alone may be able, by organized and concerted effort, to supply half of the required number of signatures. The job can be cone even with a minimum of organization, and in view, particularly, of the tremendous and widespread enthusiasm for such recall movement.

My impression is that had it not been for Adams the Army would not have maintained its resistance to the Senate Committe's demands, and our best hope for a showdown lies in Adams pushing the Army offensive. He never paid the usual deferential patter to the Senator or his major premise, and his awareness of the issues and concern for the record are evident in the Army's Report to the Subcommittee. Preacher Claude Williams [now appealing against his unfrocking by the Detroit Presbytery for "heresy"] is my favorite heretic. He is heretical against unreason. I can almost wish that I had kept up my payments through the years for the sheer pleasure of resigning now in protest against the Preacher.

Geneva and germs

Geneva and germs

NEW ORLEANS, LA.,

The N.Y. Times printed an AP dispatch Feb 6, next-to-last page, stating that the Government has three germ warfare plants. Three main plants, which it invited private industry to operate. Only firm interested, Mathieson Chemical Co., Baltimore, finally turned the offer down. Reasons for refusals were "the administrative and business problems involved and the mass destruction the weapon would create." truction the weapon would create."
(Management abviously thought labor would balk.)
We and Japan are the only world powers refusing to ratify the Geneva agreement not to use germ warfare. Japan is the only country to have suffered the A-bomb, we're the only country to have waged war with it. We've just signed a military pact with Japan: we've occupied it for eight years already surely not the best way to increase the people's love for us). By doing so, we become a joint menace to the rest of the world—all of it. If we are to be trusted, we must at least ratify the Genevagreements against all mass destruction weapons. Labor will see this necessity.

The Administration's campaign to get both feet into the Indo-China war is reaching a climax. They do not want to die or have their sons killed in an attempt to force an unwanted regime on a people 7,000 miles away.

• In any case all responsible military experts say the war cannot be won.

We urge you to write at least one letter to Washington this week—to your own Senator—expressing your view on U.S. participation in the Indo-China war.

THE BOMB, EAST-WEST TRADE, INDO-CHINA, THE WESTERN ALLIANCE

These are the stakes at Geneva

"You dropped something, sir."

By Tabitha Petran

WITH just three weeks to go before the date (April 26) set for the Geneva conference—in which China will participate—Washington faces its toughest policy crisis since the cold war. At stake are "not only Indo-China... but the whole western alliance as well" (Alsops, 3/26). Marquis Childs (N. Y. Post, 3/25, 26) saw the alliance's "very existence... threatened," the gap widening between France's need to end the Indo-China war and the desire of some "influential" Americans for "direct U.S. intervention... [and] the beginning of World War III." The Christian Science Monitor (3/25) reported so many snags the conference might not be held.

Washington's multiplying crises of policy arise from its assumption that it can dictate terms to the rest of the world. This assumption rests mainly on:

• Its alleged atomic-hydrogen lead. (In face of the worldwide demand for outlawing such weapons following its "reckless experimentation in Pacific waters" [Walter Millis, 3/23], it announced (1) another bomb had been set off March 26; (2) an even bigger test explosion for the eve of Geneva; (3) doubling of expenditure on H-bomb production.)

◆ Alleged superiority of the U.S. economic system. ("One of the wonders of the world"—Pres. Eisenhower, 1/7.)

"PEACE THE ONLY DEFENSE": The first claim was shattered by the Soviet H-bomb explosion last August. But it took the "uncontrollable violence" of the March 1 test (Millis) to bring home to most of the world what the U.S.S.R. has insisted for 9 years. CSM (3/25) put it this way: "H-BOMB ALERTS WORLD: PEACE IS ONLY DEFENSE."

Concern over A- and H-bombs has now become "a serious political issue" for Western governments (N. Y. Times, 3/28). All five political parties in Japan demanded their outlawing. In Britain the same demand from a large number of MP's and much of the press was coupled with pleas for an immediate top-level meeting with the U.S.S.R. From Paris the New York World Telegram (3/27) reported: "Atom Jitters Make Europe Parley Hungry." Even some U.S. cold-war stalwarts were shaken. When the President, replying to questions about U.S. responsibility to the world, said something must have happened that "surprised and astonished the scientists," Millis (3/28)

Lancaster in Daily Express, London
"If these light-hearted U.S. scientists aren't careful they're going to find themselves short of a world to held World War III in!"

found "the patent lameness and obtuseness" of this useness" of this

"... more frightening ... than all the leaks and rumors about what happened at Bikini... The present situation is intolerable. On the one hand a group of scientists are secretly developing devices which even they apparently cannot control, capable of wiping civilization off the earth. On the other hand, a various group of diplomatists, civilian managers and soldiers are trying to weave the frightful weapons into a military-diplomatic policy which they cannot explain to the public in intelligible terms..."

Thirty-six years are a brief period for a new social system, as Soviet Premier Malenkov pointed out recently; but since 1928—excluding the armament and war years 1938-45—Soviet industrial output has risen at a rate which represents a doubling every five years (Maurice Dobb, Rates of Growth Under the 5-Year Plans, 4/53). This is four times the U.S. rate of growth from 1899-1937. The contrast can be shown another way. If 1929 is taken as 100, Soviet industrial output stood at 1,266 in 1951 (increased nearly 13 times), the U.S.'s at 200, Britain's at 160, Italy's at 136, France's at 104.

WE WISH THE TIMES WOULD MAKE UP YOUR MIND, HAROLD!

STASSEN'S MISSION IS TO KEEP UP BARS TO SOVIET'S TRADE

N. Y. Times, March 27, 1954 Page One headline

CSM (3/23) reported "considerable and growing support... behind the scenes in the Pentagon and other policy-making centers in Washington" for Millis' thesis that a foreign policy based on these weapons cannot succeed—but also "an equally vigorous dissenting point of view."

CONSTIPATION: At the same time, emerging facts of the turning-point year 1953 were whittling away the second U.S. claim—superiority of its economic system.

In the U.S., huge surpluses weighted down the economy: $80 billion of stocks of goods in industry, wholesale and retail trade, $6 billion of farm surpluses. $6 billion raw-materials stockpile, $100 billion or more armaments stockpile, plus a consumer credit of $28 billion. These pointed to a crisis of over-production even before the production downturn began last July. Predicting the course of the crisis is hazardous, due to distortion of the arms economy and possible political moves. (On one level, such actions as the March 26 decision to widen stockpiling of 40 minerals, presented as both a pump-priming and security measure; on the other, the possibility of a new and necessarily bigger Korea.) But the widening gap between capacity to produce and to consume was suggested by the 70% rise of the former since the war while the latter rose barely 10%. In 1953 wages fel! $5 billion at an annual rate.

In the U.S.S.R., economic development had so progressed that a steep

In the U.S.S.R., economic development had so progressed that a steep rise in living standards could be realistically projected, and begin to be fulfilled, along with continued advance in heavy industry. Real wages, which had risen 68% 1940-52, rose another 13% in 1953.

The realities emerge: socialism is succeeding

Geneva will make myths harder to maintain, and—whatever its outcome—expose how remote is Washington's "policy of strength" from the real relation of forces. The reality is seen in the contrasting economic developments of the socialist and capitalist worlds.

Moreover, the Administration is now proceeding to ease its trade restrictions with the Communist bloc in spite of the sentiment on Capitol Hill for a policy of economic warfare. Harold Stassen, the Foreign Operations Administration chief, flew to tions Administration chief, flew to London yesterday to talk to the British and French about cutting down the list of materials that should be denied to Communist countries.

N. Y. Times, March 27, 1954 James Reston, Editorial Page

In the post-war period, the fourth (1946-50) Five-Year Plan was chiefly directed at repairing war damage, a goal achieved well before its end: By 1950 industrial output was 48% above 1940, that of agriculture, which suffered particularly heavily in the war. 7%. In 1950, industrial output rose 23%; in 1951, 16%; in 1952, 11%; in 1953, 12%. Between 1949-53 the increase alone in industrial output was "much greater" (Malenkov) than total industrial output in 1950.

In the U.S., despite an upward movement from 1946-48, 1948 industrial output was 20% below the wartime peak of 1943. In 1948-49 it fell 17%. The Korean War took it back in March, 1953, to the World War II peak, but this was the end of the boom: since July production has fallen 10%.

"STAGGERING" PROSPECT: Recent studies by capitalist theoreticians, such as. Soviet Economic Growth by 31 U. S. specialists, discount Soviet statistics as inflated and untrustworthy. The Economist, British high-finance organ, noted (2/13) that the authors of this study "cannot be suspected of sympathy for the Soviet regime . . . or accused of naive credulity. Some contributors have rather erred on the side of undue caution, approaching every Soviet figure with utmost suspicion." Even so, said the Economist, he Economist,

"... after deflating the exaggerated Soviet claims out of recognition, American experts agreed that Soviet national income is probably rising by about 6½ to 7% per annum and that industrial production is expanding even more rapidly. This is an incomparably faster rate than that prevailing in any Western country. It should also be remembered that Soviet growth is uninterrupted by slumps and that the years chosen to compute this average were not years of 'boom' reconstruction but normal peace years."

The Economist added that the "exceptionally rapid growth of the nation-

The Economist added that the "exceptionally rapid growth of the national cake throughout the Soviet world... might well shock many complacent Western economists"; It found "staggering" the prospect that Soviet output in 1970 would be 4½ times that of 1950 (by American calculations), "It would be foolish to ignore [the regime's] economic achievements. Efficiency is one of history's criteria."

MORE & MORE GOODS: Likewise wearing thin are Western attempts to picture the Soviet people as getting no benefit from the economic advance. Soviet living standards have not approached the American post-war standard—certainly not in terms of the American emphasis on clothes, autos, refrigerators, etc. (The Soviet standard has stressed medical, social, cultural, educational services.) But consumergoods output has risen steadily (about $3\frac{1}{2}$ times 1928-40, and 23% 1946-50), if much less rapidly than heavy industry.

The yearly price-cuts begun in 1947 doubled consumer purchasing-power by 1952; the 1953 reductions raised it by 46 billion rubles (roughly $11 billion). The spurt in consumer-goods production in 1953's second half put on the markets an additional 30 billion roubles (roughly $7 billion) worth of goods. British businessman J. B. Scott, after a recent business trip to Moscow, wrote (London Star, 3/1):

"The shops were stacked with goods, from vacuum cleaners and refrigerators to eggs and cheeses... The Russian people seem to have enough money to buy what was on show and they were doing so on a large scale."

MORE TRADE: The Soviet government successfully tackled the glgantic task of industrialization after World War I; the organization of war economy with its most industrialized regions under occupation, in World War II; and the development of atomic energy. To such a regime, substantial raising of farm output and living standards should present no insuperable problems. This advance on the consumer-farm front comes on top of a huge Soviet contribution (still continuing) to industrialization of China, N. Korea, the People's Democracies. At the same time the great power plants of the current Five-Year Plan (Kuibyshev, Stalingrad, Mingechaur in the Caucasus, Kakhovka in the Ukraine, Kama in the Urals, Angara near Lake Baikal) are nearing completion.

Rapidly expanding Soviet economy means a rapidly accelerating volume of trade with the outside world. This capacity for trade expansion on a scale impossible before the war has become a highly operative factor on the world scene, as Harold Stassen's hurried trip to London "to put the brakes on moves toward relaxing East-West trade retrictions" (NYT, 3/23) showed.

TREMBLING TYCOONS: The brakes must be applied, says Washiington, to prevent development of Soviet war economy. But what the Rockefellers, Mellons, Morgans and DuPonts, who call the Washington tune, really fear is Soviet peace economy, which aims not for maximum profits but maximum satisfaction of the people's material and cultural needs.

The brandishers of A- and H-bombs have shown that they will risk the destruction of all mankind in their crusade to destroy that system. But the clock of history is not so easily reversed; their agonizing dilemmas present the people with their opportunity to step in and re-direct policy toward neace.

FARM NFU convention insists on 100% parity for family farms; Benson speech stirs a storm; Stover lays ouster to peace fight

DENVER, COLO THE Eisenhower plan to institute a sliding scale of price supports for farm products drew a sharp answer from the Natl. Farmers Union blennial convention held in Denver from March 15 to 19. Key point in a 49-page program adopted by the delegates was

"We urge enactment of mandatory 100% of parity supports on family 100% of parity supports on family farm production of all farm pro-ducts."

The extent of the cleavage between the NFU and the Administration was spelled out plainly:

"We are definitely opposed to any type of sliding scale, variable or flexible... regardless of whether the bottom of the scale is 60% of parity. 75% of parity or some other level—support under such a system is practically no support in that the support price is lowest when most needed to augment low farm prices and highest when least needed because of high farm prices."

NO MULTIPLE PRICE: To maintain 100% parity—which means a level of farm income sufficient to cope with the prices of things the farmer must buy-the convention favored

". . all effective methods of farm price support including, but not restricted to, price support loans, purchases, purchase agreements, and parity production payments to producers."

Also opposed were all two-price or multiple-price systems (one price for domestic sale, another for export) which meant a blended average price to the farmer below 100% of parity. Chief proponents of the inflexible 100% supports were two former officials of the Trumen administration both of the Truman administration, both now staff officials of the NFU; Charles F. Brannan, former Agriculture Secretary, and Leon Keyserling, former economic adviser to Truman. NFU president James G. Patton said their speeches at the convention "laid the groundwork" for the policies adopted.

A BLUSH FOR BENSON: Their past associations gave the convention the air of a wrangle between Republicans and Democrats because present Agri-culture Secy. Ezra T. Benson accepted on invitation to address the gathering. his appearance was surprising to some, just as the invitation was surprising to him; he admitted that "it caused a raised eyebrow or two in the Department" when it arrived.

Benson not only made a forthright defense of his program, but turned many a face red when he reported re-sults of research into testimony preceding the Agricultural Act of 1948:

"The record shows that your organization INFU] supported both the principles of flexible price supports and modernized parity." (Modernized parity is a new formula giving farmers a lower return than the old che).

80.000 SQUARE MILES COVERED BY DUST IN TEXAS the Dust Bowl of the '30s

Eenson also reminded his audience that Truman had supported flexible supports at that time. He made these

"Now if your officers and perhaps many of you delegates supported flexible supports and modernized parity in 1948, it must have been because of a conviction that they were good for agriculture... Right and wrong haven't changed since 1948... Therefore, it is difficult to see why one who favored flexible supports in 1948 would not favor them now."

INSOMNIA SETS IN: Next day three the Benson charge.

Patton declared that he had "a flex-ible mind" and insisted that in 1948 the only alternative to flexible supports was no farm program at all. But he called Benson's speech "an insult" and made the counter-charge that and made the counter-charge that Benson had tried to wreck price con-trols during World War II. Talbott called the Benson speech "diabolical," challenged Benson's figures, and denounced him for recently inciting city consumers against farmers. Thatcher accused the Secretary of "trickery," "dishonesty" and "subversion."

The invective had little effect on Benson. On March 28 he announced in Washington that there will be "no last minute switch" in his decision to reduce price-support levels on butter to 75% of parity on April 1, and predicted that President Eisenhower will veto any bill to continue present 90% supports on basic crops.

2 CHARTERS LIFTED: The Farmers Union convention did not indicate how it will carry on the fight for its 100% parity program. Many saw the fight weakened at the outset by decision of the national board, endorsed by the fall convention, to lift the charters of the Iowa Farmers Union and the Eastern Division (GUARDIAN, March 29).

Ostensible reason for the ousters was that the two divisions lack minimum membership requirements, but an unidentified NFU official was quoted in the press as accusing both groups of "extreme left wing, if not Communist sympathies." Fred Stover, president of the Iowa FU, and Louis Slocum, executive secretary of the Eastern Division, both denounced this as an expression of McCarthvism, Patton insisted that no one in official capacity has libeled or smeared anyone.

IOWA & PARITY: Officially the Iowa organization was charged with a "de-terioration in effectiveness," but Stover argued that, if anything, it was too effective. He had this to say of the 1948 decision to support flexible supports referred to by Benson:

eferred to by Benson:

"The September, 1948 NFU Board meeting endorsed the 'bi-partisan' Hope-Aiken farm program (the flexible, 60%, sliding scale)... But Stover did not attend the national board meeting in 1948. Within a few days the lowa convention came out for a full parity program and direct production payments. This action ... set the pattern that was soon approved by the rank and file members in other states and the full parity floor became a rallying point for other state conventions until the NFU accepted it... [The Iowa Division] was so effective that it changed the whole policy of the NFU from the 60% floor to 100%."

Stover told newsmen that the offin-

Stover told newsmen that the difficulties of his organization with the national office began when "we didn't go along with Truman's war" in Korea.

HOW'S YOUR BACKGROUND? One official reason for the ouster of the Eastern Division was what the beard called "a dissimilarity in background." Many detected ominous overtones in this statement, since a large proportion of the Eastern Division's membership consists of Jewish poultry raisers.

In a formal statement Stover said:

"The extent to which participation in the American witch-hunt has already syphoned off the dynamics of our militant tradition is today the greatest tragedy of our Union. It tends to make some leaders of a great organization ashamed of its own glorious history. . . We shall continue to build as before and to organize more farmers in order to organize more farmers in order to achieve the traditional goals of the Farmers Union. May the strength of our hope and resolve be as great as the task before us."

CHICAGO Key races in April 13 primary; Negroes seek seats in State Legislature

In addition to the strong fight being waged by Republican Robert H. Allison to unseat Rep. Harold Velde in the 18th Illinois Congressional District (Peoria and surrounding areas), these are key contests in that state's primaries April 13—first in the nation:

ROCK ISLAND

Robert (Hal) Roach, an Intl. Assn. of Machinists (AFL) business agent, is running in the Democratic primary against a machine hack, on a program of aid to farmers and workers. He has the support of virtually all labor in the area. The Republican is Robert Chiperfield, one of the worst in Congress.

CHICAGO

In the 80% Negro 2d Senaterial District (Near West Side), a prominent Negro doctor, Joshua M. Brown, is running against the gangster-ridden West Side bloc. There is no Negro legislator from this area. Years ago, Dr. Brown was elected Mayor of Westown in tribute to his services to the community. He is pushing for a special session of the Legislature on jobs, relief, higher unemp'oyment compensa-tion, FEPC, schools and housing.

In the 75% Negro 5th Senatorial (Hyde Fark, Kenwood, Woodlawn), a young Negro schoolteacher and law-yer, Marmaduke Carter Jr., is in the race. There is now only one Negro legislator out of four (1 Senator, 3 Representatives) in the Legislature. Carter is backed by the Ind. Voters of Illinois, the ADA affiliate, and other community groups; he is pushing for a special Legislature session on a program similar to Brown's.

In the 9th Senatorial (Southwest Side), a local business man, John G.
Fary, is running for the Legislature.
Leaders of Local 108 and 101 of the Farm Equipment Workers of UE helped secure his nomination from the regular Democratic organization. While his election is virtually assured, labor is plunking for Fary, who is pushing for action on unemployment and related issues, to give him additional stature in the Legislature.

In the 19th Senatorial (West Side-Lawndale to Cicero), Marion T. Calli-garis, Chairman of an AFL Railway Clerks local, has a number of CIO and AFL locals backing his candidacy. He is also pushing for a special session on labor's problems.

In the 29th Senatorial (Near North Side), a Negro minister, Rev. Theolia John Griffin, is running for the Legislature. He has vigorous support in the community. The area is at least one-third Negro with no Negro repre-sentation in the Legislature. He is also pushing for a special session on issues already mentioned.

Be basic, now

Coincident with the announcement that movie rights of his book. "The Spirit of St. Louis," have been sold for a price that could top $1,000,000—a record —Charles A. Lindbergh last night triged Americans to adopt a less materialistic outlook and concern themselves with more basic human values.

GOVERNOR GRANTS CLEMENCY

WESLEY ROBERT WELLS will not die. Last week Gov. Goodwin J. Knight of California said he would commute Wells' death sentence subject to the state Supreme Court's approval. On March 30 the court advised that the application for commutation

"... has been considered by the members of the Supreme Court, and a majority of the justices recommend that the sentence of death be commuted to life imprisonment without possibility of parole."

Wells was to have died in San Quentin's gas chamber April 9. The Governor's recommendation specifically denied to Wells the chance to apply for a parole. When he heard of the Governor ernor's recommendation, Wells said:

"I am ready now to take my rightful place in society outside. I hope and am assured that my friends will continue to work for my freedom."

Gov. Knight paid grudging tribute to these friends when he said his clemency recommendation was made of the abnormal pressures exerted by certain extremist factions whose efforts neither aided prisoner Wells nor the reaching of a proper con-clusion." . in spite of rather than becaus the abnormal pressures exerte

Little known facts about the red menace

CHATTANOOGA. Tenn. (AP)—Criminal Judge Ralston Schoolfield has indicated an "organized group," possibly communist inspired, might be a guiding force behind the continuing series of attacks on women here. . . Most of the women have "just been beaten up, not raped," said Schoolfield, and he added the attacks might be inspired by communists to create friction between races here.

spired by communities between races here.

—Lakeland (Fla.) Ledger, 2/15/54.

Among the "factions" which publicly took credit for helping the governor reach his "proper conclusion" was Walter Winchell.

RIGHT TO LEFT: The mass fight to save Wells was conducted, as a matter of fact, by a movement as politically broad as any ever organized in the U.S. around such an issue. It ranged from Winchell to the Civil Rights Congress. An incomplete summary shows these involved:

At least 33 AFL, CIO and independent international unions or union locals; the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliances of San Francisco, Stockton and Marin City; San Francisco Baptist Ministers Union; individual ministers of all faiths up and down California and in many cities throughout the country; the Los Angeles Tribune, California Eagle, San Francisco Lighthouse, Bay Area Journal, Valley Jewish News, and several union publications.

Committees of white and Negro lawyers and of physicians grouped to gether to plead for clemency, as did individual newspaper columnists and Judge A. A. Scott, who sentenced Wells to prison in 1932.

HIS STORY: Wells, 44, had been sentenced to die for hurling a cuspidor at a prison guard after a series of provocations beyond endurance. The guard was injured but returned to work in five days. In narrating the story of his life (GUARDIAN, 12/7/53), Wells presented the picture of a boy raised in abject poverty, deprived of any kind of love, growing to manhood and petty crime with the bitterness of this background. In his long years in prison he educated himself and achieved an understanding of his circumstances which have evoked the admiration of all who have visited him.

THE GOVERNOR RESPONDED TO ACTIONS LIKE THESE Signing Wells petitions at Victory Baptist Church, Los Angeles

Next job: Save Walter Lee Irvin

N JULY, 1949, there broke in Florida what became known as the "Grove-land Scottsboro Case." A 17-year-old white farm wife accused four Negro youths of rape. In the subsequent pil-laging and burning of the Negro community by white mobs, Ernest Thomas, 26, was riddled with bullets and buckshot while "resisting arrest." Samuel Shepherd and Walter Lee Irvin, 22, were convicted and "tried" by an allwhite male jury and sentenced to the electric chair. Charles Greenlee, 16, was given life on the chain gang.

The U.S. Supreme Court ordered a new trial for Shepherd and Irvin. On their way from state prison for retrial handcuffed Shepherd was shot to death for "trying to escape." Hand-cuffed Irvin was badly wounded, recovered, was again convicted and sentenced to die. He again appealed. The U.S. Supreme Court this time refused a hearing.

A group of white ministers known as the Florida Committee on Social Justice appealed to the state Parole Board, acting Gov. Charley Johns pre-siding. The Natl. Assn. for Advance-ment of Colored People on March 23 urged the Governor and the four other members to spare Irvin's life. They listened in silence, then denied the plea. Gov. Johns' announcement of the execution date is expected soon.

There is still time to persuade him and his parole board—as the governor of California was persuaded in the Wells case—to spare Walter Lee Irvin. Address: Gov. Johns, State Capitol, Talahassee, Fla.

What's behind the coffee gouge?

By Joao da Voide

A MERICAN coffee drinkers are being A MERICAN coffee drinkers are being robbed, defrauded and swindled each time they buy or make one of the hundred-billion cups of coffee they consume each year.

There is no shortage of coffee today, there will be no shortage this summer and if prices had any relationship.

—and if prices had any relationship to the laws of supply and demand, coffee should be costing American consumers just about half what they pay. Responsible for this barefaced ban-Responsible for this barefaced banditry are the already enormously wealthy coffee kings of Brazil. Through subtle market manipulation, aided and abetted by the majority of U.S. coffee importers and manufacturers, the Brazilians have driven prices 300% higher since 1948. Dollar wise, this represents an annual gouging of America's coffee drinkers of over $1,500,000,000.

Every time coffee prices are increased 1c on New York's Coffee and Sugar Exchange, it costs coffee-drinkers $27,- Ic on New York's Coffee and Sugar Exchange, it costs coffee-drinkers $27,-000,000. The end is not yet in sight. With coffee selling today for 85c, the Brazilians are openly declaring their ambition of attaining $1 a pound. A pound of this coffee will retail in the U.S. above $1.50.

THE FAMOUS FREEZE: As Brazilian prices set the standard for all coffee prices, the Brazilians have found happy allies among other producing nations.
With almost unlimited funds available propaganda campaigns, the U.S. been inundated with high-powered publicity avowing that high prices are the result of shortages created by a freeze in Brazil last July.

Unlike most Brazilian freezes which provided the alibi for price increases, this freeze actually happened. It damaged some 2,000,000 coffee trees severely, 20,000,000 to a lesser degree. While at first sight these figures seem impressive, they represent little. Brazil counts its coffee trees in the billions. New production in other coffee-growing countries will more than equalize

COFFEE TO BURN: Actually most unbiased observers feel there is more ing city, the traders and exporters thus describe their industry: "We don't sell coffee; we permit others to buy." Through their agents in the large U.S. consuming centers, they know exactly how much coffee the manufacturers coffee being grown today than is being consumed. Immediately following last summer's freeze the head of the Brazilian Coffee Institute announced in a quickly-buried press release that the freeze had saved Brazil from pricedropping overproduction.

In a survey of world coffee production issued last summer, the UN Food & Agriculture Commission said 9% more coffee was being produced in 1954 than in 1939. Translated, this means 5,000,000 bags above the publicized consumption figures for the world today.

THE PEONS: Brazil's coffee business is a tight monopoly. On the coffee exchange in Santos, major coffee-exportneed and the maximum price the trade can afford without slowing public sale.

U.S. manufacturers quickly pass on all green coffee price increases to the public after adding a cent or two to augment their own profits. Many of them have large investments in the huge coffee plantations recently plant-ed in Parana, Brazil's new coffee empire. These farms encompass tens of thousands of acres, often four or five villages whose inhabitants are in virtual peonage to the planters. Schools, sanitation, doctors are almost unknown.

VAST PROFITS: The U.S. Embassy's agricultural expert said last July, when coffee was selling for 53c a pound, that the planters on these huge plantations were clearing 346% net profit on their investment each year. An average Parana plantation will harvest annually over 5,000,000 pounds of market-able coffee.

There might be some argument for high prices if some of the swollen profits seeped down to the masses of Brazilian coffee workers. But the Brazilian Coffee Institute, the coffee interests' spokesmen in the U.S., declared to a subcommittee of the Senate Agricultural Committee—in an attempt to justify a 23c coffee increase—that a family of four, mother, father and two children, earned less than $1.50 collectively per day. The purchasing power of Brazil's money today is about 60%

THE RED MENACE: As is the rule in the U.S., the coffee-drinking public has been virtually abandoned in the struggle to bring prices down. At the beginning of the price climb, three government investigating committees announced plans to do something about the increases. Their efforts were doomed before they started.

The Brazilian coffee-growers their allies are tough fighters. Marshaling their heavy cannon, they sent into Secy. Dulles' office in the State Dept. seven ambassadors, who banged on the desk and reminded him of the unity of the Latin-American UN bloc and its importance to the U.S. They threatened to sell their coffee to tea-drinking Russia, said U.S. interference with the hallowed laws of supply and demand would drive their countries into the hands of local communists.

The order went out to calm the investigations, and U.S. drinkers got another economic slapping around the ears. Even the lunchwagons and restauears. Even the lunchwagons and restaurants are grabbing their share of the loot. They pay around $1 for a pound of coffee, from which they get 48 to 50 cups. Even adding 1c a cup for sugar and cream and service, their profit is handsome at 10c. But the restaurant average across the nation is now 15c. average across the nation is now, 15c

SURROGATE REJECTS FAMILY'S PETITION

City claims efforts to prevent orphaning of Rosenberg children were 'exploitation'

SURROGATE WILLIAM T. COLLINS last week asserted his court's jurisdiction to name a guardian for Michael and Robbie Rosenberg, and set April 5 at 10:30 a.m. for a hearing to consider "the qualifications of all persons nominated as guardian" not only of the children but of their "property."

The children have no property; a cust fund has been set up in their behalf administered by five persons un-der a trust agreement. Emanuel Bloch was a member of the trust fund board at his death.

OVERRULED: Collins overruled challenges to his jurisdiction raised by Gloria Agrin, attorney representing Mrs. Sophie Rosenberg, with whom the children are now living, and other members of the family. He also re-jected a plea that the matter be decided by a jury.

March 5, as reported in the Times, Surrogate Collins inwited all who are interested in the best possible guardians being ap-pointed for Michael and Robbie Rosenberg to write and tell him their views.

The GUARDIAN urges all readers who have not already done so to avail themselves of Surrogate Colbins' invitation. Address: Surrogate William T. Collins, Surrogate's Court, Hall of Records, 31 Chambers St., New York City 7.

The children had been living happily with Mr. and Mrs. Abel Meeropol, with the consent of Mrs. Rosenberg and two maternal aunts, until the New York City Welfare Dept. charged they were being "neglected" and "exploited" and demanded that they be given in the care of the head of the Jewish Child Care Assn.

Domestic Relations Judge Jacob Panken, without a hearing, turned the children over to one of the association's schools; his action was later reversed by State Supreme Court Justice James B. NcNally, who restored them to Mrs. Rosenberg pending final court decision.

THE "LOST" DOCUMENT: particulars, given by the city March 30 in response to a demand by Miss Agrin, produced no charges of "neglect." To support its claim to take over guardian-ship of the children, it asserted that written authorization to commit the children "as a public charge" had been given the City Welfare Commissioner by Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, while both were in detention in 1950 before their trial. The statement added:

"The original authorizations have een lost, destroyed or stolen."

The fact is that the children were removed from the Bronx Hebrew Children's Home by Mrs. Sophie Rosenberg in 1950 after they had been placed there by Ethel's mother, Mrs. Tessie Green-glass who, according to Miss Agrin's original brief, neither wanted them nor could care for them properly.

THE KOREAN WAR: The bill of particulars based the charge of "exploitation" on these allegations:

"The names of these children have been exploited at meetings and by the distribution of literature in the U.S. and in Canada, in E. Germany been exploited at meetings and by the distribution of literature in the U.S. and in Canada, in E. Germany and France at which the U.S. government has been attacked and defamed and at which the role of the U.S. in the Korean war has been misrepresented and distorted and at which the motives of the U.S. government in the prosecution of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg have been attacked and misrepresented. . . . [Mrs.] Sophie Rosenberg did not prevent the exploitation of the children by these un-American elements. . . but . . . completely surrendered the control of the children to these elements . . . Abel and Ann Meeropol . . are identified with the same group or groups which have exploited the Rosenberg case and plight of the Rosenberg children for dissemination of anti-American propaganda." of anti-American propaganda.

The burden of the city's case was that the attempts to get justice for Michael's and Robbie's parents, save them from being orphaned, and—when their parents were dead—save them from destitution, constituted "exploi-tation." The children's "property" was said to consist of royalties from the Rosenbergs' Death House Letters; proceeds from the sale of Julius' business; the trust fund "in excess of $40,000" raised without a penny of overhead expense by Bloch, and now administered without recommenders. tered without recompense by "t called Board of Trustees"; and

"...additional funds which will con-tinue to be raised in the U.S., Canada and elsewhere..."

SOCIAL WORKERS PROTEST: Surrogate Collins' secretary reported that "several hundred letters and telegrams from all parts of the U.S. and many cablegrams from France" had been received urging that the boys be left in the custody of the Rosenberg family.

On March 30 a statement signed by more than 250 social workers, including executives and psychologists, was submitted to Mayor Robert F. Wagner protesting the children's removal from the Meeropol home by the city. The statement said:

"We . . . consider it our professional responsibility to express strong disapproval of the way in which basic human considerations, as well as established child welfare practices, have been violated in this case. . . . We urge that thorough consideration be given to the needs of these children and that their emotional well-being be the only concern in planning for them."

THE ADMINISTRATION'S DILEMMA

GOP stalls McCarthy quiz: Does Dulles need him more?

By Lawrence Emery

THE Eisenhower Administration last week was convulsed in a contradiction it could not solve: it couldn't live with Sen. Joe McCarthy, but it couldn't live without him, either. McCarthy—or some valid equivalent—was essential some valid equivalent—was essential for maintaining the backdrop of morbid fear before which John Foster Dulles rattled his H-bombs before the world. But McCarthy was in trouble: an investigation of his feud with the Army threatened to open a sump-hole into which few Administration leaders dared to peer. The stench from it had already signs and many.

For three weeks McCarthy's co-red-hunter Sen. Karl Mundt (R-S.D.) had stalled the hearings on the ground that a suitable attorney to conduct them could not be found. But on March 28 Americans for Democratic Action scoffed at this excuse, said it was "preposterous to suggest that a Senate Committee which is seriously intent on hiring a competent and impartial attorney cannot locate an available one in two weeks' time."

PEOPLE MAY FORGET: On March 30 Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) said he was tired of the stalling: if the hearings didn't get under way within 48 hours, he would move to have them taken over by the Senate Armed Services Committee. But that committee's chairman, Sen. Saltonstall (R-Mass.), up for re-election this year, had long since expressed the "prayerful hope" that he would be spared the chore.

The stalling seemed based on the be-

The stalling seemed based on the be-lief that if it went on long enough, the lief that if it went on long enough, the country would forget the evil mess uncovered by the Army's report of how McCarthy and his boy counsel, Roy Cohn, had threatened to "wreck the Army" if their, boy investigator, G. David Schine, didn't get preferential treatment as a private.

"THESE WEIRD PEOPLE": The over-tones of evil in the Army's report were plain; but few U.S. newspapers dis-cussed them as forthrightly as the Los Angeles Daily News, which said they

". . . imply so unnatural, so aberrated a condition that the Nation's welfare demands immediate investi-

"The Army's report is like a sudden searchlight cast on crawling things in the darkness, catching in its inexorable beam the distorted personalities of men who have played havoc with our governmental processes and besmirched our national honor before the entire world. Their passions of hatred, their frenzies, their fantastic public displays—such as marked Schine's and Cohn's European tour—their constant turmoil under McCarthy's leadership and in his wake, bespeak not political acts but symptoms of pathology. . . . "The weird tangle and interplay of turbance lies behind the mask of anti-Communism, for the implications are no longer avoidable that behind it lies horror."

COHN & THE BODIES: Columnist Drew Pearson also referred to these murky aspects of the case; asking "Is McCarthy afraid of Roy Cohn?" he gave his own answer:

"Cohn knew all the secrets of the McCarthy investigation. He knew all the bodies buried by the McCarthy committee. He also knew the personal problems, had sat in on at least one conference where McCarthy debated what he should do about the Las Vegas (Nev.) Sun and extraordinary allegations it published regarding his personal life which cannot be repeated here. In brief, Cohn knew about all there was to know about McCarthy."

But while the Administration and McCarthy's Senate colleagues tried to keep this smell from seeping out, anti-McCarthyism grew and spread through-out the country.

CONSTRUCTIVE PRAYER: Most remarkable development was in his own home state of Wisconsin where LeRoy Gore, editor of the Sauk Prairie Star, rather haltingly began a recall move against the Senator on March 18. For 30 years a Republican and a one-time admirer and supporter of McCarthy, he wrote:

"Our decision to call upon the voters of Wisconsin to repudiate the hysterical McCarthy leadership is no whim of the moment. . . We have pondered, even prayed over it, for long dismal weeks as the genial Irishman we once greatly admired has showered increasing humiliation upon the party and the state to which we have so long been devoted." In less than a week the movement

In less than a week the movement had snowballed far beyond Gore's abilhad snowballed far beyond Gore's ability to cope with it alone. On March 28 a state-wide meeting was held in Sauk City, attended by nearly 500 persons from 43 of the state's 71 counties, and formed a state-wide "Joe Must Go" organization. More than 125,000 signatures had already been collected on recall petitions; the required 400,000 second certain by May 17 seemed certain by May 17.

THE SMOKESCREEN: The Wisconsin Fedn. of Labor and State CIO Council both declined to endorse the recall move on the ground of its doubtful constitutionality, but other labor voices were being raised loudly against Mc-Carthyism. Labor's Daily on March 23 called McCarthyism a "neo-fascist threat" and wrote:

"Many readers, including several high-placed labor officials have let us know that they see through the Mc-Carthyite tactics. They see the great 'red scare' for what it is, a smoke-screen under cover of which the union-haters and the haters of de-mocracy intend to infiltrate us and slit our throats."

'I still say East-West trade is Bolshevism, slumps at least are American!"

COHN'S KAMPF: Meanwhile the N. Y. COHN'S KAMPF: Meanwhile the N.Y. Natl. Guard announced it was investigating Roy Cohn's own service record because of a "tremendous number" of inquiries in recent weeks. Cohn first became eligible for the draft on Feb. 20, 1945, while fighting was still going on in both Europe and the Pacific. Former Congressman Benjamin J. Rabin (D-N.Y.) nominated him for West Point and Cohn was deferred. When he couldn't pass West Point's physical examination, he was nominated again amination, he was nominated again and again failed the test. In August, 1946, he was classified 1-A in spite of a third nomination. His appeal from that classification was never passed upon because the draft was halted late Cohn enlisted in the Natl. Guard a few days before the draft went back into effect on July 1, 1948. He is now a first lieutenant in the Judge Advocate-General's Dept. If he is ever called to active duty his assignment will be—helping to run the draft.

ophy to take direct action. Exact steps haven't been decided. But the U.S. would either bomb Red China or throw U.S. troops into Indo-China or both. The U.S. would be willing in this case to risk World War III."

PREPARING THE PEOPLE: Reston explained the factors behind the Dulles' statement: it

"... reflected the apprehension that has been felt in official quarters here about the Geneva Conferenc on Korea and Indo-China; the present status of French politics; and the present state of public opinion in this country... [which] was not prepared for armed intervention by the U.S.... The Administration has decided that it must do something to make clear to everybody, including the American people, that this region cannot be allowed to slip away to the Communists."

Cromley noted another purpose:

*. . . To serve notice on our allies, the British and French, that whatever lure the Reds offer at Geneva . . . and however tempted our friends are to give in (under pressure of their opinion) we are resolved not to give way one thin inch in Indo-China."

IT CAN BE STOPPED: Dulles' speech followed weeks of build-up (leaks, trial balloons, official statements) to condiballoons, official statements) to condition Americans to accept "the necessary risks" (Sen. Alexander Wiley) of taking over the war. It reflected the deepening crises of Washington's policy as its allies stepped up demands for China's admission to UN, for big trade with the socialist world; as the structure of U.S. policy in Europe was threatened by growing opposition to German rearmament and the post-Berlin relaxation of tension, and as the lin relaxation of tension, and as the worsening Indo-China situation threat-ened U.S. policy in Asia with collapse.

The danger implicit in Dulles' saberrattling, coming in the midst of the new series of Pacific H-bomb tests, was brutally clear; but sane citizens recalled how earlier steps in the Administration's march to an all-Asian and world war had been halted. In his 1953 State of the Union message his 1953 State of the Union message the President threatened such a war when he announced the "unleashing" when he announced the "unleashing" of Chiang Kai-shek to permit attacks on the China mainland. The Alsops disclosed (2/22) that in March, 1953, the President was ready "to order national mobilization and an unlimited effort" to break the Korean stalemate; but world forces for peace finally forced Washington into the armistice, Today, with the forces for war showing greater desperation, compelling the Administration to let the Indo-China peoples mould their own destiny demands greater efforts.

THE LOST WAR: Tribune des Nations' military analyst "Col. X" spoke for nearly all France when he wrote (3/12);

"France has lost the war in Indo-China. Premier Laniel has put for-ward in Parliament the final argu-ment which the diehards can use. It was this:

"M. Mendes France: '. . So it was necessary to negotiate.'
"M. Laniel: 'After proving to the enemy that he could not be victorious either.'

"It could not be said better, and by a more official voice, that the expeditionary force can no longer be victorious. In these conditions, the continuation of the war loses all military justification."

In the Dien Bien Phu battle (Christian Science Monitor, 3/24) "the tide was slowly but steadily turning against" the French. If it should fall,

"...this blow ... would leave behind it a shambles of fallen French Cabinets ... frustrated U.S. security plans.'

But CSM found even more signi-

"... indications that formerly pro-French Viet Nam nationalists, se-verely rebuffed by the collapse of independence talks in Paris this week, are beginning to think in terms of opening negotiations with the Com-munists... The nationalists now have been deprived virtually of their only reason for existence. Proof of this, together with the ominous im-plications is seen in the announce-ment Mar. 25 that former pro-French Premier Tran Van Huu has called for a cease-fire and negotiations with the a cease-fire and negotiations with the Communists."

debris, as it drifts like smoke in the wind, there begins here and there to fall the dust of the city's wreckage. This powder is now heavily radioactive.

What happens now depends on the whim of wind and rain, and a dozen complex factors. In one case, with a high burst and little dust, not much comes to earth nearby, but all is spread by the winds until in a week or two the radioactivity is dispersed in a great belt perhaps around the world, so dilute that while the vigilant instruments can sense it and note it well, it does no further harm to man.

THE UNBORN TOO: But at other times, usually when the bomb has burst low, or has been specially "rigged" to produce radiation by burning added elements in its thermonuclear flame, much more can happen. In the first hours, along a great swath downwind, perhaps only a score of miles away or perhaps up to three or four hundred, the fall-out or radioactive dust can contaminate whole counties, even half a state, as it did the deck of the tuna trawler off Bikini. And all who lived below, men and their families, beasts, even the birds, would have at once to leave the region of contamination.

The laggards or the unready would face severe burns, grave illness, pos-sibly death. They could return after some days or weeks in the usual case. Here and there, though, field and forest might become unsafe for all to dwell, perhaps for months and years. And the fate even of the unborn may be formed to disaster by the occasional genetic damage done by unsensed rays.

NO MAN CAN SAY: That the test of such a bomb, even in the lonely Pacific, is free from hazard, no responsible man would say. But it does not seem likely that widespread danger to men can come from the remote test alone, though occasional mischance can bring serious injury to some. Fish and fowl will suffer and some may die, probably for a matter of days, and over a space of some hundred miles or so. What the long-range effects may be of spreading such huge amounts of radioactive material over the complex world of the wild is not known to anyone.

Apparently the March 1 explosion exceeded in power the expectations of its designers, but not by enough to endanger the nearest observers. It was the chance fall-out, dependent on winds and the movement of dust, which

The responsibility for that injury rests with the administration of the test. For the fall-out must be followed, and any in its path warned, and removed if necessary. Had the fishermen been removed to a clean boat for a day or two, or perhaps simply warned to stay below decks till midnight, they would in all likelihood have escaped their serious burns.

THE POLITICAL TEST: The test of a bomb 10 times bigger than the one of March 1 is perhaps still possible, though imprudent. Any larger size than that is too big for the Pacific. The prevailing winds at high altitudes blow west to east, and carry the fall-out in the end not to Japan but to the west coast of our continent. The 5,000 miles are still an effective dilution agent.

Still, it is not really the test or the mishap or the error which ought to bring deepest anxiety and determined resistance. It is their political meaning. It is rather the deliberate explosion of such bombs in war, not in a U.S. test over the water-waste of the Mar-shall Islands, nor in a Soviet test over the tundra of the sub-arctic, but above the homes and cities of man.

Atomic war, in the time of the hydrogen bomb, is wholly evil. With that conclusion few will disagree. The only answer will be elimination of the use of nuclear weapons. Those who speak for peace today have behind their guments the urgent sound of far Bikini,

"After careful examination of all the material submitted by you . . . [we] find no ground to believe that you would be subjected to physical persecution if deported to that country [S. Korea]."

The injunction granted March 31

THROUGH THE POLITICAL SEWER - IV

Crime bosses show party bosses how to run the city

By Elmer Bendiner

ANY enterprising criminal, above the level of a pick-pocket, must sooner or later dirty his hands with machine politics.

Big crime, like big business, must have protection from government and must therefore take a hand in government. Moreover, government shells out more money per year than any private source and, since the money is the publie's, it is dispensed generously. Years ago the public trough

Years ago the public trough was the exclusive province of politicians and selected big businessmen. The operation was somewhat catch-as-catch-can; it lacked the expert touch. That came with the growth of powerful crime syndicates which, for a price, serve hig business and the major political machines.

JUDGE ON THE WIRE: In New York the presiding ex-perts at the trough have been three team-mates: Frank Cos-tello, Joe Adonis and Meyer Lansky.

This is a typical day in Frank Costello's life, pieced together from testimony before the Kefauver Senate Crime Investigating Committee. It was some time in 1942, and Costello's control of Tammany Hall was unblushingly admitted. In the morning Costello at his home, 115 Central Fark West received a phone Park West received a phone call from Thomas A. Aurelio, phone who thanked him for giving him the Democratic nomina-tion to the N. Y. Supreme Court.

According to Sen. Tobey (R-N. H.) of the Kefauver committee, Justice Aurelio quoted Shakespeare to Costello: "Gratitude is the expectation of favors yet to come." (Justice Aurelio still sits on the bench in the Supreme Court, 1st Judicial Diet.) Judicial Dist.)

FOLITICAL SLOTS: Costello conducted his business by tele-phone until 10 a.m. (Wiretaps revealed callers such as An-thony P. Savarese, now a judge in Queens County Surrogate's Court, and Joseph V. Loscalzo, now sitting in the Court of Special Sessions.) Other calls related to Costello's extensive related to Costello's extensive slot-machine enterprises, an old line of work which brought him not only money but political favor when needed. For example, when Mayor LaGuardia made things difficult in New York, Gov. Huey Long invited Costello to set up his machines throughout Lenisispe. machines throughout Louisiana and give the state a modest cut of the take.

In mid-morning Costello would transfer his headquar-ters to the barber-shop of the Waldorf-Astoria, where while he was shaved those who had the inside track paid court to him, talked business, made deals. His afternoons would be spent at the golf course, the Waldorf - Astoria, the Hotel Madison or the Copacabana night club where appoint-ments with him might be made by phone.

GOOD WORKS: Though his day sounds pleasant, Costello— on the links or at the bar— was never far from the business of government. Loscalzo, only an aspiring DA then, went around the links with him. Tammany leaders, judges, mayors conferred with him at breakfast, lunch, supper or in his long Copacabana evenings.

There was a short-lived scandal in 1943 concerning Justice Aurelio, and Costello has claimed that he then stepped out of politics. But brief glimpses of his life since then indicate etherwise. indicate otherwise

In 1948, in a private dining room at the Biltmore, Costello sat down to dinner with the present Tammany boss, Carmine DeSapio, Generoso Pope, Frank Mancuso and Louis A. Valente. TEN COPS FOR EVERY SCAB

After four weeks of the longshore strike seabs, hard to find, are closely guarded by cops while they work. Shipowners complained that the AFL, out to break the strike, was sending them "goofs" instead of longshoremen. At least one ship's cargo had to be re-stowed completely.

WAR ON THE WATERFRONT

City, state, U.S. officials mount all-out assault but strike holds

THE full power of city, state and national government, every big daily paper and almost every radio commentator are joined in a gigantic, un-precedented strike-breaking effort, effectively sold to the public as "racket-busting."

The full-scale offensive is being tested on the docks of New York where members of the independent Intl. Longshoremen's Assn. have been on strike since March 5. The AFL has joined the offensive; most of the labor movement, even the left wing, has been silent, though the American Labor Party indicated support.

"WE'LL TAKE OUR CHANCE": On Saturday, March 27, N.Y.
Gov. Dewey, U.S. Secy. of Labor Mitchell and representatives of the Dept. of Justice met in New York's Roosevelt
Hotel, planned immediate prosecution of strike leaders and branded the strike a 'criminal conspiracy.

The longshoremen seemed The longshoremen seemed unshaken. On Monday the strike was still solid, the waterfront quiet. At strike head-quarters, 107 Washington St., strike committee chairman Frank Murray, a broad-shoulered six-footer with nine years on the docks, told the GUARDIAN he thought the strike gained strength over the week-end despite the rallying week-end despite the rallying of government forces. What about the threat of indictments and jail?

Murray looked about the little room where the strike committee had ranged themselves behind him, and said: "I think everybody here will take his chances." The men nodded and smiled.

REPORT ON ALBANY

What the Legislature did: People's needs brushed off, racetrack mess whitewashed

By Arthur Schutzer

THE session which ended March 20 was long on linen, very The session which ended March 20 was long on linen, very on bread-and-butter. The linen was harness track material! It was tenderly dipped, washed, spot-cleaned and then hung out as the bright new banner of the Dewey administration. The Democrats also joined the legislative laundry games, while bread-and-butter issues were ignored or buried.

New Yorkers could hardly become as excited as Republican and Democratic solons pretended to be as to whether Dewey's pal Tom Curran, or a relative of the late Democratic Minority Leader Irwin Steingut, benefited more from racetrack stock.

What the people were—and remain—very much concerned with are:

UNEMPLOYMENT INSUR-ANCE: The Legislature refused ANCE: The Legislature refused to increase benefit rates. It did extend unemployment insurance coverage; however, this does not go into effect unless and until Congress passes similar legislation. This tricky, empty gesture still leaves 500,-000 workers in N. Y. State without coverage.

RENT CONTROL: No action on bills to repeal the 15% rent-increase law. Meanwhile, the so-called State Rent Control Commission announced that during February, 1954, it approved 28,184 rent increases and 1,058 certificates of eviction.

HOUSING: Approved a $200 million bond issue for public housings no action to insure proper relocation for thousands of "displaced persons" evicted for housing projects. Failed to act on measures to compel removal of housing violations and to protect tenants in fire-traps.

TRANSIT AUTHORITY: No action on repeal of the Transit Authority Law which ushered in the 15c fare—with a further increase directly ahead.

SCHOOLS: No action on the desperately-needed state bond issue of $600 million for school construction.

CIVIL RIGHTS: No action on bills to end discrimination in all housing.

ELECTION LAW: Several bills loaded with gimmicks were passed, Thus, voting machines may (not must) be used in primaries; permanent personal registration may (not must) be adopted by local governments; county committees may (not must) provide for direct election of district leaders. Some liberalization of the supertechnical requirements for primary petitions was passed (repealed requirement for sworn affidavit by circulator of designating petition; reduced from 7% to 5% the signatures required for independent nominating petitions). However, the Wilson-Pakula Law (enacted in 1947 to prevent enrolled Democrats and Republicans from nominating Vito Marcantonio in party primaries) was left intact, giving the lie to Gov. Dewey's indication of real electoral reform in his January message. reform in his January message.

LABOR: On March 28 Dewey signed a bill putting union welfare funds under the stewardship of the State Supt. of Insurance. (Thus the arbitrary, utterly indefensible dissolution of the Intl. Workers Order is followed by similar attacks on union funds.)

NEXT STEPS: Since the Legislature did not see fit to hold public hearings on key bills, the people should insist they be heard in executive public hearings by Gov. Dewey before he acts within the 30-day period on the 914 bills before him. An executive public hearing should be demanded on the anti-labor measures that were rushed through as a by-product of the Harness Track Folies, like the one that would ban the closed shop.

SPECIAL SESSION: The forthcoming special session must not be limited (as Dewey, unfortunately, has the power to do) to bailing out the Long Island RR or to compulsory auto insurance. It should act to combat unemployment, repeal the 15% rent increase and Transit Authority Law, increase state aid to N.Y.C...end discrimination in all housing, repeal the Wilson-Pakula Law, and insure proper salary raises for teachers.

The waterfront

(Continued from Page 9) gerprinting, government hiring halls. That fight, said Murray, "affects every union but they don't seem to realize it."

STRIKEBREAKERS: Murray was hopeful on Monday. He said some of the men who went AFL had come back, some teamsters were refusing to cross ILA picket lines. Ordinarily some 20,000 men work on the docks. At no time duvisor the docks. At no time during the strike have there been more than 4,000. ILA spokesmen said few of those are longshoremen; most are new to the piers, many of them sent by the Welfare Dept. to accept jobs or go off relief.

The bi-state commission admitted it was easing all rules to qualify longshoremen for their jobs. It was plain from a walk on the waterfront where police, mounted and foot, far outnumbered pickets that what kept the strike solid was not gang rule but the simple fact that longshoremen would not break the strike.

HEROES OR HOODLUMS? More than 1,000 ILA members, all war veterans, went to Washington by motor caravan on Sunday night. They pick-eted the White House waving American Legion banners, wearing overseas hats, carrying placards which read: "He-roes from '41-'45; Hoodlums from '46-'54." AFL pres. George Meany called the picket line "communist strong-arm tactics" to intimidate the government."

In New York, authorities moved swiftly to make good their threats. An undisclosed number of longshoremen were being rounded up and placed under subpena to appear be-fore a grand jury.

"FREE CHOICE": But the heavy artillery was left to the Natl. Labor Relations Board. At an NLRB election last fall the ILA topped its AFL rival by 1,492. There were 4,399 challenged ballots but more than 34 of these were cast for the

ILA and challenged by the AFL. Last week the Board urged shipping companies to apply for new injunctions against the strikers. The companies com-plied, and in a series of charges against the union paved the way for the NLRB to press for an injunction banning all pickets and "loiterers" on the water front. In Washington NLRB officials, acting on a trial examiner's opinion, were pre-paring to rule the last election invalid and schedule a new one.

Gov. Dewey and AFL's Meany pressed for a delay in calling the election. The N.Y. Times indicated the strike should be broken first, commented edibroken first, commented edi-torially: "The free choice of the workers cannot be ascer-tained unless a tranquil atmos-phere prevails on the piers." Mayor Wagner, whose TV back-to-work appeals had failed and who had called on President Eisenhower to act.

President Eisenhower to act, left the stage for Dewey and quietly went off to Jamaica, B. W. I. for a vacation.

HOW TO BE A MAYOR: In December, 1949, Louis Lipsky, a long-standing Republican who nevertheless ran frequent messages from Mayor O'Dwyer to Costello, journeyed out to Costello's Sands Point residence. His mission: to secure Costello's help in getting Frank Quayle the Democratic nomination for Mayor. He explained that even as a Republican he was interested in the Demo-cratic nominee, because in the city, "There's no votes on the Republican end for Mayor."

Committee Counsel Rudolph Halley asked: "Based on your years of experience in politics in this city, did you believe it was necessary to get Costello's backing for your candidate? Lipsky: "I would say so."

"YOU SAY, 'FINE'": Costello mixed not only with politi-cians. His callers were as varied as his interests. Frank Erickson, convicted of heading a large and lucrative bookmaka large and increasive bookmaning ring, was a frequent caller at the Waldorf-Astoria barber shop. Twice a week, Erickson told the Senate crime probers, he played golf at the Garden Club with Costello, George Mor-ton Levy of the harness track combines and an internal revenue agent who has since profited handsomely from a modest raceways investment.

modest raceways investment.
Erickson, who left school after the fourth grade, had a reported income of close to $200,000 a year in 1946. Though he had made good in his own way he still served Costello as an underling, guiding Costelo's oil investments and lending him occasional large sums. He reportedly persuaded Cos-tello to install Mike Kennedy as Tammany leader, though Erickson denied all interest in politics. Asked about his membership in the Natl. Democratic Club. Erickson said:

"Well, you know how people solicit you to join a club and you say, 'Fine,' and they say, 'We will have a nice time down there, and have a few drinks'; and I joined it."

What's in a name like Oscar?

THE spring of 1954 comes up with smaller breads and larger circuses. The three-ring circus of McCarthy, Jenner and Velde still operates Under the Big Lie.

Holding its own in the world of ballyhoo, this year's Hollywood Academy Awards were staged simultaneously in two cities, 3,000 miles apart. Hong Kong, Sydney, Paris, London and all important points in the U.S. east of Los Angeles broadcast 90 minutes populing with many celebrities and popping with many celebrities and few surprises. On television the show clicked with the efficiency of a busy lunch-counter, sandwiching movie personalities between thick slices of Oldsmobile commercials.

Every year Hollywood indulges in this rite of bowing down before the golden calf called Oscar. This the golden calf called Oscar. This faceless lump is worth several times its weight in gold. A name or a title after which can be printed "Academy Award Winner" is good for a substantial loan at the bank. Years ago one victor staggered from saloon to saloon, on credit, by waving what he called his "goddam passport to fame" his "goddam passport to fame."

Drawing by Dyad, London "Say, we're kinda gettin' short o' stars!"

SENSIBLE AMERICANS: This year the conniving and campaigning were toned down, probably because From Here to Eternity was expected to romp down the home stretch with most of the awards. Walt (call-me-Walt) Disney wound up with a goodly collection of the heavy little statuettes for his mantel. Maybe when he hears the word "union" he reaches for his Oscar. Despite the spurious showmanship and the high-school diploma atmosphere, good sense was shown in the choice of the pictures for top honors. The American public should be given an Oscar for having singled them out at the box-office from a pretty shoddy field of runners. From Here to Eternity and Stalag Seventeen—and the nominees Julius Caesar, Martin Luther and Little Fugitive—gave little aid or comfort to the cold-war brass. These movies did not portray people as docile fools nor rulers as infallible heroes, in the past or the present. In the prison-camp picture Stalag Seventeen a Nazi was still a Nazi, not an EDC brother-in-arms. And Eternity did not glorify brutality in our own army, but so indicted it that at a recent showing of the film in Germany former members of the Wehrshowing of the film in Germany former members of the Wehr-macht got up and shouted: "That's us!"

PEANUTS OF 1951: No Stalag is the minus-quality Prisoner of War soon to be released by MGM. It was undertaken as a suposedly documented film about atrocities in N. Korean POW camps. Originally the Army co-operated, permitting the screen writer to interview former POW's during the five-day period after they returned to the U.S. He purported to gather authentic incidents and real conversations. But after one good look at the finished product, the Army withdrew its support, refusing even to send a military band to play at the gala opening. Says the Army: "[Prisoner of War] . . . is not an accurate portrayal. . . . It's just contrary to the facts as we know them."

Says "Variety" in an advance review: "Many of the sequences would be laughable if the basis was not such a serious one."

Says the writer: "The picture tells an honest factual story."

Says the writer: "The picture tells an honest factual story."

THE MASTER MIND: It will surprise absolutely nobody that the above-mentioned writer, Allen Rivkin, is the acknowledged master-mind behind the campaign to drive progressives out of the Screen Writers Guild and out of the motion picture industry.

Suggestion to MGM: Prepare now for next year's Academy Awards by changing the title of Prisoner of War to an accurate description of the picture and what it would like to accomplish. Call it From Here to Oblivion.
