

As they were dancing the Tennessee waltz . . .

Sen. Karl Mundt, chairman of the Senate committee investigating the McCarthy-Army mess, looks as though he has just swooned in the arms of committee counsel Ray Jenkins, the Tennessee lawyer with a voice like a bleeding foghorn. But it was only a whispered confidence in a hearing full of confidences and confidence men. As the days drone on the whole show more and more acquires the genuineness of a professional wrestling match—and the results, it appears, will be just as conclusive.

WAR & PEACE British Cabinet backs move for peace in Indo-China; Dulles seeks way to dodge Congress' vote on intervention by U. S.

By Kumar Goshal

AS the Geneva conference entered its seventh week, the British Cabinet gave Foreign Minister Eden its approval to continue negotiations for Indo-China peace and Korean unity. Secy. Dulles pursued his search for an excuse to enter the Indo-China war, to break off Korean unity talks. Meanwhile he threatened France with loss of U. S. aid if it failed to ratify the European Army treaty (EDC).

To enter the war, Dulles had to find a way to avoid asking for Congressional approval—certain to be denied him at present. He counted on Congressional approval of a S. E. Asia pact involving Thailand, the feudal princedoms of Laos and Cambodia and a Bao Dai-ruled section of Vietnam, the terms of which . . . would leave the President free to do whatever he finds necessary to support the agreement. That way, Congress would not be called on to vote directly on the war issue" (Business Week, 5/22).

COLLAPSING RACKETS: To secure UN "moral sanction" for U. S. intervention in the war, Thailand, "prodded by the U. S.," has already complained of a threat to its security by the Viet Minh, asked UN to send "observers" (Newsweek, 6/7). Laos and Cambodia were expected to follow suit.

But popular resistance governments are strong in Laos and Cambodia—whether they are recognized at Geneva or not. Well-informed diplomats at Geneva described the Thailand government as "a racket . . . more corrupt than Chiang's had been in China," whose members "have large sums hoarded" in U. S. or Switzerland. These diplomats had no doubt that the Thai government "would willingly tell the world, at Mr. Dulles' suggestion, that they were attacked by Communists." They reported that disgusted young Thais were drifting "up to the N. E. Province to join the Free Thais," and believed Thailand could "any day collapse from its own internal confusion" (London New Statesman, 6/5).

HO COMING HOME: Threads of news penetrating French censors indicated President Ho Chi Minh's army might soon re-enter Hanoi, capital of his Vietnam Republic government when France recognized it in 1946. James Reston reported (NYT, 6/9) an "alarming deterioration of the military and political situation. . . . Officials in Washington are now fearful for the fate of the whole of Vietnam."

Meanwhile at Geneva the U. S. S. R.'s Molotov recommended direct French-Indo-Chinese talks on "both military and political questions" covering all three Indo-China States, "along parallel lines." Britain and France disagreed with Washington's move to transfer political talks from Geneva to the UN General Assembly in New York. In Washington, Defense Secy. Wilson was reported convinced, after a three-week Far East trip, that S. E. Asia problems were more political than military (NYT, 6/3).

Korean unity discussions took a favorable turn: the N. Koreans accepted S. Korea's proposal for proportional representation as the basis for an all-Korean commission, under supervision of a neutral nations' commission. Negotiations continued as the S. Koreans demanded clarification of the all-Korean commission's powers and supervision by a UN commission. With U. S. allies reluctant to break off Korean unity talks, an uneasy Syngman Rhee asked the U. S. to walk out of the conference and help him unify Korea by force (AP, 6/7).

RESTIVE EUROPEANS: Neither Italy nor France seemed ready to ratify EDC. In France, a jittery government followed up a recent suppression of an edition of the Communist Humanité by

THE PRESS THE ST. GEORGE BILL

Opposition press threatened by Congress move to limit 2nd class mailing privilege

By Lawrence Emery

REP. Katharine Price Collier St. George, who belongs to the Republican horsey set around posh Tuxedo Park, N. Y. (she is a member of the American Assn. of Horse Shows and the Newburgh Saddle & Bridle Club), last week was engaged in an effort to overthrow the freedom of the press. On May 25 she introduced a bill (H. R. 9317) "to prohibit the transmission through the mails at less than cost of publications, books, other printed matter, and films containing material contrary to the best interests of the U. S."

For this radical departure from an Anglo-American tradition that goes back to the year 1660 and is firmly rooted in U. S. history, Mrs. St. George originally scheduled hearings to begin

June 7; a staff member of the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service thought they might last "for a couple of days." Protests and demands for more time caused a postponement; the hearings are now uncertainly set for June 14 or 18 or 21.

Mrs. St. George herself will preside over a subcommittee composed of Reps. H. R. Gross (R-Ia.), Edward J. Bonia (R-Pa.), Joel T. Broyhill (R-Va.), John Jarman (D-Okla.), John Dowdy (D-Tex.), Edward P. Boland (D-Mass.), and Frazier Reams (Ind-O.).

WHAT IT DOES: Under the St. George bill, the Postmaster General may "forthwith and without prior notice" revoke the second-class mailing privilege of any publication he may have "reasonable grounds to believe . . . contains material which advocates, advises, or teaches, or explicitly or by implication favors the political, economic, international and governmental doctrines of communism or any other totalitarian form of government, or the establishment in the U. S. or any foreign state of a communist or other totalitarian dictatorship."

Any publication caught in this wide-angled net shall have "during a period of 30 days after such revocation . . . the right to a hearing to show cause why such tentative revocation should not be made perma-

If We Die

You shall know, my sons, shall know
Why we leave the song unsung,
The book unread, the work undone,
To lie beneath the sod.

Mourn no more, my sons, no more,
Why the lies and smears were framed,
The tears we shed, the hurt we bore,
To all shall be proclaimed.

Earth shall smile, my sons, shall smile—
And green above our resting place,
The killing end, the world rejoice
In brotherhood and peace.

Work and build, my sons, and build
A monument to love and joy,
To human worth, to faith we kept
For you, my sons, for you!

Hitler plus H-bomb

REGINA, SASK., CANADA
After a week's bombardment via press and radio, one gets the idea that Americans must be stark, raving mad. Then along comes the GUARDIAN to assure us that sanity has not completely disappeared from the American scene.

Such "smugness" may be irritating, but I'm sure it is understandable. We Canadians haven't any silly senator from Wisconsin, and we haven't got a Dulles dashing around the world waving a hydrogen bomb. But if we suffer from smugness, please don't mistake it for complacency. Your rulers have a lot of us frightened and perplexed. We can't understand why a great and powerful nation such as yours should tremble for its existence every time a hungry man in some part of the world demonstrates for an extra crust of bread. We remember Hitler and his "containment of communism." But Hitler with a hydrogen bomb—ugh!

The Bunche affair

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.
The fact that Dr. Ralph Bunche was critical of U.S. foreign policy, coupled with the fact that he was called to a loyalty board hearing, seems proof that the government is trying to make criticism of its policies unpopular.

needed work with enthusiasm, you choose to dismiss it with extraneous references to Dr. Meyer's leftist leanings. This kind of disparagement might be expected from others, but not from you. Furthermore, it is difficult to believe you wrote your "review" after a careful reading; it reads as though you had casually passed a priori judgment after quickly scanning the table of contents and a few random passages.

As for your reference to the book's scope and content "putting a strain on the average reader's digestion," while they may not be presented in popular style, surely there are enough readers left with capacity to appreciate and welcome one of the most significant books of this, perhaps the last decade. You have done Dr. Meyer a great disservice, but a greater disservice to those who hold you in high regard.

In the church

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.
There is so much false propaganda on the air and in our daily press and even in our churches, that it is disgusting. My church (First Presbyterian of Hollywood, largest Presbyterian church in the world) is stooping to this hate propaganda now. I have asked the ministers to stop it, but they slip some of it in at every chance. I have told them I will not give another cent to the church as long as it does this. I consider the work that you are doing far more necessary to the welfare of our country and the world than that of a crooked church.

Some editors would have said: "The price of fruit is none of our business."

In Orlando, Florida, an editor made fruit prices (which were low) his business, predicted, higher prices if growers would show backbone, held their stuff a few weeks.

You see, the editor had heard of a freeze in Spain, a short crop in California.

A little courage at the right time made our orange growers rich this year.

For Valentine

NEW YORK, N. Y.
Enclosed $200 as a gift to the GUARDIAN from my departed daughter, Valentine. She would have preferred the money spent on flowers and other remembrances we received at the time of her death to go to the paper fighting for her and my ideals. But people feel better making personal remembrances, I suppose. To give instead to a cause is the last thing they learn; and all learn too late that giving of yourself to the cause of peace might prevent the greatest grief of all, loss of one's child.

We cannot overnight stop preparations for war and give the money to scientific research, but liberals and radicals could certainly do without the millions of superfluous of our short, precarious lives—if all could only comprehend the agony and despair of a mother helpless in the face of a death which science devoted to humanity might have prevented.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
In his "Worry Clinic" column in the Newark Star-Ledger, Dr. George W. Crane prints a letter from "Dr. Larry J., a talented dentist . . . Dr. Crane comments: "One of the best ways to combat communism is to help good Americans like Dr. Larry find a suitable wife so they can rear three or four children in our American tradition of religion, free enterprise and our republican form

"You will rise again even as the grass of the field; though all men's hands be set against you, though you feel isolated and abandoned, you, the rank and file, will surely rise to spread the green mantle of democracy over this ravished American soil."—OSCAR AMERINGER (speaking to Illinois miners, 1930).

REPORT TO READERS

Red ink on page 1 means you're ripe for renewal

THE YOUNG GENTLEMAN with the pitchfork, across the page, is out to make hay while the June sun shines on this Spring's crop of GUARDIAN renewals. It is quite a healthy crop and our hope is to get it all in the barn before the dry spell sets in.

You can tell at a glance where your sub stands. If your address plate on page 1 or your subscription wrapper is printed in red ink, your sub is ripe for renewal. Will you take a quick look, right now?

THIS CROP includes all unrenewed subs dated through June, 1954. If yours comes due in July or August, your plate may not be printed in red ink but you could renew now, to save our Circulation Dept. the job of pulling your stencil out for the July-August expiration list.

If the date on your address plate goes back quite a stretch, don't get conscience-stricken about it; it undoubtedly means we have had a contribution from you, or a fistful of new readers or some other "S for Sparkplug" activity that warranted keeping your sub alive without bothering you about it.

NOW, HOWEVER, our young Haymaker across the page is covering the whole field. The past is prologue, he says, to the future, he says. What's done is done and tomorrow is another day. A renewal in the barn is worth two on the bush and now is the time for all good subscribers-in-arrears to come to the aid of the Circulation Dept. Red ink comes high; let's get those address-plates out of the red!

That's what our Haymaker Angel says. What do you say?

Good appetite!

BROWNSVILLE, TEX.
I have been scraping and saving for a year to get a set of teeth. Saved $25 by getting them made in Matamoros, Mexico. Will get them Saturday. I did without the teeth until I had ulcerated stomach because of faulty mastication. #### We'll live

SUNNYSIDE, L. I.
Am enclosing $10—three for last year's sub, three for this year—if we live that long—and four to keep up the good work. The GUARDIAN is a welcome relief after the daily fifth sheets one reads these days. Our only regret is that it comes but once a week.

The Lion and the Beast

HERMOSA BEACH, CALIF.
I heard on the radio about the visit of the Lion of Judah, Haile Selassie, for whom I have always had a great respect. I saw him in the newsreel when he appeared before the League of Nations, and revered the supreme dignity with which he received the boos and catcalls of the riffraff who were representing Italy. It breaks my heart to see him walking into this trap and handing his nation, bound, to the Beast. They do not deserve it, nor does he.

Why must we be like this? I am old and have never been able to talk to people. I do what I can with my typewriter. Well, I feel a little better, getting this off my chest, and my courage is coming back.

Keep Telling Congress

Indo-China continues to be the crucial issue, but the flood of letters against further U.S. involvement is encouraging more Congressmen to take a position. An example: Hugh Scott, former chairman of the Republican Natl. Comm., and James A. Byrne (D.)—both of Pa.—when contacted by the Progressive Party of Pa., put themselves on record against sending U.S. troops to Indo-China. Said Byrne: "I do not wish to see the policy of colonialism furthered in any part of the world."

A May 16 Gallup Poll shows 68% against, 22% for sending troops. In another poll on May 19, asking "What do you think America would gain by getting into a fighting war in Indo-China?" 48% answered "Nothing"; 7% no gain, but leading to World War III; 3% no gain, leading to bigger debt, ill will; 18% stop communism from taking over.

We urge you to keep writing, visiting Congressmen and state and local officials, asking them to speak out on no U.S. involvement and a speedy cease-fire settlement at Geneva.

ON JUNE 19, 1953, ETHEL AND JULIUS ROSENBERG WERE PUT TO DEATH

'They left us a legacy—we will live freer because they died'

By Helen Sobell

I COULD have reached out and touched Ethel's hand. I said to myself again, as I had said to so many others: "I could have been in Ethel's place; she could have been standing here in mine." It would have taken such a small turn of the wheel of fate for my husband, Morton Sobell, to have been lying in one of the caskets, and I dead at his side. Instead, Morton's fate is the living death of 30 years on the Devil's Island of Alcatraz—and I stood beside the coffins of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg.

Not here in this coffin but in the tight little apartment of the lower east side will I remember a living Ethel. My eyes have seen her face fewer times than can be counted on my fingers, but my heart knows her well. She was born in the squalor of the poorest, most crowded part of New York City on Sept. 23, 1915. Her mother still lives in that same house where Ethel grew up with her three brothers. She suffered a childhood of loneliness and deprivation. Unloved herself, she poured her heart's warmth and affection into her little brother, the infamous David Greenglass, who sent her to her death.

ALWAYS THE ARTIST: But even the hardness of her life added to the strength and creativeness of this daughter of the people. After high school and a six months' business course, Ethel worked three years as a clerk in a shipping and packing concern; but she found her real life in her singing. In each place where she worked from 1932 until her marriage in 1939, she was a union member. Through those years each penny of every paycheck, except for carfare and lunches, went to her family—to the mother who did not even come to her funeral, to the brother who killed his sister.

Always Ethel was the artist, the singer, the dancer. She studied drama in a famous settlement house on the lower east side, but she never studied a drama which could be compared to that which she was to experience.

When Ethel and Julius were married they had the problems of where to live and what to do. But they knew each other well; they had gone to the same high school, had exchanged experiences and ideas during the time they waited for Julius to graduate from the School of Technology of the College of the City of New York in February of 1939. It was a period of working at odd jobs for Julius. They knew they were meant to live together. They did not know that they must die together.

THIS WAS HOME: They went to live with Julius's mother, Sophie Rosenberg. No help or offer of help came from Ethel's mother. But Sophie Rosenberg must have then, as she did later waiting at their caskets, called them her two children. They were her pride and her promise.

They found a furnished room in the same poor section of the city, and finally an apartment—a place to live and bring their children into the world. They must have felt that this modest yet to them wonderful apartment, these three rooms and bath in an elevator building, was more than a stopping place for them; it was really a home. From a friend who was going to California they got some old furniture. They picked up other odds and ends—and one new piece of furniture, a console table. It was this table that David Greenglass said had been given them as a reward for spying. (Did he feel that his sister and brother-in-law should not have permitted themselves the luxury of buying themselves a cheap $21 table, as a representative of Macy's department store testified had been done?)

Ethel then, a queen among her second-hand furniture, bore her children, tended and cared for her family, cooking, washing, cleaning. All the pleasure and pain that belong to a woman's life were hers as she lived and worked as millions of her sisters throughout the world have done and will continue to do.

THE BABY COMES: Her first son, Michael, was born to her on March 10, 1943. As soon as he could talk, questions poured forth to challenge the energy, imagination, and patience of the mother. Sharp, eager, he hungered for life and knowledge.

Ethel needed all of her strength and cleverness to bring her baby through his first years of life. He was sick. His was not the usual illness common to infants, but unremittingly his temperature soared and he tossed the night away in an atmosphere of vapor and drugs to ease his pain. Patiently Ethel nursed him, looking for improvement, happy for each respite, until her child outgrew his sickness. This very period, when her life was so concentrated upon the most intimate personal cares, was the period during which Ethel was accused of being a spy.

When Michael was 2½ she studied child psychology and music for children, that she might better meet his needs. With Robert came the problems of readjusting an older child to the advent of a younger one, but this too was accomplished with thought and understanding. In their small apartment, to let the older child sleep undisturbed by the younger one, they would leave the combination living-room-bedroom in darkness for Michael and sit in their tiny kitchen. There was no "sacrifice." They wanted to do these things; they worked for their children together.

There were times when Ethel was not too well. She suffered a spinal curvature from the time she was 13, and occasionally would be confined to bed with severe backache; but she still managed to oversee the household. Even when sometimes the hands and shoulders which did the work were another's, hers was always the mind and heart of her home.

SOUND OF A VOICE: The morning of the trial I came to the basement of the court-house, to the place where the jailors keep their prisoners. I wanted to catch a glimpse of my husband, to hear his voice. He was there, and so were Ethel and Julius, each in a separate cell. These three, still clothed in the presumption of innocence ordained by our law, had already suffered more than seven months' imprisonment. Especially for this mother and for her children, even if the jury had decreed her innocence, a tremendous wrong existed. As I pressed against the bars and wires to see a little of what was within, so they, each one of the three, pressed against their bars to see what lay outside. They did not permit me the cold pleasure of almost seeing, almost hearing, almost being together with my husband. They sent me away.

Later I saw them; Ethel with her sweet face and little red jerkin provided a spot of brightness in the somber courtroom. A man sitting next to me whispered: "Is that your husband? He looks so very young." And so they were, all of them. All young with the youth which comes from not having sold one's birthright for a mess of pottage. Young with the love and trust in one's fellowman which loves a neighbor as oneself. Young with decency and honesty which would not lie then and which gave up life later rather than live a lie.

TOGETHER: In the last days before the execution my husband wrote to me from the fog-bound rock that is his prison:

"There are worse things than facing death when you know you are innocent and when you know your cause is just. It is much worse to face the death of your beloved."

True, no agony was spared the Rosenbergs. Ethel could not lay down her life for her husband. Julius could not lay down his for his wife. They had to die together for the world. They knew far better than anyone, with the clarity and detail which come from endless nights and days of contemplation, what sufferings would be visited upon the heads of their children and of their mother. But they saw the whole world too, and in a process as inexorable as giving birth, they knew the truth must be held holy. They left us a legacy. We will live freer, braver because they died.

As I passed by the coffins and looked at Ethel clad in shimmering white, I knew that for me especially she had left a legacy. Her lifeless lips gave me a message of hope:

"You will have your Mort again. The people are stronger now, they are less afraid. They will not permit the first defender of the Rosenbergs to be buried alive. He faced death together with us, he would not exchange his truth for lies about the Rosenbergs. He is the hostage who will be delivered up when the people of the world rise in their anger and demand his freedom."

Thousands pressed to look at Ethel and Julius. I whispered: "I will make your words come true. The freeing of my Mort will be your vindication."

THE CRUELEST HOAX IN HISTORY

What the state said then

"YOUR crime is worse than murder. Plain, deliberate murder is dwarfed in magnitude by comparison with the crime you have committed. . . . Your conduct in putting into the hands of the Russians the A-bomb years before our best scientists predicted Russia would perfect the bomb has already caused the Communist aggression in Korea with the resultant casualties exceeding 50,000 Americans and who knows but that millions more of innocent people may pay the price of your treason. Indeed, by your betrayal you undoubtedly have altered the course of history to the disadvantage of our country."

—Federal Judge Irving Kaufman, sentencing Ethel and Julius Rosenberg to death, April 5, 1951.

"I CAN only say that, by immeasurably increasing the chances of atomic war, the Rosenbergs may have condemned to death tens of millions of innocent people all over the world. The execution of two human beings is a grave matter. But even graver is the thought of the millions of dead whose deaths may be directly attributable

What the experts say now

THE man in the Atomic Energy Commission responsible for classifying nuclear data warned here yesterday that an "ostrich-like" attitude about atomic secrets could lead to a national catastrophe.

Dr. James Beckerley, director of the Atomic Energy Commission Classification Office, said it was time to stop believing that Soviet scientists are incompetent. . . . The atom bomb and the hydrogen bomb were not stolen from us by spies, Dr. Beckerley emphasized. Espionage played a minor role in the attainment of successful weapons by the Soviets, he said. . . . at a meeting of industrialists at the Biltmore Hotel. . . . "The Russians have the skills and the plants to make fission materials and bombs," he said. . . . Atom bombs and hydrogen bombs are not matters that can be stolen and transmitted in the form of information, Dr. Beckerley said, in emphasizing the unimportance of spying in nuclear physics.

"A PEOPLE AWAKENED CANNOT BE BROKEN"

A letter to a Frenchman from the battle line in Viet-Nam

By Wojciech Zukrowski

(Translated from Nowa Kultura, Warsaw, May 2, 1954)

I AM a writer who likes to take chances. If I get the chance to take part in great events, I certainly won't let it pass, even if I have to risk my neck. I left home for six weeks, or so I assured my wife. I exposed myself to her wrath by coming back after six months—proof that I like risks.

I was in the outskirts of Hanoi and at the border of Laos, in the valley of Dienbienphu. If I had fallen into the hands of the French, they would have made me out to be an "agent of Moscow," a spy. Actually, like your brilliant reporter Robert Guillain of Le Monde, who parachuted down into Dienbienphu, I was getting material for articles.

Yet even when the shells from the fortress' heavy guns were falling around me, I never thought of calling the French enemies. The Vietnamese have the same feeling. That is a great victory of the Vietnamese people, a greater victory than their military feats. Despite the cruel war, dragging on into its eighth year, they make a clear distinction between the colonialists and the French people.

BROTHERHOOD OF ART: This unusual maturity of judgment among the peasants and soldiers at the front was not just phrases learned by rote. The Vietnamese were glad to talk with me in French; they were proud of their knowledge of French literature and culture; many had studied in France and still had good friends there.

I remember a January dawn, with the guns growling and hundreds of porters running past in the mist in their conical hats. A tall thin man wearing a beret was sitting next to me, warming his bare feet at the fire, smoking a pipe. As the woven walls of the house shook under the explosions, he recalled the art galleries of Paris. He was one of the best Vietnamese painters—Cau Tien; he had enlisted in the struggle for liberation as a comrade of the front-line soldier. Out of a bamboo tube he took two brilliant water-colors. I shall never forget his whisper: "I like Bonnard," drowned out in the sounds of explosions close at hand. That was more than an expression of gratitude toward the ever-living France.

THE POW'S LEARN: Do you know what a prisoners' camp looks like there? A camp without barbed wire, a camp village. The prisoners often have more food than some of the guards. But it is hard—very hard: the heat, the shortage of medicines, sickness, nostalgia. . . . The dark nights under the arches of giant trees, nights measured by the drumming of heavy drops beating against the leaves, the high pitch of the mosquitoes, the insistent drone of the crickets, the oppressive mist, the odors of rotting vegetation. . . .

But into that green hell a whole nation has entered. Only there will the aggressors learn the damage they have done to every family, to the women, to the millions of children who study at night by oil lamps. Finally they will understand that their soldiers have lost their dignity in this dirty war. . . . Only now do they know where the true interest of France lies.

I spoke with a young French Catholic woman who was working in a hospital for prisoners. She was a volunteer. She wanted, if she could, to make good in part the harm her countrymen were doing to the Vietnamese. She fought suffering, she fought

IN FREE VIET-NAM

This is a school class far behind the fighting in Viet-Nam. Here the children are taught the culture and the traditions of their own land—in addition to reading, writing and all the other things they never were taught before. They are not taught to hate France. Hatred is not in the nature of the Viet-Nam people. Love is.

cruelty, she would explain to the soldiers of the expeditionary corps that they had become like the men who had burnt Oradour, who were the invaders of your country. She is loyal to the true France.

FORCE vs. FAITH: This war is lost for you. This war is horrible nonsense. And yet you could get all the raw materials and merchandise that you wrest from the Vietnamese, along with their sweat, their blood and their lives; you could get them all by signing a trade pact guaranteeing peace with free Vietnam.

A people awakened cannot be broken. This is not just a matter of the Communists. Every man wants to be masier in his own house, to eat his fill, to see the way open before him. The present struggle attests to this stubborn, patient will. The steps cut out by hand in the cliffs, the tons of rice and ammunition carried for hundreds of miles, the land lovingly tended despite air attacks. You cannot take it away by force.

It is simply the will to victory: an invincible faith. How many times did I see a house in flames, the jungle choked with smoke! How many napalm bombs have fallen on villages! . . . The damaged roads were repaired by dusk; there was no break in transport. In a few hours the huts were rebuilt; they told me shrewdly: "We shall win the race with the airplanes; we have more bamboo than they have bombs. . . ."

IF THEY KNEW . . . : More than once, as I drank captured "Dubonnet," or ate sardines from the officers' mess of a ruined fort, I thought what a shock it would be for the ordinary taxpayer if he knew what his money was going for—how it was going to waste there. Well, bombs, it is clear, are money thrown away; but the wine we drank made us remember the magic of sunny Burgundy.

I fell in love with the Vietnamese. How many times there, at the front, under the circling airplanes, we spoke of France in friendly fashion. It brought us closer. Every day lived there was a major lesson in brotherhood among people. That is why I should like, in the name of the heroically battling Vietnam, to repeat to you, a French intellectual, the simple request: "Do not force them into hate! Do not kill France in their hearts!"

censoring an editorial in Jean-Paul Sartre's Temps Modernes and confiscating an issue—and ransacking the office—of the pro-government Express which criticized Indo-China policy. The anti-communist Combat was reminded of "the Pharaohs of old [who] slaughtered the bearers of bad news." On the eve of National Assembly discussions on Indo-China, opponents of continuing the war were reported seeking to join forces with opponents of EDC "to overthrow the government before irrevocable decisions could be taken upon either issue" (N. Y. Times, 6/8).

In Britain, where "U.S. policy is highly suspect by the working-class," everyone agreed that "the British people are completely unprepared . . . to 'examine the possibility' of creating" a S. E. Asia military alliance demanded by the U. S. (NYT, 6/5). Even in Germany two former Chancellors of "great prestige among the Germans"—Bruening and Luther—joined "the conservative movement to reverse W. Germany's foreign policy and make the country a mediator between the Eastern and Western power blocs" (NYT, 6/6). Bruening warned German industrialists of a possible U. S. depression, emphasized the value of trade with socialist countries. At Geneva, "four high-powered German businessmen" met Peking's Foreign Trade Vice-Minister Lei Jen-min to discuss "more German-Chinese trade," demand for which was so great that "Bonn is understood simply not to have been able to prevent" the industrialists' trip (N. Y. Herald Tribune, 6/5).

Aware that the EDC project might collapse, Dulles admitted before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that "the Administration is examining alternatives." According to Hanson Baldwin (NYT, 5/30), the alternative being discussed

"... in Washington and overseas [was the formation of] an 'American foreign legion' [with] European and Asiatic sections. . . . Pay for the first ten years would be half that of American soldiers."

WASHINGTON DOGFIGHTS: The key to Dulles' S. E. Asia policies remained simple and clear: his main target is China. But there were obstacles not only abroad but at home. Wrote Walter Lippmann (NYHT, 6/8):

"The principal obstacle is right here in Washington. . . . The interventionists, led by Adm. Radford, have an ultimate objective—namely the overthrow of the Red Chinese regime. For this objective Secy. Dulles can never hope to organize a united front in Europe and in Asia, and there is not even a united front among the Chiefs of Staff, and with Congress and with American public opinion. . . . [Radford] wants to go places where nobody in Europe, no great power in Asia, and mighty few Americans are willing to go along with him."

Divisions at the home base of the Dulles "policy of strength" continued to get headlines around the world. They were reflected in the split decision in the Oppenheimer case, the Atomic Energy Commission hassle over granting dictatorial status to chairman Lewis Strauss, the increasing bitterness generated by the Army-McCarthy hearings. There was clear danger that extremists might try to resolve the various conflicts and confusions by precipitating a military adventure. Yet equally clear was the American people's opportunity to force a solution of internal conflicts by another road: the way of live-and-let-live between different social systems.

Six weeks ago the Government party approached the general elections with less than even chances of victory. Then the Y affair, bringing the Communist issue again to the forefront of local politics, restored the Government's morale and changed its prospects overnight."

IN MEMORIAM

Edwin Rolfe: Poet, soldier and patriot

By Alvah Bessie

Special to the GUARDIAN

SAN FRANCISCO
SOMETHING tells me the poetry journals will not devote much space to the death on May 24 of Edwin Rolfe, the poet. Though he was published by most of them, Rolfe long ago made it plain that he did not inhabit the rarefied atmosphere of the poetasters and esthetes whose empty verse and dubious merits are debated at such length in these journals.

In fact, even before Spain, Ed Rolfe realized that poetry is something more than avocation, entertainment or self-indulgence. Even before 1937, Rolfe realized it was a weapon for the liberation of mankind, and utilized it as such.

HIS CANVAS: And Spain brought him to his finest expression, both as a poet and a man. For he was one of the first American volunteers of the International Brigades, and as soldier and editor of The Volunteer for Liberty, its front-line newspaper, Rolfe found his canvas—and his battlefield.

Even in World War II, when Ed was in the U.S. Army, his mind returned to 1937. In his last book of verse, the title poem First Love asks:

Why do I always return to the sunken road through corroded hills, with the Moorish castle's shadow casting ruins over my shoulder and the black-smocked girl approaching, her hands laden with grapes?

The answer is implicit. Spain, even for multitudes who were not poets, was the touchstone of which he was so manifestly capable. But what he left was very good indeed.

Share this with us—his fellow-veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade—who mourn the loss of a fallen comrade, and who today are under attack by the Subversive Activities Control Board for having dared to be anti-fascists before it was fashionable, and for remaining anti-fascist in these McCarran and McCarthy days:

Forgive me, I cannot love you properly from afar—no distant thing is ever truly loved—
but this, in the wrathful impotence of distance,
I promise: Madrid, if I ever forget you,
may my right hand lose its human cunning,
may my arms and legs wither in their sockets,
may my body be drained of its juices and my brain go soft and senseless as an imbecile's.
And if I die before I can return to you,
or you, in fullest freedom, are restored to us,
my sons will love you as their father did
 Madrid Madrid Madrid

of our time: the pure cause, the turning point, the springboard into the struggle that engulfs us now.

Rolfe was the poet of that struggle for human decency and love and human freedom; the poet and the soldier, too. For the two were inseparable.

as China's economy expands. Quotes from British and U.S. businessmen, shippers and labor leaders prove that the official U.S.-McCarthy policy of barring China trade has not worked: millions of dollars of "free world" trade and a certain amount of U.S. business was negotiated last year anyway, and many of the most influential concerns would like to grab its benefits if they could. Voices as far right as the chairman of the U.S. Council of the Intl. Chamber of Commerce and Alf Landon agree the U.S. has suffered more from the ban than China, ask a new policy since "the more trade has expanded in freedom from politics, the better it has served the political goal of peace" (Wall St. Journal). The pamphlet lists things China wants to buy (especially heavy production machinery—an industry hard-hit by the U.S. slump) and what it can pay with, e.g., scarce minerals like tungsten.

WASHINGTON: 70% FOR ARMS—MOSCOW: 18% FOR ARMS

Budgets compared: U.S. and U.S.S.R.

By Tabitha Petran

THE Administration is reported ready to ask Congress for a "supplemental appropriation" of about $5 billion for the military regardless of war in Indo-China. It is drawing up a further budget for war in the Far East, should the U.S. become involved.

This move to kick up U.S. defense spending comes little more than a month after the U.S.S.R. announced a 10% cut in defense spending in its 1954 budget. Yet an alleged "Soviet arms buildup" is one of the pretexts used in the current campaign.

Added to the $45 billion already budgeted, the additional $5 billion would bring U.S. military spending to $50 billion in fiscal 1955. At official exchange rates this is exactly double the 100.3 billion rubles ($25 billion) budgeted for defense in the U.S.S.R. The $50 billion would be 70% of the U.S. budget; the 100.3 billion rubles is 17.8% of the Soviet budget. (The percentages are not exactly comparable since many things included in the U.S.S.R. budget are financed outside the U.S. budget.)

THE 2 HOUSEKEEPERS: Comparison of the budgets suggests why the U.S. S.R.'s prestige is growing while that of the U.S. declines; Moscow's looks to the world like a peace budget; Washington's like a budget for war.

The Soviet budget, biggest in its history, provides for an expenditure of 562.7 billion rubles ($140.6 billion). Of this, one fourth (141.3 billion rubles) is allotted to education, health and social insurance—41 billion rubles ($10 billion) more than the appropriation for the military, and almost as much as the total Soviet budget in 1939. Adding the 73.2 billion which the Union Republics will spend in these categories, the total for education, health and social insurance comes to 214.5 billion rubles ($53.5 billion). This is more than twice the total Soviet military appropriation—and even more than the total U.S. military spending.

N. Y. Compass, Jan. 2, 1950
ONLY THE DELIVERY BOY HAS BEEN REPLACED
"I predict 1950 will be another year of prosperity."

In the U.S., combined federal, state, local budgets for education, health, social security, veterans benefits, etc. come to roughly $16 billion. This is about a third of the U.S. military budget and less than a third of the comparable Soviet appropriations.

EDUCATION GOALS: Soviet spending for education alone is roughly three times that of the U.S., and up 10% in the new budget. The goal now is universal, compulsory, ten-year schooling (as compared to 7 years previously) within the next few years. Compulsory ten-year schooling already prevails in Union Republic capitals and major industrial centers. The number of secondary-school graduates in 1954 will be roughly double 1953.

Some 9.5 billion rubles (over $2 billion) is allocated for Soviet science academies. Eric Ashby, pres. of Queens University, Belfast, writing of the high level of Soviet universities and scientific institutes ("Soviet Science Is a Challenge To Us," N. Y. Times Magazine, 4/18), says that on completion of the five-year university course the Soviet graduate "is up to the level of an American Ph. D."

NATIONAL ECONOMY: In 1954 the U.S.S.R. will spend 326.7 billion rubles ($81.7 billion) for developing the national economy. Of this, 216.3 billion is allocated from the budget and 110 billion from funds of industrial organizations. The budget allocation is more than double that for arms, is up 20% over 1953 and 57% over 1950.

In the U.S. the nearest comparable figure—gross private domestic investment—is running at an annual rate of $44.2 billion—down 21% from last year and 16% from 1950.

Soviet spending on development of heavy industry will exceed any previous year—90 billion rubles ($22.5 billion). But its percentage share of total capital investment—61.6—has dropped (from 68% in 1953) owing to the increased emphasis on development of agriculture and consumer-goods industry. Actually much of the capital investment in heavy industry is being made for the sake of agriculture.

BREAD & BUTTER: Capital investment in agriculture—21 billion rubles ($5.2 billion)—is 14.4% of total capital investment and almost 80% higher than in 1953. Some of the money saved by defense-spending cuts will go for soil reclamation and increasing grain crops. One of today's chief goals of Soviet agriculture is to put under the plow 32 million acres of virgin soil—more than Canada's total wheat area.

Capital investment in consumer-goods industry is set at 14 billion rubles ($3.5 billion)—almost double last year's, and 9.6% of total capital investment. Consumers will also benefit from price cuts announced last month which will add up to roughly 20 billion rubles ($5 billion) on an annual scale. Consumer prices today are 57.5% below 1947, 25%

below 1950. In the U.S., today's cost-of-living index is 20% above 1947.

ADDITION & SUBTRACTION: Soviet revenue provides one index to the country's economic advance. It will total 571.8 billion rubles ($142.9 billion) in 1954, three times that of 1940 and 149 billion more than last year. Taxes levied on the people will account for 45.7 billion rubles ($11 billion) or 8% of budget revenue, compared to 65 billion rubles (12%) in 1952. The bulk of the revenue (86.9%) comes from taxes on socialist enterprises. The drop in revenue resulting from the cuts in consumer-goods prices is more than made up by higher production and productivity, hence lower production costs of industry.

The Soviet budget surplus this year will amount to 9.2 billion rubles ($2.3 billion). 1953's 29.4 billion ruble surplus enabled credit investments in the national economy to be increased, Soviet currency strengthened.

The U.S. budget for fiscal 1954 is expected to show a $5 billion deficit. The deficit for fiscal 1955 is estimated at nearly $5 billion. If the military budget is increased, as expected, the government by fall will be paying out $10 to $12 billion more in cash than it draws out in taxes. Any ketchup in the arms budgets means yawning budget deficits and more debt.

BITTER FRUITS OF HYSTERIA

Scientists denounce ban on Oppenheimer call it a 'sure road to national suicide'

THE cold-war politics of the A- and H-bombs claimed another victim last week: Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, the man who headed the project which produced the A-bomb, was ruled a "security risk" and banned from any further official contact with the knowledge of super-destruction he helped devise.

It was ironic that his fall came during commemoration of the first anniversary of the deaths of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, earlier victims of A-bomb politics. How many more would succumb to A-bomb politics, none could guess; but Americans in general and U.S. scientists in particular last week were fearful of a continuing toll unless the politics were changed. The Fedn. of American Scientists saw the danger clearly; commenting on the 2-to-1 decision of the Atomic Energy Commission's Personnel Security Board, it said:

"We believe the majority findings unfair to Oppenheimer. But more than that, we believe them to illustrate the dangers and the bitter fruits of a security system which is now motivated more by the risks of politics than the risks of disclosure of information. . . . We urge strongly that the entire machinery of security must itself come under review. The American people are seeing samples of the mixing of politics and security in such highly-publicized proceedings as the Army-McCarthy hearings. It is to be hoped that these hearings will attract attention to the underlying problem—the exploitation of legitimate concern for national security for political ends. Security machinery has only one justification, to protect a small area of vital national information. It cannot efficiently do more; it cannot do more without sapping our national strength and eventually destroying our traditions and practices as a free people."

YES—AND NO: The panel which examined Oppenheimer was composed of Gordon Gray, former Secy. of the Army and now Univ. of N. Carolina president; Thomas Morgan, former head of the Sperry Corp.; and Ward V. Evans, chemistry professor at Loyola. They interrogated 40 witnesses, took 3,000 pages of testimony, examined another 3,000 pages of written material.

Gray and Morgan signed the tortured and self-contradictory majority opinion, which held that Oppenheimer is "loyal" and "discreet" but nevertheless a "security risk." They admitted they might have found an "alternative recommendation" if, under the Eisenhower security program, they had been allowed "to exercise mature practical judgment without the rigid circumspection of regulations and criteria established for us." To Sen. Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo.), a member of the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee, the majority decision was "nothing but doubletalk."

LACKED ENTHUSIASM: On the charge that Oppenheimer—with many others—had originally opposed a "crash" program to develop the H-bomb (he frankly stated his reasons had been both technical and moral), the majority found he "did not oppose the project in a positive or open manner, nor did he decline to co-operate" in it. But it also made this finding:

"However, enthusiastic support on his part would perhaps have encouraged other leading scientists to work on the program."

On this, Evans said in his dissent:

"He did not hinder the development of the H-bomb and there is absolutely nothing in the testimony to show that he did. . . . I personally think that our failure to clear Dr. Oppenheimer will be a black mark on the escutcheon of our country."

The majority found that had Oppenheimer "enthusiastically supported the thermonuclear program either before or after the determination of national policy, the H-bomb project would have been pursued with considerably more vigor." The Washington Post remarked:

"This is a truly shocking commentary. Does the board really mean that a man should be expected to anticipate a decision and temper his convictions to conform with what later may turn out to be a popular course? What is this but a formula for intellectual dishonesty? . . . The decision deals a devastating blow to free inquiry in government research. . . ."

"ROAD TO SUICIDE": The blow was already beginning to be felt. On June 6 the Atomic Scientists of Chicago reported that a dozen top scientists, none of them implicated in any charges, are resigning from Fort Monmouth's radar laboratories because of security charges against their colleagues. The ten officers of the Fedn. of American Scientists in an open letter to President Eisenhower warned:

"The purge of a loyal scientist for giving frank advice presents a grave peril to our nation. Such a policy, if continued, will eliminate the men of independent mind from our defense establishments. In this age . . . this is a sure road to national suicide."

At the end of the week it was ruled that Oppenheimer might file a brief appealing the decision with the AEC, but his lawyers would not be permitted to argue the case before it.

QUESTION FROM THE FLOOR: Meanwhile Britain's Labour MP Henry Hynd said he would formally ask in Commons on June 15 that Oppenheimer, whose "services as atomic scientist are not required by the U.S. government," be invited to Britain "to place his knowledge at the disposal of this country."

A letter-writer in the N. Y. Times had a practical question for the chairman of the AEC:

"Is Admiral Strauss going to make the next atomic bomb and not tell Oppenheimer how he did it?"

THE WORLD PEACE COUNCIL MEETS IN BERLIN

A Frenchman says: Fatalism is the danger--only peace can make history

An Extraordinary Session of the World Council of Peace (officially described in the U.S. as "red-dominated") was held last month in Berlin, keyed in large part to the implications of the U.S. H-bomb "tests" beginning last March in the Pacific. It was widely reported around the world, almost blacked out in the U.S. Among the participants were Jean-Paul Sartre (see excerpts below) who has lately been directing heavy fire at certain French Communists, and the famous Swiss theologian Dr. Karl Barth who recently charged E. Germany with attacks on the church.

The following (excerpted) speeches at the conference followed an account by Prof. Y. Hirano, member of Japan's Academy of Science, of the slow, tortured death of Japanese exposed to atomic radiation. Hirano described the vigorous action being taken by the most conservative groups in Japan to halt the "tests" which, in addition to the direct danger to life, threaten the food supply of the Japanese people who depend wholly on fish for proteins.

By Jean-Paul Sartre

Distinguished French writer

IT IS the atomic bomb that characterises what we call the cold war. . . . Only yesterday, you needed millions of men to kill millions of men; and to get the masses to accept death and to inflict it, the conflict had to reflect, if not their interests, at least their passions to a certain extent, and it had to avoid shocking their sense of justice. The entry of the masses into the national army obliged governments to distinguish between wars of aggression and defensive wars—wars of aggression being those waged by others, and defensive wars being those waged by ourselves.

Thus, even in the bourgeois democracies, at a time of national war, opinion exercises a control. But especially during the Second World War and after, in occupied Europe, in the Soviet Union, then in China and in Indo-China we have seen the appearance of popular armies which live among the people and not on the people, which take to the people, as the Chinese say, as a fish takes to water. In this instance, the people take over complete control of the war they are supporting, and immediately they win peace.

THE OPPONENTS: A people's war

JEAN-PAUL SARTRE
Conscience is the barrier

can only be a war of defense or of liberation; a people's army defends itself on its own soil, and it could not attack another nation nor cross its borders without losing its character. But . . . the people's army and the atomic bomb are the two opposed characteristics of our time. At a time when the participation of the whole people in war has been finally seen to be a factor making for peace, a terrible power enables the leaders of the West to make war without the people. . . . A handful of men, an instant of time, and an order given far away by a bureaucracy which is cut off from the nation, are all that is needed to blow up a capital. War becomes detached from mankind. It is no longer restrained by the masses who fought it and suffered in it.

The American people as a whole want peace. But the more they are persuaded that they are not needed to make war, the less influence they bring to bear on events. Because of fatalism which is inculcated into them, atomic war is getting out of control. . . . That is perhaps the greatest danger. . . .

"STOP WORLD TURNING": The atomic bomb is the only weapon suitable for oppressive minorities. Without it, their task would be impossible. Their task is the maintenance of abstract barriers between the nations and between people inside each country, and to govern against the necessities of history and political economy.

We have lost Indo-China because it was contrary to the necessity of history that a professional army, thousands of miles away from its bases, should defeat a people's army. There remains but one way out—the atomic bomb. The atomic bomb is a weapon against history . . . a permanent ultimatum. . . . In fact, it is blackmail on the destruction of the human race. They try to stop history as Joshua stopped the sun, by threatening to blow up the world. "We will drop the bomb if the French lose the war, and it is just too bad for man, we will drop them on Indo-Chinese, on the Chinese or Russians, it doesn't matter."

In order to stop the world turning round they are threatening to suppress History by liquidating those who make history. It is all they can do: wipe out man in case he changes. . . .

IT THREATENS ALL: Fortunately, the warmongers are defeated by their very power; the catastrophe which they are preparing for us is too complete; it threatens everyone of us, but they do not dare unleash it. Can one wipe out the whole of humanity because of the retreat of a regiment of Marines in Korea or the loss of Dienbienphu? The weapon is too horrible, it cannot be controlled, every day it deviates further from concrete reality; too sure of their power, those who have this weapon have forgotten even the most elementary diplomacy; they confine themselves to threats but do not turn their threats into action. But meanwhile, barriers are falling, more contacts are made, the peoples cease to put fear in the hearts of their neighbours, there is new unity in Europe and indeed in the world. . . .

Up till now, anger, blundering, wrong calculations, stood in collective history as unimportant accidents; at present, they can become formidable, the moods of a leader can become historical factors. History must remove the warhead from the atom bomb, or else the bomb will blow up the world. The peoples have a double task: they must unite against the bomb, instead of war impose peace, replace abstract opposition by definite alliance, win victories for peace, without ever giving the nuclear weapon the time or the pretext for being exploded. . . .

We must redouble our efforts; in the past history was often made by war, but today, since war would mean the end of the world, peace alone can make history.

A Russian says: Ban all weapons of mass destruction

By Nikolai Tikhonov

Soviet writer, Stalin Award winner

ATOMIC energy and radio-active materials open great and grandiose prospects for a life of peace. The use of this energy for the people's benefit transforms industry and agriculture, it digs canals, moves mountains, replaces all other fuels and gives inconceivable power to airplanes, ships and trains. Man's most extraordinary dreams are now becoming realizable. . . .

But we have met at this extraordinary Session of the World Council of Peace because we are worried by all that is happening in the world, and not to expatiate on the magnificent prospects that science in its omni-potence is opening up for peace and prosperity. . . . All those, in all countries, who read the sensational press articles on the details of the [March 1] explosion, clearly realized that if we do not put an end to such dangers to mankind, a hitherto unknown menace will hang over all peoples.

THE FIRST DAY: Dr. Ralph Lapp, head of the Marine Dept. of the American Institute for Research in Nuclear Physics, could say: As frightening as it may appear, we must be ready to lose from ten to fifteen million men on the first day of the "super blitzkrieg." Nonetheless, reasonable voices have been raised in the U.S. which do not support this pessimistic propaganda, announcing the inevitable death of millions of men in order to terrify all who are opposed to the policy of strength. Protesting voices have been the atomic and the hydrogen bombs.

NO QUAKING: President Eisenhower said to the General Assembly of UN in Dec., 1953, that two atomic giants were condemned to glower at each other across a world trembling with fear for an indefinite period of time.

That is an exaggeration. The world is not trembling with fear. . . . Mankind is confident in its strength and knows that it is stronger than atoms because it has every possibility of using atomic energy in any way it likes instead of collapsing in horror at atomic energy, in terror at its own discovery.

Does there exist a real possibility for the peaceful solution of the atomic question? We can confidently reply to them: Yes, such a possibility exists . . . the absolute prohibition of all weapons of mass destruction, and the establishment of strict international control over implementation of this ban.

We stand for an international control which would not only allow of the inspection of centres of production and stocks of bombs and raw materials declared by the governments; the international control body must also have the right to inspect centres of production and stocks which have not been declared by the governments if there is any reason to suspect that they exist.

THE BAN: Only a complete control of this kind, binding on all the parties to the agreement, can be effective. Only by control of this kind can we eliminate the mutual distrust which . . . creates the tension in the relations between states possessing atomic and hydrogen weapons.

A beginning can be made by an agreement not to use atomic and hydrogen weapons. What does this mean? It means that those states which can produce these weapons will give a solemn pledge not to use them in any circumstances. This agreement would precede the absolute and general prohibition of these weapons. . . . At the same time, resolute action must be taken to obtain a substantial reduction of all conventional arms and armed forces. This would allow of a considerable reduction of the expenditure imposed on the peoples of many states by the armaments race and the inordinate expansion of armies. . . .

NIKOLAI TIKHONOV
Change cannot be halted

The honor and conscience of the peoples can not allow the forces of science to be used for the destruction of mankind's present and future, instead of being placed at its service in peace. Atomic energy, that great discovery of the human genius, belongs to the whole world, and the whole world must benefit from it. By fighting for these noble aims, we shall make an extraordinary advance. We shall win prosperity for all peoples and an eternal friendship between them which will no longer be threatened by the black forces of war. And then, we shall be able to say in triumph: Peace has won!

Spellman sounds bugle in Paris for world 'crusade'

Following a "delirious harangue full of hate and violence" in Paris by New York's Cardinal Spellman May 20—a call to arms for a world crusade against "the communist menace"—the newspaper Liberation wrote: "One begins to understand why Foreign Minister Bidault 'is sabotaging all chances of negotiation at Geneva: God wills it!'"

Regretting that "no one is killed by ridicule any more in France, not even an American Cardinal," the paper commented:

"We know what the crusade that Cardinal Spellman so cheerfully preaches would mean for the countries which would be involved in it despite themselves: the massacre of hundreds of millions of human beings, the destruction of hundreds of thousands of homes; the decay of civilization.

"Spellman has castigated 'the Church of Silence.' But what then is his Church? The Church of Blood?"

heard on all sides demanding, at the earliest possible date, the absolute prohibition of weapons of mass extermination.

For nine years the Soviet Union has demanded the absolute prohibition of atomic, bacteriological and chemical weapons and all other weapons of mass destruction. She has demanded that atomic energy should be used peacefully and for the benefit of mankind. The Soviet Union made this demand at a time when she did not yet possess these weapons; she demanded it and she demands it now that she possesses both ment." Denial of second-class postal privileges would put most publications out of business because of the prohibitive cost of circulating them at first-class rates.

ANTI-DEGENERACY: The importance of the second-class privilege to periodicals of news and opinion was well recognized by this country's Founding Fathers; Mrs. St. George, as a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, should be familiar with the dictum of the House of Representatives shortly after George Washington's first inauguration:

"The circulation of political intelligence through these vehicles is justly reckoned among the surest means of preventing degeneracy of a free government. . . ."

In 1792 the postal rate for newspapers was one cent a copy, compared to six cents for a letter.

Mrs. St. George's bill is an echo of Sen. Joe McCarthy's who, on Aug. 22, 1953, demanded revocation of second-class privileges for both the Daily Worker and the conservative Washington Post, which persists in criticizing him. Her measure provides that a listing of any publication in the House Committee on Un-American Activities' "Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications," or in the Attorney General's list of "sub-

"He was watching the McCarthy hearings and getting a big kick out of it, and then he realized these are the men running the government. . . ."

versive" organizations, shall be "prima facie evidence" they violate the bill.

"LONG FIRST STEP": Mrs. St. George says her measure was drafted in cooperation with the Post Office, the State Dept. and the Justice Dept. She gives as her own opinion that such publications "should be excluded from the mails entirely, but objections have been raised against such a sharp departure from past policy. . . . My bill is a first step, a long first step, toward excluding this material from the mail."

Among sample publications cited by Mrs. St. George as targets of her measure were the California Eagle, oldest Negro publication in the U.S., the People's Voice of Helena, Mont., the Honolulu Record, Our World, a Negro picture-magazine of mass circulation, and the Lawyers Guild Review. Murray A. Gordon, an editor of the Review, announced last week that he will testify at the hearings and will attack the bill on three main grounds.

Citing existing laws barring material of a seditious character and any material which advocates treason, insurrection, forcible resistance to any U.S. law, or which would serve to undermine the morale of the armed forces, he argues that the present bill cannot be applied solely to these matters and therefore "must of necessity be understood as an abridgement of the freedom of the press to publish expression of a political or economic nature with which the Postmaster General disagrees."

DUE PROCESS QUESTION: In addition, he argues that the bill would violate the Due Process clause of the Constitution by failing to grant prior notice, hearing and an opportunity to defend against the charges before such injury as revocation of the postal privilege is inflicted. His third point is

Take action now!

A bill to bar progressive publications, books, printed matter and films from the mails by denying them traditional low-cost postal rates is now before the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. If you want to help block this new threat to freedom of the press, write letters to:

- Rep. Edward H. Rees, chairman of House Committee on Post Office.
- Rep. Katharine St. George, author of the bill and head of a subcommittee conducting hearings on it.
- Other members of the subcommittee (see story for names).
- Your own Congressman.
- Your local newspaper.

that the House Committee's "Guide" can be considered as no evidence of subversion; he cites the nature of his own publication as a scholarly journal concerned with discussing legal issues.

For a contrast to the St. George measure, the Post Office recently ruled that Rep. Sam Yorty (D-Calif.), first chairman of the California State Committee on Un-American Activities, now running for the U.S. Senate, is entitled to send electioneering printed matter to every voter in the state free under Congressional frank simply by addressing it to "Occupant" and giving a street number.

Kuomintang representatives in New York, and the three other Chinese dailies in the city, moved to put out of business the only remaining Chinese paper in the western hemisphere supporting the People's Republic of China.

Terror at the newsstands was followed by intimidating visits to advertisers and subscribers. Some were frightened off; others rallied to supplement their subscription money with contributions. The paper kept coming out. Recently when a fire (apparently without political origins) broke out in the loft above the paper's offices, water damage put the presses out of commission and fire fighters spilled the type racks. (Chinese papers are all hand-set, using thousands of characters.) The paper's staff painstakingly hand-lettered the day's news and the ads on mimeograph stencils and the paper hit the streets on schedule until the press room was restored.

THE LAW: After blackmail and vandalism failed, the law stepped in. In April, 1952, a grand jury indicted editor Eugene Moy and four others, the paper itself and two Hong Kong banks. Moy and the paper were charged with publishing ads placed by the banks to facilitate the sending of money to families in China.

The grand jury ruled that sending money to one's family—often the original reason for emigration—was a form of trading with the enemy, although the U.S. was not at war with China and China was not an enemy in the past war. The pretext seemed thin. The fact was that a newspaper which had survived vandalism and terror was now to be prosecuted to death.

THE ISSUE: There were indications that the paper's editorial policy would figure largely in the government's case, and that before the prosecutors finished it would be clear that freedom of the press was the issue.

In Federal Court at Foley Sq. last week Moy went on trial before Judge Sylvester J. Ryan. Moy's attorney Paul Ross waived a jury trial, moved to dismiss the case altogether. Judge Ryan took that motion under advisement. Meanwhile U.S. Atty. William Esbit, an ex-Army colonel, opened the government's case calling as first witness a Chinese who had read the Hong Kong bank ads and sent money to his family. Ross objected to the testimony on the ground that a newspaper cannot be held responsible for what some reader may do in response to an ad.

"WE'LL CONTINUE": Judge Ryan indicated he would seriously consider that objection. If he rules against the government on that point it would automatically throw out 45 of the 53 counts in the indictment, since these all relate to acts by readers and not by the paper.

Before the case came to trial Moy said: "We shall continue to publish the China Daily News and we shall fight against this unjustified prosecution until we are vindicated. In doing so we shall be defending the freedom of the press for all newspapers. We shall also continue to do all in our power to prevent a terrible war which is desired only by the China Lobby and its cohorts in the Kuomintang clique who, in order to retain their ill-gotten profits, would sacrifice millions of Americans."

Strike or no strike, TWU fights to halt bust-the-union drive

By Elmer Bendiner

THE ONLY THING they haven't told us yet is that if we strike they'll move the subways to Pennsylvania."

A subway conductor talked freely, but anonymously, of the issues in the transit fight, and of why the men are ready to strike against an anti-union administration — comparable with the toughest die-hards in private industry—of the city's transit system.

He said the men hadn't had a wage raise in four years and, no matter how they dressed up the over-all statistics, many were taking home $45 a week and trying to raise a family on it. An old-timer, he recalled the earlier victories of the union in whittling the week down from 84 to 40 hours and giving the men two days a week out of the subways.

THE "BEAKIES": The formula proposed by the Mayor's fact-finders, i.e. said, would "take away all the gains made by the union in 20 years." He said the union ought to negotiate with the Authority not on the basis of the fact-finders' get what "a g---d--- beakie gets." ($4,200-$4,900 a year.)

TOKEN TIME: The tokens meant additional work for the men and women in the change booths, involving an elaborate inventory at the day's end; yet the TA authorized no additional time. The union finally won an additional 15 minutes a day for the change booth personnel but, said the conductor, at the busy stations they put in more than half an hour on their own time.

Another issue that won't make headlines, but adds to the discontent underground, is the matter of no time off for deaths in the family. It rankled the conductor. He said: "Suppose your sister is married to a cop. And suppose your mother dies. The cop gets five days off to bury your mother while you got to work."

He went down the list of beefs and closed: "You want to know why the subway is like it is—because the man who runs it is a real authority—an authority on whiskey." (TA Chairman Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Casey is first vice president of

THE GRAVY BOWL OVERFLOWS

Democrat-GOP huddle places party hacks in court posts; deal on Surrogates is seen

EARLIER this year the GUARDIAN, in a six-part series on life in New York's bi-partisan "political sewer," told how the big-party machines, working together, staff our courts with loyal party hacks. Last week State Supreme Court Justice James B. M. McNally in an interview with the World-Telegram brought the sewer story up to date.

Justice McNally revealed that GOP county chairman Thomas J. Curran and Tammany chief Carmine DeSapio had presented candidates for court posts and the court had accepted them. Among them was William J. Sheldrick, Democratic leader of the 7th AD, named "chief confidential attendant" at $7,920 a year. Sheldrick, a former State Assemblyman, was once characterized by the Citizens Union as "distinctively inconspicuous."

THE $2 WINDOW: When Mayor Wagner was Borough President of Manhattan, Shel-drick was a "provisional" junior civil engineer. (The "provisional" exempted him from civil service requirements.) At the same time he worked as a par-mutual clerk at the Yonkers Raceway.

The court named two "confidential attendants" at $5,335 each. They are Helen M. Noonan, GOP leader of the 7th AD North, and boss Curran's secretary; and Henry Berlin, former vice chairman of the Tammany executive committee. James J. Fitzsimmons, GOP leader of the 15th AD, was raised from information clerk to confidential clerk, at $3,650 a year. The duties are vague and the hours flexible.

GRAVY & PLUMS: The World-

Telegram linked the court appointments to a far bigger deal: the nominations of two Surrogates in 1954. Surrogate courts are the political machines' gravy bowls. Each Surrogate yearly hands out several million dollars in appointments of guardians for infants or other "incompetents" who inherit large estates.

He sends attorneys on all-expense-paid junkets to take depositions from hard-to-reach witnesses and names others to investigate in adoption cases, where fees are fat. The Surrogate also names public administrators for estates left without a will, the richest plum crop of all.

A TWU DEMONSTRATION IN 1950

proposals, but on the union's program of collective bargaining rights; a 25c raise; improvements in working conditions, and vacation time which the union proposed last fall.

He said there were other long-standing grievances that never made the papers. The "beakies" are one. Transit Authority classification schedules call them "special inspectors," but in practice beakies operate as outright labor spies—the kind the Wagner Act outlawed in private industry. Their assignments call for anything from a routine snoop on the energy the workers are putting into the job to tailing union members around town.

The worst of it is, said the conductor, a motorman doesn't Melrose Distillers, Inc., subsidiary of Schenley.)

SURVIVAL AT STAKE: Bigger than all the beefs, more important even than the wage issue was the question of TWU's survival. Many rank-and-filers felt last week that if the union negotiated on the basis of the fact-finders' formula with its compromise on wages and its appointment of a labor czar, the union might not survive. Four years without a real contract gain would shatter morale, pave the way for raiders from other unions, leave it powerless to negotiate.

One course could hold the union together—a campaign for the original TWU demands:

Transit strike

25c-an-hour across-the-board raise; union recognition; a full-fledged contract; a working procedure to settle the beefs. For those objectives the men were ready to strike on June 14.

Last week that was still the official union deadline. But in the daily press the emphasis was on how to persuade the TA to accept the fact-finders' formula. The question was: Would the TWU leaders settle in the end for only that?

RANK & FILE: Pres. Michael Quill and the executive board originally accepted the formula; but on May 22 an expanded joint executive of shop stewards and rank-and-filers voted it down in a stormy session. For the first time in years the Quill administration is opposed by a powerful "Rank and File Committee." At the last elections it scored 7,000 votes to 9,000 for the Quill administration.

In leaflets circulated before the May 22 meeting it demanded rejection of the fact-finders' report, strike preparations in every borough, campaigns to enlist labor and the public. It urged wavering members to stay in TWU.

That sentiment swept the May 22 meeting and Quill later moved to suspend four union members in an attempt to crush what could be a "dangerous" effort to rally the membership around the union's official program.

WARNING POSTED: Meanwhile surface preparations for a strike went on throughout the city. The TA applied to Justice Alfred V. Norton in Brooklyn Supreme Court for an injunction against the scheduled strike, and TWU officers were ordered to "show cause" June 9 why they should not be restrained. On 2,000 bulletin boards throughout the transit system notices were tacked threatening dismissal for any worker who might "deliberately cause a delay of subways, elevated lines, trolleys or bus-

SPECIAL SESSION

Let the LIRR wait, says ALP: talk jobs first

LEGISLATORS were due back in Albany June 10 for a quickie special session, called by Gov. Dewey solely to straighten out the Long Island R.R. The legislators are restricted to the Governor's agenda.

Mayor Wagner wired Dewey demanding that Albany act this session to grant the city authority to boost taxes on big real estate. Dewey called his ideas "old, worn-out and discredited." (On its own the city could re-evaluate under-assessed big real estate.)

The American Labor Party last week asked Dewey to put first things first. Acting Exec. Secy. Morris Goldin wrote:

"With the mounting unemployment rolls creating an increasing sense of concern and fear among thousands of families in N.Y. State, we submit that emergency legislation to cushion the recession merits, at the very least, equal consideration with the Long Island R.R." Goldin said state unemployment was "conservatively estimated at more than 600,000" and asked that the agenda include greater jobless benefits, wider unemployment insurance coverage, repeal of the Hughes-Brees Law and a public works program. He blamed the city's new amusement tax on the state's refusal to give the city more power to tax big real estate.

Rose V. Russell, Teachers Union legislative representative, also seconded the motion on real estate taxes and asked state aid to pay teachers' raises.

Kwak hearing on deportation set for July 1

FOR Chungsoon and Choon Cha Kwak, Koreans whom the Justice Dept. seeks to deport to Syngman Rhee's S. Korea, two weeks remained before the next round of their legal battle against what would amount to a death sentence. The Kwaks, who served the U.S. in key positions during and for four years after World War II, now have no desire to remain here and ask only to be allowed to leave for a country of their choice. The Justice Dept., asserting that they would not be physically persecuted by Rhee whose outspoken foes they have been for two decades, had ordered them to report last April 7 at Ellis Island for deportation to S. Korea. Lawyers for the Kwaks had obtained a temporary order restraining the Dept. from proceeding with the deportation. Last week, July 1 was set as the date for Federal District Court hearings of the Dept.'s attempt to vacate the order.

This week (June 16, 8 p.m.) the Kwaks, both professional musicians, are to give a concert of Korean and Western classical music under auspices of the Provisional Committee to Defend the Kwaks at Manhattan Towers, 76th St. and Broadway, N.Y.C. The proceeds will go toward their fight to remain alive. (See ad on p. 10.)

EXQUISITE, SIMPLE, MODERN STAINLESS STEEL TABLEWARE

THE current vogue in tableware are the beautiful, simple-lined, modern Scandinavian designs. We agree these are the most attractive designs on the markets. Unfortunately, they are priced far beyond the average pocketbook, ranging from $6-$9 per place setting. However, we have found a set of stainless steel tableware to match the beauty and craftsmanship of the Scandinavian models. It is made in Japan with exquisite taste and sturdy construction. IT IS AS BEAUTIFUL AND WELL MADE AS THE SCANDINAVIAN MODELS. It is made of stainless steel, heavy weight, one-piece knives, beautifully contoured. And best of all, it is priced to fit most budgets.

24 pc. service for six includes a fork, knife, teaspoon, $12.95

the SPECTATOR

Charlie . . . how could you?

A CROCODILE on the N. Y. Times editorial staff shed half a column of tears last Saturday for Charlie Chaplin. In a tremulous piece headed "Little Man, Farewell," the writer wrung his hands over Chaplin's acceptance of the World Peace Council's award, wailing:

"He has allowed himself to be used by a sinister conspiracy of which the little man he so touchingly represented is the victim. . . . He shuffles off leftward toward Moscow, perhaps not calling himself a Communist or a fellow-traveler—but there he goes and the sag of his back, the flap of his coat-tails, the set of the derby over the ears and the sadly reminiscent twirling of his cane move us to tears."

Father Times is saddened. The boy he used to chortle over isn't cute any more. His voice has changed, his views are his own, his actions are independent. Father Times wistfully thumbs the early pages of the family album, lingering over the baby pictures: Charlie smiling as "The Tramp"; Charlie eating his shoe in "The Gold Rush." He sighs lovingly at Charlie in his schoolboy uniform in "Shoulder Arms," calling this "a contribution to American victory in the First World War."

At this point Father Times drops the album, unable to look at the pictures of the youth growing up: Charlie flexing his muscles in "The Dictator"; Charlie at "Verdoux" University; Charlie as a mature humanist in "Limelight."

IT IS PROFOUNDLY DISTURBING

to many comfortable creatures that Chaplin lives in a real, 3D world. They wish he would please melt into the "little man" and obligingly trudge off into the sunset with a shrug of the shoulders and a blissful smile, resigned to a mysterious, all-powerful fate. But no. He always behaves as if men can do something about their own future. In the thirties he was not merely anti-Hitler but maturely anti-fascist. During the war he spoke up for opening the second front. After the war he cabled Picasso to protest to the American Embassy in Paris against the threat to deport composer Hanns Eisler to the U.S. zone of Germany, denouncing this course as ". . . the prospect of being incarcerated in a concentration camp along with Nazis, as the Nazis themselves would have done."

And now, to top off his indiscretions, he accepts a peace prize. Pardon—wrong punctuation. "Peace" prize.

THERE ARE THREE areas in which celebrities get into trouble: art, politics and sex. The first two are alien territory to almost all movie stars. Chaplin, however, is a triple-threat man. The mounting violence against him recalls Isadora Duncan's career. What made her a virtual exile was not her barefoot dancing nor her startling love life, but the good words she spoke about the Soviet Union when 14 nations were trying to strangle the young country.

Last year, Contemporary Reader published a provocative evaluation by Abraham Polonsky of Chaplin and Hemingway, taking off from the latest work of each at that time—"Limelight" and "The Old Man and the Sea." Since then both men have borne out Polonsky's estimate of them. Chaplin reaffirms life and his love for people. Hemingway takes to the jungles of Africa and Franco Spain.

The future will show that Chaplin's peace award was an honor accorded by half a billion people. And when a nosy grandchild asks: "And what did Hemingway do in that period?" someone may play him the song, "Bananas and Gin," recorded to celebrate Hemingway's crackup and recovery, by singer Rosemary Clooney and her husband Jose (I Was A Dupe, Congressman) Ferrer.
