Albert Brisbane—American Pioneer of Socialism.

UR resent Socialist movement is not the first of its kind in America, although it is the first political movement. There was a strong Fourierist wave which swept America in the early forties of the last century.

This wave assumed considerable proportions. Over forty Fourier communities and "phalansteries" were founded in various sections of the country, one of them at Ceresco, now Ripon, Wisconsin.

And, by the way, this Wisconsin colony was the only one in the country which was a financial success and paid each member a sub-stantial dividend at the time of its dissolution.

The intellectual originator and spiritual light of that remarkable movement was Albert Brisbane, the centennial anniversary of whose birth will take place tomorrow (Sunday, the twenty-second of

Albert Brisbane may be called the only great Socialist this country has so far produced—in fact he ranks in many respects with men like Saint-Simon and Fourier. And I may say that he will be much better appreciated at his second centennial anniversary than he is

Albert Brisbane was peculiarly suited for his mission at that time. While he was of a wealthy family and possessed of an excellent education, and one of the greatest and best of American travelers,— education, and one of the greatest and best of American travelers,—he was a man without any personal ambitions of pretensions whatever.

Of course, Albert Brisbane was not a practical man and he had no talent for leading or organizing. However, the men who originate and propagate great ideas are rarely practical—the practical man usually comes afterward, makes use of these ideas and reaps their fruits. And as for actual leadership, a man who is thoroughly self-effacing lacks the natural qualities for leading masses.

Albert Brisbane can prothing but the ideal—the man as he ought Albert Brisbane saw nothing but the ideal—the man as he ought to be—and naturally was the victim of a great disappointment—a fate that befell also Saint-Simon, Fourier, Cabet, Owen and all the other great Socialist Utopians who worked in the past for the social redemption of civilized man.

Albert Brisbane, as I said before, was a disciple of Fourier, whom he met in France. He popularizeed Fourier's theories and was for Fourier in this country what Victor Considerant was in Europe.

In 1840 Brisbane published in Philadelphia a book on the "Social Destiny of Man," which is a popularization of Fourier's work on the same subject. And he also published a series of articles in Horace Greeley's Daily Tribune, in New York, running through an entire Brisbane paid for the space at advertising rates, but the articles gave Greeley the reputation of having propagated Socialism and Com-

That book and these articles may be said to have originated the Fourierist movement in America. The most notable result was the experiment at Brook Farm in which many great literary men of the day took an interest, particularly George Ripley, Charles A. Dana, Margaret Fuller, George William Curtis, Nathaniel Hawthorne, and to some extent Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Albert Brisbane saw this movement fail very rapidly. It disappeared after a few years. It was Utopian, premature and not based upon the economic development of the country.

In those days, when production by machinery was still in its infancy, and conditions were still very colonial and there was plenty of elbow room and chances for everybody, individualism naturally had to have full sway and had it. There was little room for Socialism then.

And therefore we must look upon Albert Brisbane rather in the light of a seer than of an achiever.

To the superficial observer the Fourierist movement disappeared in America without leaving any trace except in supplying Albert Bris-bane's brilliant son, Arthur, with Socialist ideas which he occasionally uses with great effect in some of his editorials. However, that view is not correct—because Albert Brisbane and Fourierism left their impress not correct—because Albert Brisbane and Fourierism left their impress upon the foremost American writers, poets and editors of the second half of the nineteenth century.

Yet when in 1876 Brisbane's sociological seriesappeared—the first volume of which was a reprint of the "Destiny of Man," and the second a translation of the theory of universal unity by Fourier—these pooks had only an historical interest. And it is characteristic of the man that they had been lying in stereotyped plates twenty-five years before he decided to give them to the world.

Albert Brisbane was an extremely religious character. Yet his religion had nothing in common with any of the existing theologies—in fact it was no theology at all, because it was based upon the scientific researches of the nineteenth century. And it is remarkable how he applied the results of these scientific researches to the Fourierist philosophy and to the history of the human race. In this way he developed a conception of history all his own, which does not differ materially from the Marxian conception, as the following montation will show: quotation will show:

"Socialism may be presented in different ways. It may be considered a social science, in its instinctive, intuitional form, or it may be considered as a manifestation of the aim and tendency of the age in historical evolution. It is, in its actual phase, a new system of in historical evolution. It is, political economy of Slavery, "If we call the Greek system the political economy of Slavery, we may call this modern system the political economy of Capital and Wages. Both, however, arrive at the same result, namely, the complete industrial subjection of the laboring classes. In antiquity the lash was the fierce incentive to labor; at present it is starvation, or the fear of it. The laborer today is forced to accept the paltry remuneration, while contains the laboring classes.

"Socialism' is a third and entirely new system of political economy. We may call it the Political Economy of Labor.

"Going back to the early history of humanity we find in Egypt and India the reign of conquests. In Egypt the son followed the profession of the father, and men were divided into castes according to a fundamental distinction in industrial pursuits. Later on, when the system was fully developed, it became in many respects a despotism;
the social line became so inflexible, finally, that hostility grew up the social line became so inflexible, finally, that hostility grew up between the superior and inferior castes.

"During the long Chaldeo-Assyrian reign, and down through the Greek and Roman civilizations, the institution of slavery prevailed. In the middle ages slavery was transformed into serfdom — a mitigated form of the personal ownership of man by man; and in our modern age serfdom has given place to the wages system. At one time man, the producer, was owned by his fellow-man—by what now constitutes the capitalist; today it is the instrum into of production, the mines, the manufactories, the railways, etc., which are owned by the eapitalist. The producer is set free, but his time and labor are owned by those who control the wealth of society. A vast system of usurpation and monopoly is carried on today by a small fraction of society owning the property of the nations. These men have in many instances done a great work. The gigantic parts of the million aire have led to vast achievements in the infastrial and scientific world; personal ambition and selfish motives have often been the legislation.

Kerr & Co., the Socialist book publishing house of Chicago, is about to publish one of the most remarkable books thus far issued in this country, the "History of the Great American Fortunes," writ-ten by Gustav Myers of New York. Although true in every detail, at established by the most careful and persistent reference to records, the applause for his democratic joke at things set forth in the book are staggering and almost unbelievable, if we may speak paradoxically. Some chapters have been running in the Socialist daily in New York City and have attracted wide at- and marmalades, was in all respects tention. The danger of starving is much more serious than the danger of drowning. On the water no man s too humble, too dilapidated but extraordinary means will be used to effect his rescue. How different

On the water each man is hi brother's keeper. On the land the brother can go to a famished death for all he cares, as a rule. About the only explanation of it is that rescue on water is more conspicuous and more heroic.

People are permitted to starve in the midst of abundance all over the land. On the water they are not allowed to ruthlessly drown in the midst of the means for rescue. Why

Typo Convention on Political Policy

St. Joseph, Mo., August 11, 1909. To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Gentlemen-Your committee on political policy desires to report as follows:

The recommendations made by President Lynch in his annual report meet with the hearty approval of this committee.

Following is a copy of the subject-matter which we approve.

Our Boston convention reaffirmed our demand for the enactment of laws, state and national, for the abolishment of injunctions in labor disputes, except where there is no other adequate remedy at law. The convention also reaffirmed the demand for the improvement and the enforcement of laws relating to child labor, compulsory education, the eight-hour day, prevailing rate of wages, contract labor in prisons, and the sanitary inspection of mines, tunnels, workshops and tenements. shops and tenements.

It was asserted that we should also demand the enactment of shops and tenements.

It was asserted that we should also demand the enactment of laws, state and national, providing for postal savings banks and postal express; ownership and operation by municipalities, the state or nation, of all public utilities; municipal ice plants; municipal abattoirs; ballot reform; direct legislation through the initiative and referendum; abolition of the electoral college and direct nomination and election of president, vice-president, United States senators, judges, and all elective officers.

There is no greater evil than that of child labor, especially in glass factories, woolen and cotton mills, etc. Fortunately, our trade is not cursed to any extent with child labor, as the evil is generally understood. It may be that here and there boys of immature age are employed in the composing rooms as errand boys, etc., but these instances are rare, and can be quickly corrected through proper local action. We should go on record in support of the general campaign against the exploitation of the child and the coining of the flesh and blood of women and children into profit for the corporations. This campaign is gaining new force with the passage of time, and it has associated with it earnest men and women, who will not submit to discouragement, and who will not cease their efforts until national and state laws are framed and passed by congress and the mational and state laws are framed and passed by congress and the state legislatures, which will effectively curb the greed and rapacity that finds their worst expression in the exploitation of the defense-less children of the country. In this great cause we should eagerly and cheerfully contribute of our energy, both moral and financial.

"It is of no practical importance to a man whether he be a Calvinist or an Atheist as regards immediate results; no spiritual boiler stands ready to blow his head or his legs off as the consequence of a theological mistake. On the contrary, men may be Platonists, Aristotelians or Christians; entertaining the most opposite philosophical opinions, and the practical results will be the same—no mortal danger breadth contrary to the mathematical requirements of nature's forces, and he pays the bitter penalty; for nature is an implacable mistress, entailing the direct consequences on man's practical ignorance."

Albert Brisbane died on April 28, 1890 in his eighty-first year. Personally he was a sweet Christ-like character with a marked artistic temperament.

He was called a "dreamer" of course. But it is always the men dreaming the beautiful dreams of the future, who carry the sluggish dreamless mass of humanity forward. And their dreams have often served as beacon lights in the dreary darkness of the present.

Less Than Seventy Shares Remain to Be Taken

Let us take a glance at what some other cities in this country have done in the way of providing the organized labor movement with homes of their own.

In New York City some years ago, about sixty trades union-socialists got together and founded the Workingmen's Educational Association. They rented and opened a club house. Amongst other things it was used to give amusements, criertainments, dances, lectures on Socialist Sunday school for children, etc., etc., etc., withis a comparative few years the meabscrhip Tuberculosis UBERCULOSIS is just one of the many penalties paid by mankind for submitting to economic injustice.

The death rate from tuberculosis will never be lowered until the workers receive adequate wages. That death rate will never be lowered until they possess once more their right to air and sunshine.

The death rate will never be materially lowered until the hours of labor are shortened, until men have leisure to live part of each day in the open air and enjoy *be blessings of recreation. The death rate from tuberculosis is perhaps the best known test

Where that rate is high, the social, sanitary and economic condi-tion of the people is low. Where that rate decreases, proof exists that the standard of life is improving. Men properly fed, living in the open air, possessed of peace of mind and the necessaries of life, rarely die of tuberculosis.

Against the bulwark of strong physique and wholesome living the germs of tuberculosis can make no headway. A strong man, breathing deeply, takes in far more germs than a weak man, but the strong man has a power of resistance against which the germs battle in vain.

A weak man deprived of air, and sunshine, eating poorly cooked and inadequate food, working long hours, sleeping in hot and stuffy rooms, is the helpless prey of this disease.

One-third of all who die between the ages of fifteen and thirtyfive die of tuberculosis.

This year not less than 150,000 people in the United States alone will die of this disease. The two greatest social crimes are tuberculosis and war. Each has cost the world billions of lives. Both are the result of ignorance, Both plagues will disappear from the earth when mankind is sufficiently educated to demand its rights .- Robert Hunter.

"It is easy to see in the exaltation of the Federal rudiciary a survival of the old mediaeval doctrine that the king can do no wrong. In fact much the same attitude of mind which made monarchy possible may be seen in this country in our attitude toward the Supreme Court. To destroy the popular belief in his superior wisdom and virtue was to destroy the basis of his authority. Hence all criticism of the king or his policy was regarded as an attack on

The Common Good

An "Americanted" Adaptation of Robert Blatchford's Fan "Merric England" (Continued from last week.)

As to the question of where we shall leave off, that is a foolish question, and only a fool would try to answer it. There is no such duestion, and only a lool would try to answer it. There is no such thing as finaliting. The world will go on after we are dead and forgotten. How do lakenow what our grandchildren will do? Should I not be a conceited ass to attempt to lay down laws for them? My only duty toward posterity, Mr. Smith, is to smooth the road for them as much as possible, and so give them a fairer chance than we have had to make the best of life.

had to make the best of life.

Socialism will come, of that I feel sure. And it will come by paths not seen by me, and will develop in ways which I do not dream of. My task is to help its arrival.

Still, I will offer you, in all modesty, a few ideas on the subject. I can at least point out to you some of the things that need to be done, and I may even suggest what seem to me reasonable ways of doing them.

doine, and I has doine them.

What are the things to be done? We want to find work for the unemployed. We want to get pensions for the aged. We want to abolish the poor law system. We want to get rid of the slums and build good houses for the workers. We want to abolish the sweater and shorten hours of labor and raise wages. We want to get rid of the stiffche nuisance, and the polletion of rivers; and we want to place the natural resources and all other instruments of production under the control of the state.

Before we can accomplish any of these reforms, we must have a public in favor of them, and a congress that will give effect to the popular demands. So that the first thing we need is education, and the second thing we need is a Socialist party.

I am well aware that you may have a Democratic legislature and not get Socialist measures passed. We see that every day. But if the Democratic legislature has a Socialistic public behind it there need be no fear of fallows.

Suppose, then, that we have a Socialistic public and legislature. What is to be done? It would be presumption for me to instruct such a legislature. I am only giving you, John Smith, my poor ideas.

Perhaps we should begin with the railways. Perhaps with the unemployed. Perhaps with the mines and trustified industries.

Suppose we begin with the industries. The industries must be made the property of the nation. Very well, what about compensa-

Personally I am against compensation, but I suppose it would have to be given, and my only hope is that it would be kept as low as possible. So with the mines and the railways. They could be bought, and the smaller the price the better.

Then as to the unemployed. They must be registered in their various trades and set to work.

I daresay, you may feel rather uneasy at these suggestions, and imagine that I am going to ruin the nation by saddling upon it the keep of a vast army of paupers.

But, my practical friend, the worst use you can put a man to to make a tramp out of him. All the tramps, bear in mind, and at the able-bodied paupers have to be fed and lodged now in some fashion.

And although they are badly fed, and treated worse than dogs, you must not suppose that they cost little. For you must know that it costs about eighteen cents to give a pauper six cents worth of food, and when you take into account the large numbers of policemen and other officials who are paid to watch and punish and attend to the tramps, it will be quite clear that a tramp is a more costly luxury than he appears to be.

For don't you see that all those hands which are now idle should be producing wealth, and when I remind you that the best authorities, agree that a four hours' day would enable the people to produce enough for all, you will see that our unemployed could very easily Understand, further, that these men would not be treated as pair-pers. They would be treated as honorable citizens, and after rent and other charges had been paid to the state they would receive all the produce of their labor.

Pensions would be granted to the aged poor, and all the work houses and poor wards would be abolished.

There would be no such thing as a pauper, or a man out of work, or a beggar or a tramp.

Then we should very probably establish a universal eight-hour day to begin with, and a plan for maintaining and feeding all children free at the public schools.

free at the public schools.

We should nationalize the railways, ships, canals, dockwards, mines and forests, and put all those industries under state control.

We might even have an agricultural secretary, who would be held responsible that the department under him produced bread and vegetables, meat and fruit for the millions of people, just as the postmaster general is now held responsible for the carriage and de-

So by degress we should get all the instruments of production so by degress we should get all the instruments of production into the hands of the people collectively, and so by degrees we should get our industry organized. These are my ideas: They are very crude, and of course very imperfect. But don't trouble on that score. When your public understands Socialism and desires to establish it there will be no difficulty about plans. Just get a number of your deverest organizers and administrators into committee and let them formulate a scheme. Depend upon it they will produce and let them formulate a scheme. Depend upon it, they will produce a much better scheme than mine, though I think even mine is better than none at all, and as I said before, I only offer it to give you an idea of the possibilities of the task before us.

The question of Socialism is the most important and imperative question of the age. It will divide, is now dividing, society into two camps. In which camp will you elect to stand? On the one side there are individualism and competition—leading to "great trade" and great miseries. On the other side is justice, without which can come no good, from which can come no evit. On the one hand, are ranged all the sages, all the saints, all the martyrs, all the so hood and ours womanhood of the world; on the other hand are the tyrant, the rollber, the manslayer, the libertine, the naurer, the slave-driver, the drunkard, and the sweater. Choose your party, then, my friend, and let us get to the fighting.

William Wolf A Pioneer of German Social-Democracy

It has often been asserted that Socialism would destroy all personality, and yet there is hardly a movement that has been richer in later on, attended a higher school, powerful personalities than the So-cialist, so that anyway it cannot be said that Socialism repels those who have an individuality of their own. Be that as it may. Unques-tionably one of the most interesting personalities in the German Social-Democratic movement was William Wolff, the centenary of whose birth has just been celebrated in the German movement, and whose writ-ings have been issued by the party in Berlin from the Buchhandlung Vorwaerts. Of Wiliam Wolff Engeis said, at his death in 1864, that was one of those sterling fellows who know how to appeal to the people, and always at the difficult moment was in the right—such a one as we do not often find—and Marx dedicated the first volume of "Capital" to the "friend whom I never can forget, the brave, true, and noble champion of the Prole-tariat." Lassalle's last speech in public was dedicated to the memory of the same man. Certainly there could hardly be a more striking testimony to the character of the the year 1846, and from that day he man than the testimony of three was one of the most courageous such men who differed so widely as and consistent champions of So-Marx and Engels did from Las

In its mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of workingmen in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It draps their wives from tion, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. We take only the case of the working woman and her so-called "remunerative" wage. We take the case of a mother who must support her children by her own unaided efforts. In a school district which is by no means the poor-est in Milwaukee, the school prin-cipal says that forty wage-working others last winter availed them selves of the penny lunches for their little ones.

Mr. Neacy does not approve of this thing. He believes that all these mothers are receiving remunerative wages.

According to statistics, the average wage of factory women in the United States is about five dollars a neek It must be remembered that women working in sweat-shops and at housework usually receive even smaller wages. T advanced some, comrades, but we must not let it stay there. Advancing some does not mean that it advanced enough. In fact it can never advance enough for what accomplishments we must bring forth. It means, do it now or never.

Why do the workers go out together and strike for industrial reasons? Why don't the workers vote together for political welfare? We can only say that they are not educated up to the voting standard or else they would vote unitedly.

It means that the fault lies where it should. With the workers and comrades who do not see to it that they get the wage slaves to studying and learning their conditions. It means that you comrades must work all the harder to get the workers in line with yourself.

Do you realize that when once all the workers have voted alike, that is, voted the Social-Democratic ticket there will be no need of any more strikes? It is the votes of those who are still being blindly led to the booths, that keeps up these so-called strikes.

You like to see this time coming quick I know, and we are glad to

Of course, the resolution was killed. The Republicans want to know anything about it, for fear they might "recognize Socislism"—and the Democrats followed suit.

In searching for data on the subject, so as to present the argument as fully as possible, Senator Gaylord found a susprising scarcity of material available on American conditions. He began to start impairies in every direction, however, and replies began to come in.

Meanwhile the Senator was invited to debate the subject of "Unemployment and Socialismas its Remedy" with John Basil Barnhill. Mr. Barnhill did not know much about unemployment, or Socialism, either, but the debate gave Comrade Gaylord occasion to probe deeper into the question.

Finding such a scarcity of information on the subject, and no Socialist book or pamphlet bearing directly upon it in detail, he decided to give the American comrades the infinediate use of what material he had already secured—meanwhile continuing his investigations.

The forty pages of this pamphlet are packed with informa-tion, gathered from state and national bureaus of labor, foreign reports, and such facts as could be secured from American labor organizations.

The pamphlet deals with Seasonal Unemployment, industrial Displacement, The Chronic Unemployeed, The Panic and The Industrial Reserve Army. The returns from Wisconsin are given with especial accuracy and completeness.

We have heard much of unemployment, and most of us know what it is to be "out of a job". But this little work sets forth the fact, and the Socialist argument based upon it, with startling clear-

BASE BALL NOTES.

Well, keep your eye on the Heralds from now on. Those boys are play-ing some ball thase days. Behling's Seventeenth warders are certainly up against some hard luck here of late. The boys have been playing good ball, but lost a number of games because luck was against them.

Deuter is slated to pitch for the Nations tomerrow, and his autics are worth the price alone.

The Twentieth warders will have to do some hustling tomorrow if they want to maintain first place.

Urbanck's Twenty-first warders are playing excellent ball of late, and they have a good chance to win the pennant if they continue to keep up this pace.

In the course of the decision the following on the subject of wages and other points at issue will be read with interest:

The wages paid workingmen is of vital importance to labor, to capital and to the commonwealth. This economic problem is here and must be met. It is a question that affects every man, woman and child in the community. Poor wages means poor living and discontent for the employe, poor service for the em-ployer, little cash for the merchant, low rents for the landlard. It means little money in circulation and a consequent depression in business generally, the effect ultimately reaching the utternost corners of the commonwealth. A reasonable o suggests that the men should wage means that the workman can gave as its opinion that it could not given a more convenient and live reasonably well and happy, he afford to pay more. In reply the can lay aside a modest saving and question arose whether the cutting thereby own his own home, educate out of the unnecessary tree passes, his children as an American citizen those not furnished actual emshould. It is not the intent of this decision to work a hardship on either employer or employe, but my aim is to arrive at a conclusion fair and just to both parties in partic-ular and the public in general.

Poor Pay in Wisconsin

Superintendent Shaw was asked (page of record 131) "How do you account for the fact that the average wage scale paid in the cities of Wisconsin is so much lower than in other states?" His answer was:

"I don't account for it except it is a condition in Wisconsin." That Mr. Shaw is right in stating that "it is a condition in Wiscon-in" is fully borne out by all the sidered.

Another factor which should enter into the wage question is the pay received by other crafts in La Crosse. According to the record (page 87) it appears that the street railway employes are not receiving in proportion to the labor and skill required, the wages received by other crafts.

The following is an abstract from the stimony in a case in the circuit court recently, where a north side grocer sued certain others for conspiracy:

And the protectors of our homes and nation in the garb of Uncle Sam's khaking may be seen any day entering and leaving these places or loitering upon the streets with well-known companions. And yet we believe that those who are engaged in the real labor of vice receive small compensation when compared with the others of the property and the protectors of the property and the protectors of the traffic.

Labor is coming to its own in this city. Last fall a great fight was made upon a unionman for a grity position, but he won out and it most transpires that of a loard of three he is the only one who is clear of an attempt to defrand a contractor and in which the city stands to lose several thousand dollars.

But the laboring man still has a hard time if he thinks. A painter did a job on one of the big downtown shops. The job speaks for itself in neatness and execution, but during the time he was working upon the job he happened to be a participant in a local debate, "Resolved that the Retail Grocer's Association is a detriment to the city," in which the affirmative side won. The small write-up given to each paper was not published, but the secretary of the R. G. A. was evidently made wise and soon the painter found his bill refused and that he would have to sue for it. Waiting the full statutory time, the case has been appealed.

There is no doubt but that the higher court will sustain the judgment and all costs will be added, but in the meantime it is used to harass the painter who dared to think. A laborer may be worthy of his wage, but that fact has little weight where graft has been denied the right to exist in silence.

iabolical "Justice!"

We find the following setting-Milwaukee "justice" in the Sen-forth of a disgraceful condition of tinel of last Wednesday:

Quick Justice in Neelen's Court

"How fist can the wheels of justice revolve without getting a hot box?

"On Saturday, the closing day of Homecoming week, the court machinery was oiled and tuned up, for a heavy grist awaited grinding. "At 9:10 o'clock smiling Judge Neelen had wedged himself into his chair; then three sharp thwacks of the bailiff's gavel had resounded through the court room and his stentorian 'Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye,' had awed the polyglot crowd into hushed expectancy. The wheels of justice had begun to turn

"The wheels of justice had turned out the grist. Chaff had been separated from wheat. The wheels turned faster and faster. From the portals of the 'bull pen' the stream of 'victims' flowed out and dribbled back again more rapidly.

"THIRTY MINUTES LATER THE THIRTY-SEVEN CASES HAD BEEN DISPOSED OF.

"And the wheels of justice were as cool as ever."

This is a "good" example of police court justice—the sort of thing is there a worse abomination, a that is disgracing civilization the country over. Each person under the law is entitled to his "day in court," but in police court this means less thom one minute if the judge is in a hurry. The civil case of thirty minutes. nor would
