ROSEMARY,

That's for Remembrance. A few Things that the Working Class Should Remember Always, Especially on Election Day.

DRACUT, MASS., March 29.—It is always best to convict a man out of his own mouth. The Volkscritter convicted itself; the Debitists convicted themselves, and the Populists, when they arrived at the cross-roads, carefully drove a stake "in their midst," and like the old-time criminal, are anchored there, a sight for gods and men.

We of the working class are told by those who are hired for the purpose, that we should be humble and respect our superiors. We are ignorant; they know all things. We should be submissive, because we are but birds of passage journeying through this land of sorrows to a land which flows with milk and honey. The milk is warranted proof, because the inspectors are on their job, and the honey is guaranteed the product of the bee. So we must lay up our treasures in heaven while we rush full bent for the next world as well as in this. Doesn't it? But our superiors, the captains of industry, as well as the captains of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, and the captains of the swell regiments that boldly march to the front during a strike, prove over and over again that decadent Greece, France when she was governed from the chambers of the chance favorites, England when plunged in the deepest excesses of the Restoration, were moral and mental giants compared with "good society" to-day.

The sap-headed clerk, about the time his upper lip commences to feather out, reads with palpitating heart and great longings of the doings of society gents as chronicled in the New York Journal. The maiden, whose Pa runs a small grocery and provision store, or else in a building bearing the imposing sign "Foreign and Domestic Ales, Wines and Liquors" dishes out an adulterated beer guiltless of the blood of any hop, yearns for the day when it will be written of her that she "led the cotillion at the first grand ball" of the Wine Tasters' Association. It is their idea of "society," the upper class, that is the subject of the Town Topics talked about in the pages of "The Complete Gentleman, or a Guide to the Art of Manners." The daily press that serves up this tommy-rot pictures the whole thing in vivid, glowing colors. The organ of capitalist society tells another story. We must believe what Town Topics says. It is the accredited sheet of the Astors, Goulds, et al., and from its sordid pages we glean a few items of interest.

We are told to vote for honesty, morality, intelligence. Let us see where they stand. We are told that the Socialists would "destroy the home." Let us also see what method is pursued by those who "conserve the home."

A word of explanation is necessary. The items which follow are not the delirium of some journalist, whose mental candle is puffing out, nor are they libels concocted by some vicious-minded idiot. They are only pleasant little things taken from three numbers of Town Topics. It is a notorious fact that if you wish your name published therein you must pay for it. If you wish to let the world know that you were drunk, that you were arrested for striking your grandmother with a baseball bat, that you have given full rein to all your bestiality, then you must pay advanced rates. Thus, while it will cost you fifty dollars to inform an anxious world that your new bath tub cost five hundred thousand dollars, it will cost you five hundred dollars to inform such as the item about young Pullman. Anything from plain every-day shop lifting—if done by a "kleptomaniac"—to incest and from slugging and drunkenness to manslaughter, will be published for a consideration, and will be a great accession to a person's fame. It may strike a decent man as funny that such things should be paid for, but when it is remembered that Town Topics is read by the "best people" on both sides of the Atlantic, then the riddle is solved.

The acknowledged advertisements are also interesting. You have ads. of wines, liquors, etc., and then on the next page you see the ad. of some sanitarium, or Keely Cure institution. One person says that all his efforts will come off if he takes some of the stuff. That is truly Roman, as it was the custom in the days when Rome's glory was declining for the Patriarch to pig at table, and then go out and vomit, and then return to pig some more. There are all kinds of methods described whereby softening of the brain may be acquired in the shortest possible time, then follow subscriptions for the same. That is broadness at least. Now come these items taken from Town Topics:

"The young woman who appeared at last week's costume ball arrayed as a hornet and I hear, regretting that she selected such a costume and startling attire, the dowagers, it seems, having taken a decided stand against her in the matter of further invitations."

"I wonder how many are aware of a little tragedy that has just been enacted on the Southside, wherein an engagement that was hailed as one of the happiest and best matches of the season now bids fair to result in a most unhappy marriage. The young man, it seems, has long been a suitor for the young woman's hand, but he had also been devoting himself to a woman of a wholly different type. Finally, the appearance of a rival for the hand of the former forced him to declare himself. Now, it seems, the young man continued attentions to the beautiful debutante have been discovered, and his fiancée is really heartbroken."

"The notorious Langtry woman, under- lored by the expose of the real character of her advertising orgy held at Sherry's sumptuous place last week, will hold a similar gathering of snobs and strumpets in Philadelphia. It is current talk in the Quaker City that the "madams" and leading bagnios there will attend the "tea" accompanied by their most popular Phrynes, and from their patronage alone England's poverty-stricken soldiers are assured many comforts. The other element that will help the weather-beaten actress to advertise herself and her pigsty play boasts the leadership of Mrs. Charles Wheeler, who, it will be remembered, married her charming daughter to a certain beggarly "Count" Pappenheim, who beat his wife, spent her money on his mistress and finally drove her to seek the protection of her American home."

"The dinner was a huge success and there was a plenty of good cheer, including several dozen of Ruinart, which loosened the tongues and gave full sway to an inexhaustible fund of personal experiences. The conversation turning to the noble art of self defense, one of the guests related such wonderful tales of boxing prowess that the host arose and challenged him to spar. A room was cleared and dinner coats and collars thrown aside. For the first two rounds odds were about even, but in the third the guest was so badly punished that the anxious audience interfered. The host was none the worse for wear, but deeply regretful that he should have so damaged the face of his guest and friend."

"That the smart set are heartily in favor of deposing Mrs. Astor as too old and weak, mentally and martially, to continue her long leadership of society, is evident from a significant circumstance that has escaped the notice of my contemporaries. No woman who consents to be named in New York Journal in the impossible hope of securing recognition in London for her divorced daughter can possibly remain a leader."

"Widespread is the comment on Mrs. John C. Eno's splurge of a reception at the Waldorf-Astoria last Saturday afternoon to introduce her second daughter. People say that Mr. and Mrs. Eno showed execrable taste in coming before the public so soon after Mr. Eno's long and enforced stay in Quebec."

"During the inquiry into the affairs of a certain bankrupt publisher the names of several persons of prominence in society have happily escaped conspicuously. The fellow published the lucubrations of several ambitious authors in smart life after the writers had promised to stand the expense of getting their manuscripts through pasted board backs. Leonidas Westervelt was ambitious enough to "put up" for a book, and Mrs. John A. di Zerega did some writing and translating for the bankrupt concern. Perhaps the publisher's best move was in connection with Mrs. John K. Van Rensselaer's "New Yorkers of the XIX Century."

"No little complaint, not to say indignation, it appears, has been occasioned by the conduct of some of the youths who are members of Mrs. W. W. Frazier's Saturday Evening Dancing Class for young women over fifteen and young men over sixteen. Scarcely a meeting of the class goes by without one or more of the young women being knocked down. Another feature of Mrs. Frazier's class that has come in for considerable criticism is the practice of smoking in the coat room, from which the youths appear on the dancing floor reeking with the sickening stench of cigarettes."

"Since the return from Europe of a Boston society leader, the talk has crept out afresh of her silly infatuation for a young and mediocre musician. Owing to some trouble, which did not reflect any too much credit upon the young man and his patroness, he gave up the music room which he had rented and took up his abode at her house, where he is now receiving his pupils. The other night, when the explosion of the bomb (a student's trick) occurred at a concert by the Symphony Orchestra, this much talked of and eccentric woman rushed frantically to the room where the young musician was engaged in some professional work, and in her excitement threw her arms about his neck with a vehemence which was as astounding as it was ludicrous."

"Some months ago, the husband tired of the pretty woman to whom he had been married six years. He consulted with an artist. The wife is beautiful and knows it. An artist asked her to pose for him. With her husband's consent she visited his studio often enough for the visits to take notice of it. One day the husband, with a friend, entered the studio unexpectedly and found a canvas whereon breathed the voluptuous beauty of his wife. Now, the husband will sue for divorce, naming the artist as the lover, and the picture will be the important item in the evidence."

"If one cares to dine amid real bohemians nowadays one need not go to the ill-smelling table d'hotes in Eastside cellars and Westside "back parlors." Even Maxim's, where the Girl came from, could not show a more remarkable social posse cafe than Sherry's palm garden disclosed last Sunday night. I saw with great surprise that one of the youngest and prettiest girls present was decidedly intoxicated, and her condition might serve to explain the endearments in which she and her escort openly indulged."

"The domestic affairs of a certain well known millionaire of the city are not the happiest. He and his elder son got along well enough, but the younger son has broken away from the pater and is living with his uncle. The married daughter inclines, like her younger brother, to lean toward her uncle rather than toward her father. There is a romance behind all this that would make a capital theme for a novel. And in the background there stands a threatening shadow, the tiny figure of a notorious burlesque actress."

"There comes to me from Trenton, N. J., a story of the misdoings of a lovely young matron of a family the most prominent socially in the place. With a rich and adoring husband and one handsome little son to make life happy for her, she has, it seems, wilfully wandered into what she would probably term a romantic attachment for her husband's private secretary, who almost lives at her house, and whose mad infatuation for the wife of his benefactor is perfectly apparent to everyone but the benefactor himself. Exposure in this case would mean much for the pretty matron would, I am sure, find love in a cottage totally inadequate to satisfy her penchant for the fleshpots."

"Much speculation is rife as to what vagaries Cupid will indulge in when the Van Rensselaers head the May for the West Indies, taking along as guests Miss Josephine Drexel, Mr. Clarence Lewis, Mr. Lawrence Paul and Mr. Charles Birk. To return without the record of another engagement to its credit would dim the lustre of the yacht's reputation."

"Apropos of the sensational incident at the recent Philadelphia Assembly to which I referred last week, I am informed by friends of Mr. Clarence Lewis that he has too much respect for himself either to get drunk at an Assembly or to enter into a fight there."

"Detroit lately found herself directly in the path of a reform cyclone, and as a result, several well known reputations were slightly bruised. A naughty dance or two was unearthed, and the participants are now trying to hide their diminished heads. But the keeper of a notorious resort claims that several prominent Detroiters visited her establishment and demolished bric-a-brac and statuary in large quantities, while all the remedy she could get by applying to the Courts came in the shape of a warrant for her arrest."

"What is this I hear about Miss Gammell and her devoted cavalier, a young married man who dwells on Commonwealth avenue. He certainly is openly devoted to the heiress, and his wooing is making quite a little commotion in the gay set in which they both move. His friends say his present suit is prompted by a regard for his health, as he is in danger of catching a permanent chill unless he gets away occasionally from the home atmosphere."

"Mrs. Borax Smith, the would-be social queen of Chicago, has another surprise to the people of that city this week. Mrs. Smith decided to inaugurate the 'salon' feature in the Occident. She confided her plan to a friend by telephone, but the friend failed to catch the drift of the message. Mrs. Smith's French accent not being her strongest point, the recipient of the message rushed to her neighbors with the information that Mrs. Smith was going to open a saloon. Mrs. Smith's regard for liquid refreshment lent color to the story, and soon the social world of Oakland was discussing the matter. Of course, the truth was finally made clear and apologies were in order, but Mrs. Borax says that the next time she wishes to speak French she will write it."

"Having graduated for the second time from the White Plains Sanitarium, young George Pullman proceeded to exhibit the benefits derived. Calling at the Parker House to see his devoted friend, Miss Zella Nicolaus, he met an alluringly formed creature. It was apparently a case of love at first sight, and the register of another Broadway hotel was speedily graced with the entry, "George M. Pullman and wife," written in the best style of Chicago penmanship, while into a $4 a day room entered the ravishingly shaped hour and her susceptible husband. Room rent was by far the smallest item on the bill rendered for the four days that the blissful pair remained, since the sum total, I am told, ran close to $300. On the fourth day, during a period of temporary sanity, Mr. Pullman became impressed by a remark dropped by a friend as to the dangers of future complications arising from what is technically known as one's "common-law wife," and almost directly, in some inexplicably timely manner, he received a telegram calling him in hot haste to Chicago, whither he may or may not have gone."

"During Mr. Pullman's sojourn at the hotel in reference he chanced to meet in the cafe a fellow Chicagoan in the person of Mr. Whitney Farlin, that rapid youth who has been endeavoring for a year or so past to beat the time record in spending a million dollars. Young Farlin drank with young Pullman, and young Pullman drank with young Farlin. Mr. Farlin regarded his companion as entitled to the palm, and no sooner had Mr. Pullman disappeared than he called in riotous tones for the proprietor, asserting, with virtuous indignation, that he would not stop another day in a hotel that harbored such an insufferable drunkard as the other man from Chicago."

"Memphis tongues have been busy since the engagement was announced of Miss Katherine Kearney Speed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John K. Speed, to Mr. Henry Murphy, of Evansville, Ind. Miss Speed is a willowy, graceful brunette, with snapping dark eyes and a manner that seems to have fascinated the men quite as much as it has repelled the gentler sex. At a reception given a few weeks ago by Col. and Mrs. H. M. Neely, Miss Katherine elected to pour a glass of champagne down Mr. Leon Hunt's throat, a performance, which, naturally, created no little consternation among the Neely guests."

"I cannot but express sympathy for a woman, once well known in Chicago society. Twenty years ago she was one of Chicago's most beautiful, as well as wealthiest young women. The man she married was reputed to be the swiftest young fellow in Chicago. The two were apparently happy; for all the young man had needed was a plenty of money. But this new life of ease began to tell on him a year after their marriage, and symptoms of insanity were discovered after a long illness from typhoid fever. One of Chicago's suburbs is famous for retreats of a certain kind, and the wife took her husband there for medical advice, sending the two children away to school. Now he has returned and is with his wife at her old home, but I hear that the associations with neighbors and friends do not help his condition in any way, and that his wife is preparing to again exile herself in the same little town."

"It is a fact that Detroit society contains a number of kleptomaniacs. Some of them are so well known that, notwithstanding their social and financial prominence, they are constantly under surveillance. It has come to be the custom in at least one well established store when a valuable piece of lace or lingerie is missed, and no one has been seen in the store, the bill is promptly sent to her husband, and he poor fellow, invariably pays the blackmail."

Could more evidence be asked? Here we have a record of almost every crime on the calendar. By their own confession they are mostly candidates either for a prison, a diphomania's home, or else an insane asylum. This same sheet that dwells lovingly over this record of crime would stop writing an article on the latest bit of prostitution long enough to shriek at the Socialist, "You want to break up the home!" Bishops Potter or Corrigan who serve heavenly viands to society have theories on the degradation of the masses, and will trot them out when it is asserted and proved that no man are good enough to have control of the lives and fortunes of other men, and that irresponsible power and limitless wealth will express themselves in debauchery. This is not an exceptional list. It is a dull number of Town Topics that does not have a few dozen interesting and instructive bits on the soundness and sweetness of our uncrowned aristocracy. There is scarcely a woman who has not been heralded as a trollop or a drunkard, and very few men who have not figured in some unsavory episode, or who are not thieves and sots. They admit it and glory in it. Therefore you should vote for them lest you overturn society. Protect the home and family. Take as your motto "The American flag," and as your candidates Dewey and Wheeler. Town Topics does so, and it must be all right.

MARTIN LUTHER FLANNAGAN.

"Prosperity" in Holyoke.

HOLYOKE, MASS., March 25—Three new calendar machines were put into the new People paper mill two weeks ago, and twelve girls were discharged, with more to follow.

In Whitling's coal yard a machine coal elevator and distributor was completed lately, and the many coal shovellers are now sunning themselves in McKinley prosperity.

Many mills are partly idle waiting for the new machinery.

Kicked like a foot ball from "silver" prosperity to "gold" prosperity, backward and forward, the workers of Massachusetts are learning fast that no vicarious prosperity will do them; that the only prosperity worth having is the prosperity that comes direct to the workers; and that such prosperity is out of all question so long as the capitalist class stands between the workers and the sun of prosperity. The teachings of the Socialist Labor Party are being brought home to the working class by object lessons, that, though painful, are mighty instructive.

The Vote in Seattle.

SEATTLE, WASH., March 22.—The municipal campaign is over and the returns show that the S. L. P. vote is nearly three times the vote of 1898. Its poll averaged 213 per cent. This, considering the vast number of proletarians disfranchised by the law requiring a year's residence, is a good showing. Our propaganda being directed strictly along class struggle lines has the effect of convincing hundreds who cannot register that conviction at the ballot box.

The campaign between the Rep-dems and the Dem-reps was fought out on the great moral (?) issue: "Shall the saloons run the churches or the churches run the saloons?" Capitalism furnished another contradiction. The unwashed crime was represented by the Republican and the respectable criminals by the Democratic party. The Republican wing went out to the great joy of the solid business men, faro bank dealers, prostitutes of both sexes and other "pillars of society." Had the Democrats won there would have been just as much exultation by other people of the same class.

The collection of pure and simpers, office holders, taxpaying reform "Socialists," together with expelled members of the S. L. P., known to readers of sacred history as the Sawist party of Patagonia, and Timbuctoo, and lately of Indianapolis, ran a ticket and did their worst to burlesque Socialism. They were on the point of dropping out of sight, after scabbing in their platform on the S. L. P. demand for $3 a day, being unable to find a purchaser for one well equipped dumping ground, when a local politician, who had united the pops, non-pops and Dems into "one grand party of reform," was kicked out of the combination, and hell-bent on revenge, grabbed the S. D. P., announced himself a Socialist over night, flung the banner of the garbage box to the breeze, and—went down with it. They only polled ninety-six votes. Six semper fakiribus.

The poor and simple labor leaders bunched the wily politician with a promise to deliver votes which they only succeeded in parading the night before election. There is soreness in fakir and fakire circles, while the wicked S. L. P. buzz keeps a crashing away merrily.

THE DAILY PEOPLE FESTIVAL.

A Magnificent Demonstration and Practical Move That Assures the Paper, and Its Success.

Last Sunday was gala day for the Socialist Movement in this city and country. THE DAILY PEOPLE Festival, arranged by Section New York, S. L. P., jointly with the "Daily People Conference" and S. T. & L. A., filled the Grand Central place. Agitationally, financially and convulsively the Festival was an unrivaled success. Without question, over $1,000 were cleared, despite the heavy expenses incurred to make the occasion at all points worthy of its purpose.

Over the stage a broad streamer extended from one end to the other bearing the salutation, "All Hail, The Daily People!" a greeting that was heartily responded to by the mammoth assemblage of comrades, friends and sympathizers, not a few of whom were visitors from outlying states, New Jersey, Connecticut, and even more distant Rhode Island being represented.

The Concert.

Promptly at 3.30, William F. Hoffman, the talented Director of the Danrosch Symphony Orchestra, swung his baton, and the concert started, lasting till nearly six o'clock, the well-selected pieces of music being rendered with beautiful execution, and receiving well merited applause. The choice musical bars, from the sweetest tones to the severest and most stirring, formed a fit cradle song for the Socialist daily that in three months will start its own concert, pleading the cause of human justice, death-dealing to the oppressors of the race.

After a recess of half an hour, the audience was set roaring by the comely bar performance of the "Original Rice Brothers," whereupon Harry Carless delivered an address, in the course of which he read congratulatory telegrams that had come in from the S. L. P. organizations in Cleveland, O., and Baltimore, Md. He then introduced Daniel DeLeon.

The Significance of the Daily People.

Comrade DeLeon spoke on the significance of THE DAILY PEOPLE; on the significance of the bare thought to give birth to it; on the still greater significance of the evidence, to be gathered from the large audience before him, of the people's determination to carry the pregnant thought into execution; finally on the significance of the persistent, though blundering, efforts on the part of the "Organized Crime" of the city to bar the way to the paper's appearance. Every single daily in this city, of whatever language, he said, was a journalistic affair incidentally only; the starting point was some private source of income—in some cases mining stock, in other cases railroad or other stock, and in one case Labor Fakirism—which had to be safeguarded. The only interests, left now without journalistic spokesmanship and safeguard, were the most important of all, the true interests of the wage-earning class, and thereby of the Revolutionary Movement that is to redeem the race, consequently to hurt its many-colored oppressors into the bottomless pit of perdition. The crying need of the hour was an English Socialist daily. Led by the Socialist Labor Party, the Socialist sentiment of the country was about to bring forth that word, and no power could prevent it. Lead, on the contrary, by Tammany Hall, the reactionary-criminal, all the obscene forces of present society, who know what a DAILY PEOPLE means, were struggling with might and main to thwart the undertaking by flank moves. But all in vain. The S. L. P. was not to be outflanked. Whoever wanted a fight with it must be ready for a frontal attack; no side or flank schemes would stand. On next July 1 the gauge of battle would be hurled at the foe all along the line. The event would mark the opening of a new, a glorious era: "All Hail THE DAILY PEOPLE!"

The Ball and Other Features.

At the close of the address, there followed a spectacular show of sliding pictures, with reference to the Movement. One of these pictures, the Party's well known emblem throughout the land, the ARM and HAMMER, received an ovation that told volumes. The seats in the body of the hall were then rapidly removed, and the ball commenced.

But the entertainment was not limited to the ball room. In the side halls, the fair arranged by the Ladies' Auxiliary, proved highly attractive and profitable. The four stalls, stocked with a large variety of beautiful, ornamental and useful articles, two fortune wheels, a candy and flower stand, were surrounded by a surging mass. Nor should three other features of the side hall be overlooked.

One was a desk at which a clever penman, Comrade Berger, sold "Daily People Souvenirs." These souvenirs consisted of a 5 by 4 pasteboard, on one side of which was a reduced photographic picture of the upper front page of THE PEOPLE of last March 18, the center being left a white square on which the names of the purchasers were written, or rather engrossed in the artistic handwriting of the Comrade. Needless to say he was kept busy all the time.

Another feature of the side hall was the exhibition of pictures by the members of the Lithographers' Local Alliance. The exhibition earned the admiration of a continuous procession. Not a few of the pictures were sold for the benefit of THE DAILY PEOPLE.

Third, not least, to judge from the big crowds that it attracted, was the "Kangaroo." In a partitioned off corner in the rear of the side hall, there was placed against the wall, a four-foot large Kangaroo standing on his hind legs in the act of leaping. It was made of brown canton flannel and stuffed with sawdust, and it held a copy of the Volkscritter by its forepaws; later in the evening a beer glass was flily placed on the head. Against the wall, back of the effigy, was a canvas bearing the inscription:

THE KANGAROO,
BORN AT 184 WILLIAM STREET, JULY 10, 1899.

Three Shots for 5 Cents. Hit Him!!

This feature proved most attractive and lucrative. The comrades in charge were kept busy making change, and their boys were kept agitating, sweeping away the sawdust that was knocked out of the thing, and returning the balls. Everybody took a shot, and the thing looked very much battered,—very much like the original article. It will be shipped to Providence, R. I., where it is to be used at The Daily People bazaar arranged there for the 20th inst.

The exhilarating sport of "knocking the stuffings out of the Kangaroo," reminding the comrades of the way they have knocked the stuffings out of the original, seemed to have no end; presently in all parts of the hall was heard the following rollicking song, written by one of them:

Past, Present, Future.
(To the tune of "O Hemlock Tree, O Hemlock Tree.")

O Kangaroo, O Kangaroo,
What sad experience you've gone through,
You tried to grab the S. L. P.,
The S. L. P. grabbed you, and she,
O Kangaroo, O Kangaroo,
She did not do a thing to you.

O Kangaroo, O Kangaroo,
More sadness is in store for you,
You sought refuge with "our Gene,"
Results will be as shall be seen,
O Kangaroo, O Kangaroo,
Beware what will become of you?

O Kangaroo, O Kangaroo,
How strange are your gyrations,
From S. L. P. to S. D. F.,
From there to Bryan, don't you see?
O Kangaroo, O Kangaroo,
Such are your complications.

O Kangaroo, O Kangaroo,
Your company is rotten,
From Labor's Cause you slunk away,
Too cowardly to face the fray,
O Kangaroo, O Kangaroo,
Your grave will be forgotten.

It was late in the morning before the last couples had left. On the lips and in the hearts of all there was the glad exclamation,

"ALL HAIL THE DAILY PEOPLE!"

THE MACHINISTS' STRIKE.

The machinists in Chicago, Ill., and Cleveland, O., are on strike "for the nine-hour day," and weird, wild and woolly tales are told in New York city of a similar move in this city on April 1.

Again must the Socialist Labor Party and the Socialist Trade & Labor Alliance brand this strike scheme as a swindle among the workmen, and prove it, too.

It will be within the recollection of some of the older of THE PEOPLE readers that, in December, '97, the A. F. of L. Convention decided that on May 1, '98 "the machinists of America would go on strike for the eight-hour day." All the fake labor sheets in the country took up the cry "On for the eight-hour day." The Journal of the International Association of Machinists spilled ink by the painful on the subject. The broken down ministers of the Stuart Reid type went up and down the country howling "Organize! Organize! Organize! for the eight-hour day!!!"

In March and April, '98, the S. T. & L. A. machinists took a hand in the game and said: "When May 1 '98 comes along, there will be no strike; this move is a move to raise dues for ignorant, corrupt and stupid labor fakirs; believing, as these fakirs do, in an aristocracy of labor, the machinists can predict with such accuracy the outcome of the fakirs' moves?" The answer is simple. It is because we know that to have a successful strike to-day, the whole shop must be organized from sub-cellar to attic—vice-hand, floor-hand, tool-maker, monkey-wrench, all-round man, and the man behind the broom,—all must be welded into one fighting Union, otherwise the Union is but a rope of sand. The empty-headed Jay, Warner, is lying when he talks of 10,000 machinists organized in New York; they have but little more in all the United States.

The Cleveland and Chicago strikes are also in the nature of bluffs of just what character will be seen in a pamphlet got up by the International Iron and Metal Workers' Union, S. T. & L. A., that will be published in THE PEOPLE, probably in next week's issue.

The I. M. W. U. of the S. T. & L. A. is organizing the iron and metal workers on correct lines. It now has two organizers in the field, and they are dealing hard blows to the fakirs. They are telling the story that the time was when the machinists could be deceived by promises of national strikes, that that time is passed, that nothing but class-conscious action of the whole of the workers in the craft, backed up by their political power, can avail to smite the machinist lords.

SOCIALIST VOTE IN THE UNITED STATES.

Table with 2 columns: Year and Socialist Vote. Includes data for 1888, 1890, 1892, 1894, 1896, 1898, and 1899.

Hope overmore, and believe, O man, for e'en as thy thought is. So are the things that thou seest, e'en as thy hope and belief.

Cowardly art thou and timid? They rise to provoke thee against them. Hast thou courage? enough, see them exulting to yield.

—CLOUGH.

VOLUME X, NO. 1.

With this number THE PEOPLE starts upon the tenth year of its life, a life brimful of activity, and fruitful of results, the excellence of which may be approximately gauged by the frenzied shrieks of rage that go up against it from the combined throats of the corrupt-reactionary elements, the knell of whose doom the whizz of its sword has sounded.

And this is but natural.

THE PEOPLE is neither a product of money, nor the creation of any one man. It is the product of the collective effort of a stalwart band in the country—last election 85,231 strong—, who opened the veins of their best powers, noblest thoughts and soundest knowledge upon the Altar of the Wage Slave's redemption.

Similar efforts have gone before it, in generations and ages gone by, aiming at no less humane a goal. None of these, however, could crystallize into the powerfully effective weapon that THE PEOPLE did. They were premature endeavors; unsustained aspirations, that evaporated into sighs of impotence. What was DESIRABLE was out of sight ahead of what was POSSIBLE. Not so now. The material capabilities of the race have now moved forward; placing what is POSSIBLE abreast of what is DESIRABLE. In our generation, for the first time in the history of the race, KNOWLEDGE and FEELING support each other. Now, as never before, the promptings of the heart can be sanctioned by the judgment of the mind, and the two, combined, be welded into a potent movement destined, certain to remove from the race the all-around disgracing existence of slavery. Such a movement THE PEOPLE, wielded by the joint efforts of the elite of the land, gathering ever larger hosts, has carved into shape. Small wonder, then, that against THE PEOPLE are focused to-day all the arrows forged in Social Crime of high and low degree; small wonder also at the jubilant frame of mind of the stalwart band, that holds and wields it with ever more unerring accuracy, with ever increasing force, and with ever greater relentlessness.

Next year, when the weekly PEOPLE shall celebrate its next birthday, it shall have been surpassed by a child of its own loins, THE DAILY PEOPLE, not yet born, but about to be given birth to.

The future belongs to the moral-brave. Upon the Party's banners victory is perched and it carries its sword, THE PEOPLE, wreathed in laurels.

TWEEDISM OVER AGAIN.

"They are coming our way!" They are coming, not singly, but in battalions; not from the lower, but from the upper ranks, too; and not in individual, either, but in representative capacity of whole old party-social detachments—Republicans and Democrats, Standard Oil Monopolists and Bankers;—they are coming in a lump!

Time was when the very mention of "collective ownership" "municipal ownership" and the like, not to say anything of such revolutionary words as "the people's inheritance," was decried in chorus by Republican and Democratic party organizations, and was frowned upon with gunpowder-smelling frowns by the capitalists themselves. "Socialism!" they would yell, and grabbing for their moneybags, prepare to defend them against the raw-boned intruder. That period is passed, at least it seems so; and now, to all appearance at least, the whole country is homogeneously waltzing toward Socialism.—At least that is the conclusion, which, if not we, some others might draw from the set speeches delivered on Saturday the 24th of last month, by "aw-uppers" in the ranks of Capitalism, political as well as economic, on the occasion of the breaking of ground for the rapid-transit tunnel, which, after fifty years is to be (or shall we say, "is said will be") the property of the city.

Mayor AUGUSTUS VAN WYCK, a bright particular star in Tammany, closed his speech with these words:

The people of Greater New York are to be congratulated that, with all her former heavy expenditures, and, at times, somewhat reckless issuance of bonds, she is now, for the first time, able to undertake such an expensive enterprise, which will furnish the first real test of the experiment of municipal ownership of public utilities on such a scale as will be decisive of that principle.

Following him came the Republican Mr. ORR of the Standard Oil Company. He did not wait till the close of his address to refer to the "new departure." After only a few introductory words he proceeded to say:

If we were to give expression to the thoughts of many of us here to-day, I think we would congratulate each other upon the outlook; that we have at last reached a period in our civic history when we are beginning to appreciate the possibilities of the future, and we would express to one another the hope that hereafter we will reserve to ourselves the control of what is left of our valuable municipal franchises, which, rightfully understood, are the people's birthright, and destined, in time, to become sources of inestimable benefit as our population continues to increase.

The third and closing speaker, also a luminary in the capitalist firmament, Comptroller COLER, was too much elated by the Socialism in the rapid transit to waste any time whatever before bringing out the point. He launched his speech with this rhapsody:

We celebrate to-day something more than the mere incident of breaking ground for a great public improvement. We celebrate by this ceremony the inauguration of a new and important policy in city government, the policy of municipal ownership and control of great public franchises and utilities. I earnestly hope the memorial tablet to be here placed commemorates not only the commencement of a great and beneficent public enterprise, but marks as surely the end of reckless extravagance in giving valuable privileges to private corporations.

MARX says in his "Eighteenth Brumaire":

At every time when men appear engaged in revolutionizing things and themselves, in bringing about what never was before, at such very epochs of revolutionary crises do they anxiously conjure up into their service the spirits of the past, assume their names, their battle cries, their costumes, to enact a new historic scene, in such time honored disguise and with such borrowed language. . . . Thus does the beginner, who has acquired a new language, keep on translating it back into his own mother tongue.

The language held by these gentlemen is new; to understand it, one must translate it back into the "mother tongue," that is to say, compare it with past historic events that it bears a parallel to. The language will then be understood.

It was the dawn of the year 1871,—twenty-nine years ago. The TWEED RING was in possession. Its plundering of the city treasury was at its height. But, as dawn follows upon the darkest period of night, so also doom frequently lies just ahead of Crime at its zenith. It was so with the TWEED RING. Though in full sway, the Ring scented danger, and began to cast about for friends and popular friendship. Towards 1871, the popular demand for rapid transit in this city had grown to a positive force. The TWEED RING, for reasons too long to explain here, had resisted the demand persistently, forcibly, effectively. Early in 1871, it changed its course. TWEED and his fellow criminals then suddenly appeared as pronounced advocates of rapid transit; they were enthusiastic for the "comforts of the good citizens of New York;" and "ready servants of the will of the people." All this sudden fervor matured in April '71 into what may be called the first Rapid-Transit Act of the New York Legislature. The city was to have rapid transit by the grace of the TWEED RING, that is to say, AFTER TWEED RING STYLE. The catastrophe that this "concession" was in part meant to ward off, came within a year. The TWEED RING went down, and its enlarged rapid-transit plans for robbing the public went down with it.

The "mother tongue" of experience translates into language, understandable to-day, the new language that the representatives of the Robber Class are holding now.

However omnipotent Capitalism may seem to be at present, however high the mound may rise of its victims, yet, like the "unrest" against it; just as the TWEED RING, it deems it politic to "yield;" and just as the TWEED RING, its yielding is a fraud. Socialism, pushed forward by the uncompromising hosts of the Socialist Labor Party, is permeating the masses; from many quarters the cry is coming, however inarticulate it may yet often be. The note of the approaching storm has caught the ear of the Robber Ruling Class, and, with the stupidity natural to such classes, it now imagines it can quiet the storm with a sham, which may give the Robber Ruling Class increased opportunities for plunder—just as the TWEED RING did.

Sufficiently suggestive it is to hear such "Socialistic" utterances and "revolutionary" phrases uttered by a combination of Tammany-Republican-Standard-Oil set right under the very shadows of the Brooklyn Bridge,—a "public utility," a "people's birthright," once owned by the people, and only recently made a present of to "private corporations," by whom? By the very administration of Mayor AUGUSTUS VAN WYCK. The translation of the present new language held by these gentlemen into the language of high thirty years ago, held by the TWEED RING, thus becomes additionally lucid when read by the light of the Brooklyn Bridge.

Tweedism is repeating itself. And the people are made ready by the S. L. P. to deal with it. Watch its march.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

As a matter of course, the comrades and friends at large will be interested in knowing the course of events since the decision, reported in last week's issue, whereby, upon application of the Volkszeitung Corporation, Mr. Justice TRUX sentenced, on March 19, four members of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Labor Party to pay $250, or be imprisoned for alleged "contempt of Court."

Court decisions do not enter into effect until an order is signed. The order was signed on March 23, and upon the application of BENJAMIN PATTERSON, Esq., the attorney for our comrades, the order allows our comrades thirty days within which to pay, or be imprisoned.

This stay of thirty days did not suit the Volkszeitung Corporation, and it stated them less when on Thursday, March 22, a day before the order was signed, they saw last week's issue of THE PEOPLE. In their Timbooctoo denseness they had imagined that a sentence for contempt against Party officers, sued in their individual capacity, was a sentence against the Party itself, which, for reasons best known to the plaintiff, has not been sued at all. When, despite these imaginings, THE PEOPLE appeared, as it has appeared right along, and as it will continue to appear, the gentlemen were blind with rage; and thereupon they tried some more police-spy business of the continental European style with which they are familiar. They flew to Court with new papers, and new motions, quoting the article in THE PEOPLE entitled "Tammany Hall Impotently Fighting the DAILY PEOPLE," claiming that such language against the "Honorable Court" was an "aggravation of the contempt;" and falsely alleging that said article was published by the comrades against whom the decision was rendered; and they went about crying "vengeance" for the "crime committed against the Honorable Court by said article;"—all evidently intended to irritate the Court, and lead it into some more blunders.

The comrades of the N. E. C. who are under sentence (Kuhn, Sanial, Kinnely and Murphy; the other four were not served) have appealed the case. The appeal cannot be heard in time before the expiration of the thirty days' preliminary stay. Consequently, a motion is now in progress for a stay pending the appeal. If the motion is granted, as in decency it should, then everything remains in statu quo until the appeal is decided; the comrades involved remaining at large in the meantime, and no fines paid. If, on the contrary, the motion is denied, why, then, while the appeal is taking its course, and after the expiration of the thirty days' stay, our comrades will have to submit to imprisonment, as they will cheerfully do. They are poor men, and have no money to pay; moreover, even if the Party were to pay the fine for them, under appeal, such a course would simply place into the hands of Tammany Hall the power to bankrupt the Party and all its members: The aggregate wrongful fine of $1,000 could be repeated indefinitely, because the same alleged "Contempt of Court," the issuing of THE PEOPLE, will continue: It is not in the power of these comrades, either in their individual or official capacity, it is in the power of the Party alone to smash the Party's national organ. With this rough sketch of the situation our comrades and friends will be able to follow intelligently the course of events.

At any rate THE PEOPLE, which, owing to all these Court complications, has, since the issuing of the injunction order, been published under the direct supervision of the Party, will continue to appear unterrified by bluster, unaffected by intrigue, knowing its, together with the Party's, rights, and determined to maintain them.

As stated several moons ago, the Party's national organ preserves its colors, snatched from the claws of a canaille that tried to filch them from the Party; and, as these colors flutter on the breeze, they slap alternately each cheek of the widespread reactionist conspiracy that sought and failed to run the Socialist Movement of America into the ground.

The receipt of a sample copy of THE PEOPLE is an invitation to subscribe.

POLITICAL and ECONOMIC.

The New York Tobacco Leaf, capitalist organ of the tobacco and cigar trades, publishes a cartoon that correctly reproduces the contemptible light that the Strasser-Gompers type of labor misleaders has cast upon unionism.

The cartoon represents a mean-looking individual, with a ferret nose and goggle eyes and wearing a bedraggled feather marked "Labor Agitator" in his hat, playing an organ inscribed "The Union." With his left hand the fellow holds a string, at the other end of which is attached a monkey in livery, also wearing a tall plume, but inscribed "Delegate." The dancing monkey has a cup for pennies which he holds up to a knot of cigar-maker workmen standing before him.

Such is "Unionism," such is the "Economic Movement"—that valuable staff of the working class,—to the capitalist. Is this opinion a deliberate slander? Unfortunately it is not.

In the address "What Means this Strike?" delivered to the striking weavers of New Bedford, Mass., now two years ago, the Socialist speaker, representing at the same time the S. T. & L. A., after tracing the decline of the working class in this country under the leadership of "pure and simple" unionism, or what might be termed GOMPERISM, says:

The utter impotence of pure and simple unionism, to-day is born of causes that may be divided into two main heads. One is the contempt in which the capitalist and ruling class holds the working people. In 1886, when instinct was unconsciously to myself, leading me to look into the social problem, when as yet it was to me a confused and blurred interrogation mark, I associated wholly with capitalists. Expressions of contempt for the workers were common. One day I asked a set of them why they treated their men so hard, and had so poor an opinion of them; "They are ignorant, stupid and corrupt," was the answer, almost in chorus. "What makes you think so?" I asked. "Have you met them all?" "No," was the reply, "we have not met them all individually, but we have had to deal with their leaders, and they are ignorant, stupid and corrupt. Surely these leaders must be the best among them, or they would not choose them."

The ignorance, stupidity and inveterate corruption of the "pure and simple" labor leaders have earned the contempt of the capitalist exploiter, not for the rank and file only, but for the economic movement of the workers as well, seeing that these exploiters were made acquainted with only such "Unionism" as these social ulcers of Labor Fakirs introduced them to. The result has been disastrous to Labor.

But a new era is dawning, pushing to the front that true Unionism, that will knock out of the capitalist mind the "organ and monkey" conception of the Union and of Unionism, and compel respect for Organized Labor.

The conspiracy to soil, at least attempt to soil, the good name of Socialism, by setting up Debs as a "Socialist" Presidential nominee, has started in early to do its work. That gentleman is in the field barely three weeks, and already there appear such items as the following which we now clip from the Cleveland, O., Press:

Already Republicans are imitating Colonel Debs in Ohio. Popular ace with regard to Debs as a presidential candidate on the Socialist ticket. State Chairman O'Dell has offered the Socialist plenty of money to boom Debs in doubtful districts, thus to weaken the Democratic vote. It is suspected that O'Dell got his orders from Hanna via Platt, and that a good slice of the Republican campaign fund will be spent in booming Debs all over the country.

The English translation of Karl Marx's "Eighteenth Brumaire," that some time ago ran through THE PEOPLE, is now to be had bound in an elegant volume of 78 pages, with Marx's picture as frontispiece. No Socialist, even though he be no student, and no student, even though he be no Socialist, can afford to be without it. Apply at Labor News Company, 147 East 23d street, New York city. Price, 25 cents.

Bang! Clang! Bang!

DEDICATED TO THE "SLAUGHTERHOUSE" (CENTRAL STAMPING COMPANY'S TIN-SHOP), NEWARK, N. J.

[Written for THE PEOPLE for the benefit of the Municipal Campaign in Newark, N. J., of 1900, by Harry W. Rachel, Newark, N. J.]

In the workshop here I toil, Thinking, mother, dear, of you As I'm pressing tin as hard and tough as brass.

'Mid the rumble, noise and whirr Of machinery, the belt and drive Drive the Wageslave into hatred for a Class.

Bang! Clang! Bang! The Press is closing; Clang! Bang! Clang! The die shows well. For a longer or an arm There are none to give alarm, Though it drives us into hatred for a Class.

'Tis a Class that ruled too long, As a tyranny supreme; In the wrong and cruel swaying of its might It has changed all right to wrong. As its interests did deem: It has changed all daylight into one black night.

Bang! Clang! Bang! Our chains to loosen; Clang! Bang! Clang! A Hammer drops On Election Day the die Will be cast, that you and I Have driven from the Wageslave's hatred for a Class.

This Capitalist's Class, Let its rule be ended soon; Mark a future hell be ready for its use! We want heaven NOW, no less, We want sunlight at the Noon; Then the capitalist may wander to the Deuce!

Bang! Clang! Bang! The Hammer's striking. Clang! Bang! Clang! All true Socialists, arise! Victory lies before our eyes, And we'll herald then the end of every Class.

Then we'll grow a race of MEN; No capitalist shirks That work a worker so that they can keep their skin; We'll drive hunger from its den, Only he shall eat that works; Man will work to live, and do it with a will.

Bang! Clang! Bang! An Arm's marching. Clang! Bang! Clang! The Hammer strikes. Down with Wages! Down with Hell! Down with Gun and Soldier's Tent! Down with Profit! Then we'll live as MEN, HEAVEN!

Uncle Sam and Brother Jonathan.

UNCLE SAM.—Jonathan, what have you been up to? What means those black rings around your eyes? What means that sad, dejected face you have on?

BROTHER JONATHAN.—It means a pile. Ever since the talk I had with you about wages and workingmen, I have felt un-speakably distressed. The more I have thought upon what you said, the deeper have I sunk into the dumps.

U. S.—What I said?

B. J.—Yes. Don't you remember you explained to me the Law of Wages?

U. S.—I do. Does that throw you into the dumps? It should, on the contrary, give you hope and inspiration.

B. J.—"Hope and inspiration" be hanged! I conclude from that Law of Wages that there is no salvation for all the working men. That the best that can be done is to save some. And that the only way of saving these is to drown the others, as you do superfluous puppies.

U. S.—Why, no, man. You are off. Cheer up!

B. J.—Did you not say that labor was a merchandise like any other?

U. S.—Yes; 'tis that under the capitalist system.

B. J.—Did you not say that the price of merchandise is determined by the supply of and the demand for it; the larger the supply and the lower the demand, the lower being the price?

U. S.—So I did.

B. J.—And that the supply of the merchandise labor was outstripping the demand for it by reason of labor-displacing machines and the concentration of capital?

U. S.—Exactly.

B. J.—And that the price of the merchandise labor, to-wit, the wages of the working man, was getting and of necessity had to get lower and lower?

U. S.—Just so.

B. J.—"Just so?" And yet you snickersnack about "hope and inspiration!" If, as I cannot deny, the supply of labor in the market is growing more and more in excess of the demand, those for whom there is still demand won't be able to keep up their wages unless the superfluous ones are killed off, killed off as fast as they become superfluous.

U. S.—I see, I see.

B. J.—Ain't I right?

U. S.—No, no boy. My presentation of the Law of Wages last week was correct as far as it went, tho' it was not complete.

B. J.—Complete it quickly, if there is "hope and inspiration" in it!

U. S.—The expression "supply and demand determines prices" is correct enough, but it is a superficial statement. Look here. If ten years ago you could turn out 20 pairs of shoes in one week, and to-day you can turn out with the machine 40 pairs, has not the supply increased?

B. J.—It has so.

U. S.—And is there not in these 40 pairs as much labor as in the 20 pairs of ten years ago?

B. J.—Yes; they are both produced in equal time.

U. S.—Does it not then follow that the value of 40 pairs is now equal to that of 20 pairs before?

B. J.—Yes.

U. S.—And consequently I pair to-day is equal to half the value of 1 pair before?

B. J.—Yes.

U. S.—To condense all this in short sentences, we have this law:

The value of merchandise depends upon the amount of labor that, at a given time, society needs to produce it;

The larger the quantity of an article, the less is the labor needed to produce it; Consequently, when the supply is large it is an evidence that the labor needed to produce the article is comparatively small.

Improved machinery renders work more fruitful; the more improved machinery becomes, the larger is production, and the smaller is the quantity of labor in each article;

Consequently, machinery lowers the value of merchandises;

The price of a merchandise is the cash it fetches in the market; a number of causes may affect the price, sending it up above, or down below its value; but in the long run "price" and "value" will equalize; and both tend downwards by reason of the decreased quantity of labor that improved methods of production require in each article;—

B. J.—I be hanged if I can see where you are driving to.

U. S.—Postpone the hanging; there is always time for that. In the meantime, if you want to learn the important Law of Wages, you will have to pay close attention. It requires closer attention than the reading of how Jim Sykes just lauded a "roaster" on Mike Dolan's "smeller"; and withal it is of infinitely greater value that you do learn it; it may save your neck. Did you understand me as far as I went?

B. J.—Yes.

U. S.—What did I say?

B. J.—The substance and gist of it was that the value and price of goods went down because their value depends upon the amount of labor required to produce them, and improved machinery steadily lowered that amount of labor, because such machinery increased the quantity of goods that can be produced in a given time.

U. S. (slapping B. J. heartily on the shoulder)—You are an apt scholar; I don't think that you will need to hang or drown. Now listen further:

Under capitalism, labor is a merchandise:

The fate of all merchandise is the fate of the merchandise labor;

Machinery lowers the value of all other goods;

The reason that it does so is that it requires less labor to produce the goods;

Labor, that is to say, the power to work, needs goods to keep it up; it needs food, clothing, etc.; to use a broad expression, goods, wares and merchandise are needed to produce labor-power;

The cheaper the value of these goods, wares and merchandise becomes, the cheaper must also become the value of the labor-power which they produce;

Consequently, the merchandise labor-power is bound to decline in value step by step with the decline of the value of all other goods;—

B. J.—You are getting me mixed up; first you talked "labor," now you have switched off to "labor-power."

U. S. (chucking B. J. under the chin)—Keep up the character I gave you for an apt scholar, and don't shoot off your mouth. I was coming to your question; listen carefully:

The capitalist is the holder and seller of all merchandise but one;

The exception is the merchandise "labor-power"; he does not sell that, he only buys it;

The holder of the merchandise "labor-power," the power to work and produce, is the workingman;

But this merchandise differs from all other merchandise in many particulars;

One particular is this: All other merchandise is OUTSIDE of the body of the holder, the capitalist; the merchandise "labor-power," on the contrary, is INSIDE of the body of its holder, the workingman;

Accordingly, the merchandise "labor-power" is part and parcel of its holder and seller, the workingman, while no other merchandise is part and parcel of its holder, the capitalist;

B. J.'s eyes begin to swim.

The merchandise held by a capitalist may burn down and the capitalist need not burn with it; but if the merchandise held by the workingman, his "labor-power," is consumed, he perishes along with it;

And conversely, a capitalist may die of overfeeding, and yet his goods, wares and merchandise remain free from the affliction, they may fetch big prices and fulfill their mission undisturbed; but if a workingman dies of starvation, or is prostrated by overwork, or otherwise, his merchandise "labor-power" becomes useless, unavailable, unable to fulfill its functions;

For all practical and sociologic purposes labor and "labor-power" are one, the workingman and his special merchandise are inseparable.

B. J. (his eyes glistening)—I see that!

U. S.—The fate of the owner of the merchandise "labor-power" is the fate of the merchandise itself: As the merchandise "labor-power" is bound to decline in value step by step with the decline of the value of all other goods, so is the price, or wage, for which a workingman has to sell himself to the capitalist, along with his "labor-power," bound to go down;

And now get ready for the final summing up:

IT FOLLOWS FROM ALL THIS THAT EVEN IF THERE ARE NO SUPERFLUOUS WORKINGMEN IN THE MARKET, THE PRICE OF "LABOR-POWER," THAT IS TO SAY, THE WAGES OF THE EMPLOYED WORKERS, WILL GO DOWN.

The presence of an excess of labor in the market over and above the demand simply aggravates the evil; an over-supply of labor will and does push wages below even their declining value. But the over-supply is not the original cause of the decline of wages; the original cause is the merchandise quality of labor. If you drown all the superfluous workers, and as fast as they are displaced by machinery, you simply would be removing an aggravating incident; the original cause would continue, and, with it, the steady decline in the earnings of the worker, which is equivalent to the steady increase of his misery and dependence.

B. J. (shaking his fist at U. S.)—The devil take you! You call that giving "hope and inspiration"? As I understood this hellish Law of Wages, there was some hope for some of us, for the happy ones who got work; but as the case now stands there is no hope for ANY of us; we might as well all go down to the rivers and the seashores and drown ourselves. There is no hope, none for the working class. (He glares furiously at U. S.) Speak! speak! Do you hold this maxim?

U. S.—Yes; 'I'll accept the maxim provided you accept an amendment by adding the words "under the capitalist system," so that the maxim shall read: "There is no hope for the working class under the capitalist system."

B. J.—What's the difference?

U. S.—This is the difference: The workers won't drown themselves to please the capitalists. So long as they imagine they can patch up some sort of living arrangement with the capitalist class, they will uphold the capitalist system and continue slaves; but just as soon as the truth shall have broken its choice but between themselves dying or killing off the capitalist system, you'll see them stand up as men; they will refuse to continue to be merchandise; they will overthrow the system that makes them such; they will nationalize the instruments of production and the land, and they will establish the Socialist or Co-operative Commonwealth. That is "hope and inspiration"; that we Socialist workingmen, rather than the Law of Wages, coupled with the law of historic development.

U. S.—Yes; 'I'll accept the maxim provided you accept an amendment by adding the words "under the capitalist system," so that the maxim shall read: "There is no hope for the working class under the capitalist system."

THE GIRLIES CONVENTION.

One of Them Tells the Story.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, March 15.—While riding on the C. H. & D. R. R., near the Indiana line last week two young ladies in the car ahead began talking of Indianapolis, when one said to the other, "We had a lovely convention there last week." "Did you? Tell me all about it," said the other. Then I heard the following:

"There were two sets of girls present, those led by that sweet young thing, Margery Rainey, and those led by that winsome and dashing creature Jobbina Hurrman.

"Jobbina was dressed in a décolleté dress of blue velvet, the gores of the skirt were cut mainly in the bias, and were trimmed with saffron-colored kinkham lace relieved by a spray of appliqued crepe; her hair was dressed in the becoming style known as bryanesque, and on her face was a serenely seraphic smile.

"Margery, as every one knows, leans to the severe in dress, and appeared in a Mother Hubbard, relieved by a few sprigs of orange blossoms, her countenance beamed with joy and ardent spirits, also rouge-et-noir, while upon her lovely Ada Rehan hair was prettily perched a love of a bonnet made to represent the cornucopia of Ceres.

"Margery, as every one knows, leans own way until that hateful Jobbina appeared, and pushed her nasty face right into the bosom of the 'play,' as Margery said. Some girls on Margery's side acted real horrid, and when Jobbina rose to speak about how easy it was to make omelettes without breaking the eggs, also how easy it was to make an actor's complexion, gored and hemstitched skirt capable of fitting a stout lady and a thin one all at one and the same time and place, Margery positively giggled, and even went so far as to doubt Jobbina's word.

"The row was quite fierce for a time, many safety and hair pins being lost because of the agitation caused by the winking of handkerchiefs and doilies. One girl was so excited she ate chocolates so fast that she nearly choked and had to be patted on the back.

"The excitement was intense, and, after adjournment, even Mary Hasquit was seen in animated and absorbed exchange of compliments with dear old Aunt Mollie Cartney. It was ludicrous to hear the giggles and suppressed shrieks. Hysteria seemed to be in the air.

"You know we wanted that darling, cute, dear, sweet Jeanne Nebs to carry our lovely silver and silverene-colored banner on our Commencement Day next September, but Jeanne, when nominated, refused, and sat while as marble, or as though some one was telling ghost stories. When Aunt Mollie spoke of Jeanne Nebs we all got up, and clapped our hands, waved our handkerchiefs, cried, and, can't you see, sat down, got up again, shrieked—though in a perfectly lady-like way—but still Jeanne would not accept.

"Margery went over to Jeanne, and, with tears furrowing through her face, powder, her voice choked with sobs, her hair unkempt, and her bonnet askew, threw her arms around Jeanne's neck, and prayed and begged her to accept. By this time the individual cries had been swallowed up in a chorus of sobs, and, as if by magic, the pretty little harp player from Cleveland, lost complete control of herself, and had to be taken out and given some soda water, all the time crying 'Wow, its up, too,' but we could not find out what had come up.

"Jeanne bore herself bravely through the trying ordeal, and seemed unmoved, with the exception that she fanned herself with that peculiar and peculiar 'oh! fan of hers, faster than she usually did."

"Margery at last was so overcome she could not speak, so Jobbina got up, and, in a feeling manner, referred to the fact that, while she had been chosen to carry a banner, it was not the banner, and she wanted and desired her dearest Jeanne to carry the banner, while she would hold the cords.

"Then the excitement began all over again, and the sobbing was something awful, until Jeanne arose and said, 'My dear girls, I would be only too glad to carry your banner, but you know it is not my honor I think of that may be frayed at the edges a little, what I think of is you. Your banner is too near in color to my complexion, and the effect desired could not be attained. I have only a few dresses left, and none of them is fit to be worn. My health is also not too good. I have headaches and fainting spells not alone in my head, but in my legs—ah lines, Really, I cannot.'"

"After the misery caused by the remarks had subsided, and we were all beginning to feel good after our cry, some foolish young thing rose and nominated Jobbina, which started a tremendous row. Why some even went so far as to arm themselves with hat pins, and threatened to carry the banner, and Jobbina saluted again if Jobbina was nominated.

"The excitement was only ended by the chair announcing that there was a bargain sale on at a Department Store, and only seven hours were left in which to do shopping.

"Though none of us had any money, still we had a lovely time shopping, and then all went to see Jeanne in her room. Nowhere, March 31 and April 1. Troy, April 2, 3 and 4. Utica, April 5 and 6. Syracuse, April 7 and 8. Albany, April 9 and 10. Buffalo, April 11 and 12. Rochester, April 13.

ADDRESS

To Members of the S. & D. B. F.

The Allentown, Pa., Branch of the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund has issued the below address, headed by a full ticket, to the members of the Society, in an earnest appeal to save the Society from the destruction that is threatening it by the present ring in control:

FELLOW MEMBERS: In setting up, and submitting to you the above ticket for national officers for the ensuing term, we have not been moved by personal preferences. A much more weighty motive has actuated our conduct.

Thanks to the vicious management of our present national officers during the last year, our Society has been thrust into a crisis that seriously endangers its very existence.

By a shameful abuse of authority and breach of the trust imposed in them, the national officers have dared to pass and circulate in our Local Branches resolutions defamatory to the character and good name of several of our members, basing their conduct—not upon any wrongful act of these members as members of our society; not upon any act whatever on the part of these members within the society; no, but—upon the conduct of these members outside of our society, and in the just and free exercise of their rights of free thought, free speech and free action as citizens and men.

Such infamous conduct against honorable members could not otherwise than be resented. Accordingly, everywhere almost, our Local Branches have since been the theatre of turbulence. The real business of our organization has been injured and neglected, and in its stead acrimonious debates have ensued to the injury of the true interests of the society—all thanks to the personal malice and offensive partisanship of the present administration. But this is not all.

The identical National Administration is now at the bottom and back of a conspiracy to switch our society from its legitimate purpose, turn it into a prop for a private partisan-political paper, and thus hurl it into the vortex of political conflicts to its certain ruin.

The Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund is an organization to insure workmen against sickness and death; it is not an organization to insure sick and dying papers. The present National Administration, beaten outside of the organization on the political lines that, for reasons best known to themselves, they chose to follow, are now straining every nerve to use our society for their private political views and ends. One scheme after another have they set afloat to the end of bringing financial aid to a certain dying publishing concern, with which they have identified their fortunes, and to whose existence they are willing to sacrifice the best interests of our own society.

But these various fraudulent schemes—assessments under various disguises, and finally appropriations out of our local treasuries—have been seen through, and have given fresh cause for fresh outbreaks of acrimonious wranglings in our Local Branches.

Our society is incorporated under the laws of New York. Large numbers of members who find that the National Administration is trying to conduct a private partisan-political fight in our insurance organization, will not quietly submit to the plot. They will resort to the courts, as they have a right to. The result of such a quarrel is certain injury to our society. Our society cannot do its work without new accessions; the turmoil into which it has been thrown by the perverseness of our present National Administration is bound to keep out new members; and the illegal plot against our treasuries and our pockets may even bring on the revocation of our charter of incorporation.

Such, fellow members, is the present situation. It is serious. The organization cannot escape the dangers that beset it if it continues either under the present management or under new men who uphold such a ruinous, not to say indecent, policy.

In view whereof we have set up the above ticket, pledged to keep the organization free from dissension, entanglements, above all free from divisive partisanship, and we urge you to support that ticket.

PETER HERRIGER, JOHN LAPPLE, H. BOEHM, The Committee.

Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, Branch 160, Allentown, Pa.

MASSACHUSETTS.

STATE COMMITTEE.

The State Committee of the Socialist Labor Party of Massachusetts, at its meeting, held in Room 1, 724 Washington street, Boston, voted to appoint a committee to secure legal advice and push the illegal work of the Goldstein combination to a decision of the Equity Court. The committee then appointed were instructed to hurry the case to a decision as possible. The State Committee also voted that the secretary correspond with the Sections of the Party in the districts not represented in the State Committee and get those Sections to make nominations for members of the State Committee.

The Committee appointed to look after the sub-committee is also called to meet at the same place, and report to the State Committee meeting the progress of the call.

In the matter of nominations for the vacancies in the State Committee the following nominations have been made:

1st Bristol District—George L. Hunt of Taunton; nominated by Section Taunton. 2d Bristol District—Samuel Platt of Fall River; nominated by Section Fall River. 2d Plymouth District—Nestor Anderson of Brockton; appointment recommended by Secretary of State Committee. 4th Essex District—Ernest C. Peabody of Haverhill; nominated by Sections Groveland and Haverhill. 5th Essex District—Harry Kerner of Somerville; nominated by Section Somerville. 5th Middlesex District—A. L. Frye of Medford; nominated by Section Medford. 6th Middlesex District—Owen Morris of Lowell; 7th Middlesex District—Horace King of Lowell; nominated by Section Lowell. Berkshire District—Herman Koopke of Pittsfield; recommended by Comrade Connor of North Adams. The following districts have not made any nominations: Second Norfolk District, Section Dedham; 2d Suffolk District, Sections Boston and Cambridge; 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th Suffolk District, Section Boston; 2d Middlesex District, Section Cambridge; 3d Worcester District, Sections Athol and Fitchburg; the Berkshire and Hampshire District, Section Northampton, and the 2d Essex District, Section Salem.

The Secretary is ordered by the State Committee to recommend to the comrades in those districts, and the comrades who are members at large, in the Cape District, to make nominations and report to him as early as possible for action by the State Committee.

Also that the State Convention be held on September 4th, Tuesday; that a conference of delegates from the Sections be held in the city this day for the State Convention September 1, evening, 2d and 3d (Saturday, Sunday and Monday) and that the Conference and Convention be held in New Bedford.

The following towns and city have reported a complete list of committees as required by law: Lawrence (city), Abington, Groveland, Stoneham, Peabody, Winchester, Wakefield and Revere. The following cities have reported an incomplete list: New Bedford, Lowell, Woburn, Cambridge, Medford, Lynn, Boston, Chelsea, Fall River, Everett and Haverhill. The following places, in which Sections are located, have not filed any list of committee: Taunton (city), Dedham, Salem (city), Somerville (city), Clinton, Athol, Fitchburg (city), Northampton (city), Springfield (city), Chicopee (city), Holyoke (city) and Westfield.

Towns to comply with the law should have a committee of at least three members; cities at least three members for each ward. The aggregate of all the wards being the city committee. Town, Ward and City Committees should organize by choosing the following officers: A chairman, a secretary, and a treasurer, and any other officers they feel disposed to elect. Town and City Committees should file a list of officers and members with the Town or City Clerk, with the Secretary of the Commonwealth and with the Secretary of the State Committee. Ward Committees should file a list of officers and members with the Secretary of the City Committee, all within ten days of organization. Although the law requires City Committees to organize in the month of January and town and ward committees in the month of January and February, the Secretary of the State Committee will recognize as legal committees a list furnished, properly certified to, by a Section in good standing, or a Section newly organized.

JEREMIAH O'FHEILLY, Secretary of Massachusetts State Committee, Socialist Labor Party. Abington, March 24, 1900.

CAMBRIDGE—The Section of the S. L. P. meet every first and third Sunday of the month at 3 p. m., at Prospect House, Room 5. All are welcome. R. E. McINNIS, Secretary.

NEW JERSEY.

For Member of City Council, 2d Ward, Nicolas Lupisier; 4th Ward, Michael McGarry.

NEW YORK.

SING SING—The Westchester County delegates held a meeting at Tarrytown, on Sunday, March 18. Hereafter the delegates will be notified through the columns of THE PEOPLE when and where the next meeting will be called. HUBERT MEALING, JR., County Secretary.

I. & M. W. EXECUTIVE BOARD.

Meeting of the Executive Board of the Iron and Metal Workers, S. T. & L. A., opened at 11 a. m., Sunday, March 18; Luck as chairman. Communications were received from Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Pa., and Bridgeport, Conn. Schulberg as organizer, reported that in the two weeks that he had worked in Connecticut he organized six Alliances. In Stamford he found the comrades solid for the Party. In Bridgeport two meetings were held, the result being that an I. & M. W. A. was organized. Likewise in New Britain, Conn. In New Haven, Conn., the pure and simple tried their best to break up the meeting, a couple of fakers, O'Neale and Hartford being among the worse ones, but they were not many enough for the comrades present, so they skipped. A Mixed Local was organized there. In Hartford a good meeting was held, and a Mixed Local organized. In New London and Stamford good meetings were held, and in each place an I. & M. W. Local was organized.

The result of Schulberg's tour is that we have now six more Locals in the Alliance, four of which are I. & M. W. Schulberg will be sent on a tour through New York state on March 26, and on return start for Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Next meeting of the Executive Board will be held at 441 West 39th street, on Sunday, April 1.

K. WALLBERG, Corresponding Secretary.
