Unblushingly the "Chicago Socialist" of the 3rd of the current month glories in the endorsement of six of its Socialist party candidates for municipal offices by the Chicago "Daily News," an outand-out capitalist and capitalist party paper. London despatches quote Keir Hardie, with the S. L. P. An element there is see ahead. Such a conclusion would be

s saying in the London "Socialist Re- in the land whose conception of Socialview" for the current month: "I am inclined to be doleful concerning the future of the Socialist party in America" the doloful prospect being due to "the deplorable fact that during the last ten years no trades unionist of any standing n New York has been brought into the Socialist movement."

There is a world of wisdom-theoreti cal and practical-in Keir Hardie's estimate; and a flood of light it sheds on things past, present and future in the Socialist Movement of America.

Keir Hardie's estimate, whether he is ware of it or not matters little, resolves itself into the following sequence of

1st. Without the Unions of the land onnect with the Socialist Political Movenent, the one and the other stagnate The Unions, or Economic Movement, re main a power of undeveloped potential ity; the Political Movement degenerates speedily into a flash in the pan, of profit only to self-seeking stage-strutters;

2nd, None but the revolutionary Union will connect with the Socialist Political Movement; and consequently,

3rd. It must be the pre-eminent task of the Socialist Political Movement to urge into life the class-conscious Union, n other words, the preaching of the Social Revolution upon the only field on which it can be preached—the civilized field of political action.

Keir Hardie's estimate, gathered from ntimate and personal observation during his recent visit to America, amounts to aying that the Socialist party has failed of its mission. This is true-yet not wholly true.

There was a special mission for the Socialist party to perform—the mission of demonstrating the soundness of the Socialist Labor Party position.

ism is purely political. To that element the Economic Movement is, at best, merely a transient manifestation. To them the idea of at all devoting time to the Economic Movement, except to jolly and captivate the good will of its membership, is a waste of time. It is considered even worse than a waste of time: it is considered harmful. The searching critieism, that the conduct of the class-unconscious Union demands, produces irri-tation; "makes enemies." The Utopian Socialist, with his visions of political victory, insensibly acquires the qualities of the captalist politician-a suavity that means all things to all men. To the Utopian, or pure and simple political Socialist, accordingly, nothing is more abhorrent than to "give offence." As a onsequence, like ostriches in a storm he shuts his eyes to the Economic Question. Knows nothing of it; wants to know nothing of it. This element had its representatives in the S. L. P. They objected to the S. L. P. posture or Unionism. They tried to remodel the S. L. P. principle. They failed, bolted, and in 1890 joined their kindred on the outside. Thus arose the S. P. It was to rush to victory. Unnecessary to repeat the review made of the S. P. vote at the last election. The setback that the S. P. received in most all industrial centers, beginning with New York City, evidently did not escape Keir Hardie. and he puts his finger upon the fatal spot the failure of the S. P. to enlist the proletariat, especially the organized. From the circumstance that the S. P. with its pure and simple political policy has no prospect, and that the S. L. P. with its combined economic and political policy, makes even a worse showing, a far as votes are concerned, the conclusion would seem warranted that the absolute outlook for Socialism in America is dolerash-rash because it fails to take in all the facts in the case.

Dogmatic Socialists incur the error of holding that a certain quantity of capitalism must produce a corresponding quantity of Socialist Movement, and that, seeing the United States furnishes the largest quantity of capitalism, there fore it should also have the largest quantity of Socialist Movement to show. Finding this is not so, the Socialist dogmatist is puzzled, frequently looking wildered, much as a duck in thunder. As with vegetation, even in the same latitude but different atmospheric conditions, the course of the Socialist Movement is intimately affected by different social atmospheres. The social atmosphere in the United States inevitably raises the delusion of pure and simple political Socialism. The delusion is not one to be argued down. It had to be demonstrated. Had the S. L. P. remained alone in the field the process of the demonstration would have been greatly retarded. Valuable is the service rendered the American Movement by the S. P. It did not mean to be self-sacrificing, yet it obeyed a self-sacrificing behest. By setting up its anti-S. L. P. principle it demonstrated with its own failure the soundness of the S. L. P. For a time the process of demonstration could not choose but retard the Movement. The presence of a party that flew the colors of Socialism yet advocated anti-Socialist tactics which, for the very reason of their being un-Socialistic, chimed in with favorite prejudices and were bound to meet with greater popularity, had necessarily to block the, path of progress for the S. L. P. The expectations nursed by S. P. error having suffered shipwreck, the path is clearedat least it is clearing for more rapid

This prize in 1906 was awarded to Theodore Roosevelt. It amounted to $36,724.79. Roosevelt, then President, announced that the best way to apply the prize was to establish in Washington a permanent Industrial Peace Committee.

In pursuance of the purpose Congress in 1907 passed an act forming the Industrial Peace Committee and putting the fund in its hands as trustee. MEN EAGER TO WORK, Pastor Nails Lie That Unemployed Are Lazy.

The Rev. Alfred V. Wittmeyer, rec tor of the Church du Saint Esprit, in Twenty-seventh street, just west of Fourth avenue, N. Y., is authority for the statement that unemployed who are found in the bread lines will go to work when they get a chance. He has had the experience of some three years in providing work for such men on a large farm of 250 acres in New Jersey. Most of the work on his farm is done and has been done by men who have applied to him for help at the church in Twenty-seventh street. There are a dozen such men on his farm now and there will be more in the summer

"One of the best things about it," said he, "is that whenever a man has worked on the farm for a time he always wishes to go back."

The rector has recruited his men through a practice of the church. It is the custom there to set aside the balcony of the church for the convenience of men of the street. After the service these men receive enough money to buy a meal. The contributions that are taken up by the church are used in this way. In addition, the church maintains a home for Frenchwomen who have recently landed in this country. The church itself derives its revenue from real estate which it owns.

ARMY HAS QUOTA.

Hard Times Send Men Enough Into Ranks.

For the first time since the Spanish war the United States Army is recruited up to its full strength in all of its branches, and in every recruiting station in New York, Brooklyn, and New Jersey there is displayed on the bulletin boards a notice signed by the Adjutant General of the Army ordering the recruiting officers to confine themselves, until further orders, to the re-inlisting of honorably discharged soldiers.

According to reports the increased enlistment that has brought the army up to its full strength of 77,000 men was due to hard times. But a number of officers, unwilling to give currency to the truth, are advancing other rea sons for the full quota of men. They admit that many men undoubtedly fell into the ranks as a result of financial depression, but say that the majority are young men who have gone into the army for a career. It is pointed out, however, that if "careers" were the object, there were men all along who could have joined on this excuse. Many of the recruits are mechanics, some are engineers, other are from number are stenographers and shipping clerks, according to a statement made by an officer on duty here. One notable fact is that in the last fifteen months many applicants had to be rejected because of their failure to conform to the physical tests. Otherwise the ranks would have been completed ere now.

Last September the army was more than twenty-three per cent. short of its authorized enlisted strength, some of the regiments and coast artillery companies being depleted to less than half their legal duots of men. But the increased economic pressure due to the idleness in the Presidential campaign had its effect, and many men were compelled to seek the army as

At the present time the recruiting stations are refusing the applications of young men who wish to enlist for the first time. They are carefully looked over, however, and whenever the officers see a man who looks like the making of a good soldier they take his name and address and give him the preference when there is a va-

UNION HELPS BOSSES

SPOKANE PLUMBERS STRIKE FOR MASTERS' ASSOCIATION.

Under American Federation of Labor Misleadership Men Are Lined Up Demanding Independent Employers to Join the Bosses' Organization.

Spokane, Wash., April 2.-There are people who are deluded with the idea that the American Federation of Labor is a workingman's organization, that is, they imagine it will improve the conditions of Labor. Anyone, however, who knows anything is aware of the fact that Labor's economic condition can only be bettered by taking from the employers' receipts, reducing his surplus. Here in this city, union labor is at the present time lined up, not to gain something for itself, it is in a fight in behalf of an emoloyers' association. Plumbers are being "pulled off" the jobs of independent firms, the purpose being to force the independents to become members of the Master Plumbers' Association. union plumbers, under their misleadership, are thus unwisely drawn into a war between interests from whom they can expect nothing but a turn down when they have their own demands to present.

A short time ago the union signed in "agreement" with the masters organitation, but it transpires that this document is more favorable to the bosses than the men. In fact, the sum and substance of it means that the workmen must help the bosses to organize a monopoly. There are about 30 of the local plumbing firms which are now members of the Master Plumbers' Association, acrording to the members of the association. The agreement of time and wages between the union and the association was signed without much discussion either side.

In discussing this agreement, J. T. Manning, an independent employer, said vesterday morning: "The union has agreed to work for no master plumbers except those belonging to the association, and in return for this all members of the association agree to employ none but plumbers of local union No. 44."

The first strike against these bosses not in the employers' association broke out yesterday morning when the plumbers who are working on the sevenstory Carlyle hotel building, on the southwest corner of Post street and Secand avenue, were "pulled" by the local plumbers' union.

The plumbers were in the employ of the J. T. Manning Plumbing company, independents. There are now about 18 firms in the city which do not belong to the association. The order of the plumpers' union is said to affect all the firms that are nat affiliated. These firms, acording to J. T. Manning, whose union nen were "pulled" by the plumbers' union yesterday morning, are employing about 25 plumbers at the present time. J. T. Manning in discussing the "pullng" off of the plumbers from his job said: "The master plumbers have been wanting me to come back into the association, to which I once belonged. I told them I was not in a position to give them an answer. Yesterday morning the agent of the plumbers "pulled off" my men. Members of the Master Plumbers association would not discuss the matter. Members of the plumbers' union were also reticent in regard to the controversy. James Smyth, president of the masters' association, said that he would not discuss the action of the plumbers' mion in taking off the men.

FRENCH BUTTON MAKERS' STRIKE.

Meru, France, April 11.-The strike of the button makers of Meru has entered upon large proportions. A number of departmental authorities are hurrying in here and cavalry and gendarmes are being sent on the scene. They may stir up fight.

The trouble arises from a reduction of thirty per cent. in wages, made by the employers, on the ground that the competition of Japan, where mother of pearl is very cheap, made it impossible to continue the old wage scale.

"I went to the District Attorney's office on November 11, and explained the outrageous treatment accorded me. I desired that Jerome should press this ase of debauching the ballot. I was told by Daniel F. Murphy, of the District Attorney's office, that the department had no jurisdiction in such cases.

"Murphy said I would have to go to the Superintendent of the Election Board, Leary, to bring charges against the inspector who was guilty of wrongdoing. Murphy also said that I would ave to go before a Police Magistrate to-have the thugs hauled up.

Mr. Leary stated that the first informa tion he had received about the affair was when he had handed to him the Daily People containing the article in question. Leary said he at once set on foot an investigation in his office and found that I had been there before and made an affidavit in the matter. 'But, said the superintendent, 'this is a matter in which I, as Election Superintendent, have no jurisdiction. My work covers only violations of the election laws. Any misconduct on the part of an election inspector must be brought before the Board of Elections, who appoint the inspectors.'

"I related my case to Leary, and was told that with reference to the assault committed upon me, and also as to the police refusing to arrest the election clerk for trying to vote a different ballot than the one given him, these were matters which fell under the jurisdiction of the Police Department. He suggested that I go to these departments and lodge complaints.

"I again went to Commissioner Bingham's office, and saw the commissioner's secretary. He received me politely and commended my determination to push my case. He said he wished that every one who had a complaint the nature of mine would persist in pressing it. Then election outrages could be put an end to. He assured me that my case would be thoroughly prosecuted. But that has been two months ago now and the matter is pigeon-holed again."

Hiltner now turns to Governor Hughes, to whom he has sent the following communication:

Hon. Chas. E. Hughes, Governor of New York, Albany,

Dear Sir:-I wish to call your urgent attention to an election outrage perpetrated upo me at the last election and for which I have, despite all efforts, failed to secure redress and the assurance that it will not be repeated.

The enclosed clipping of the New York "Daily People" of which issue I send you a marked copy by separate cover, states the details in full.

As you will see, I have exhausted all means open to me to bring the offenders to justice. The public authorities have utterly failed to take up my case. I now, as a last resort, turn the matter over to you. I ask that my appeal shall not be in vain.

Yours respectfully, Michael L. Hiltner.

SHOES IN FOUR MINUTES.

And Labor Cost Is 35 Cents by Latest Methods.

How long would it take you to make pair of boots, do you think? You probably had better not begin it, especially if you need them soon. Even cobbler in the old days, working with his assistant, would spend a day and a half making a pair of boots and the cost would be about $4.

But now, of course, shoes are made by machinery, and it is astonishing to hear how quickly they are made. It takes just four minutes to make a pair of boots! And the labor cost is about thirty-five cents.

Of course, no one makes the whole boot nowadays. There are a hundred different men making different parts of it, and each one does the same thing over and over again, and each man learns to do his particular work especially well and quickly. And you story in the Daily People of January boy takes the part of the shoes where "Officers, you see that this man is level for no good. I demand his arrest.'

"Both officers only laughed, and I would thank you to call at this office at your convenience in relation to chine, and in no time out comes the piece of leather with all the buttons exactly in the right place. No wonder some factories turn out 10,000 pairs of shoes in a day, and the shoe worker

PARIS STRIKERS

Postal Employes Gain Notable Victory All Along the Line-Splendid Discipline Helps.

[Translated from the Berlin Vorwaerts of March 26, by J. Scheuerer.]

Paris. March 23 .- The post-offic mployees have to-day ended their strike. They return victorious to their daily labors. Their energetic action carried out with confidence, enhusiasm and self-restraint, compelled the government to capitulate all along the line.

This success was already assured Sunday, when Barthou and Clemenceau conferred with the delegates of the strikers, practically ignoring Simvan. Surely Clemenceau did not-aye, could not-give a formal promise, that the assistant secretary Simyan would resign, without disavowing the parliament and the cabinet itself which only last Friday wrung from the deputies vote of confidence for an "energetic" policy. Still, yesterday Clemenceau declared with apparent firmness: "If Mr. Simyan would hand me to-day his resignation, I could not accept it." But just from this "to-day" sounded the willingness to concede everything, except the Canossa of doing public penttence. The strikers, owing to their inexperience in the tactics of the class truggle, after a short wavering which is not surprising, were lenient in this respect, and fortunately did not miss the psychological moment in their

Also in the second point which was to decide the fate of their movement they got full satisfaction, namely, the e-employment of all the strikers. There is no victimization. Also in this respect there was no documentary promise with seal and signature. but Clemenceau's words were not less binding because they were garbed in philistine sentimental verbiage. "Not to mercy-I don't like this word-but to generosity the government is inclined," declares the minister president yesterday in the Chamber of Deputies. And how meek, how permeated with Christian moral sympathy are the words: "We are all human, and like other human beings we are liable to errors, and therefore inclined to forgive the errors of others." Clemencean doesn't want the victimization of men who have wives and children at home: "We aren't wild beasts." In order fully to comprehend the humiliation of the ill-fared would-be tyrant one must consider that these words were addressed to officials who had to bear the brunt of Clemenceau's former tempera nent-because the strikers did not even save him the selfdenial to confer with delegates who were, on account of their economic agitation, victimized, or who had been sentenced for participating in demonstrations in the present movement. But his lips. And not only in these two most important points were the strikers victorious. On Monday they found in the "Journal Officiel" an order, gotter up in haste, which practically recogniged their demands in reference to advancements and the right of coalltion. And their triumph is apparent in every particular. For instance, all soldiers and police had to withdraw ers returned to work. Now, how is this brilliant success explainable? Attempts will not be missing-aye, the various sources are doing so now-to ascribe it to the methods of syndicalism. The capitalist and anti-republican papers are beginning to interpret it in this sense, having an interest to show, that the radical Democracy leads to the dissolution of governmental authority and to the "tyranny of the trade unlons." But in reality this strike proves only the power of organization, furthered and recognized by the Socialists of all shades.

It was just the specific methods of so-called revolutionary syndicalism from which the strikers, in great selfdiscipline, abstained. Especially it must be mentioned that the employes of the telegraph administration condemned specifically all acts of "Sabotage" [stealing and individual reprisals peculiar to the slums], and their union went even went so far as to offer men to the government for the purpose of repairing the damage done by unknown persons to the telegraph wires. And this discipline contributed much to gain and keep the sympathy for the strikers, by disarming harmful criti-

It would also be misjudging the situation if one were to overlook the peculiar circumstances which assisted the strikers.

First of all it was not the subor- which caused the least annoyance, the diffate officials and employes who be- "Red Cross," "Spokane," "Scandinavian-if not according to their salaries, any way in social position belonged to the bourgeoisle. Victimization of telegraph officials and telephone girls would have driven the interrelated bourgeoisle and officialdom,-which, since the fusilades of Draveil, has not participated in the smallest movement—to a rage which would not have shrurk from using revolutionary means. The strikers undoubtedly also profited by the attitude of the reactionary press, which demagogicly vaunted its aversion to the parliament and parliamentary government.

Bureaucratic guild spirit gained them sympathy in the highest stratas of officialdom, and the cockroach bourgeoisie anger over the "15,000 franks men" assured them the sympathy of the small tradesmen though they were greatly insured by the strike. Owsley, the large exploiters, united in the Chamber of Commerce, showed firm and logical bourgeois class-consclousness. But the government felt. in the face of the prevailing sentiment, too weak to go the full length of the oppressor's lust. Finally it must not be forgotten that the strikers put rather sentimental than economic motives to the foreground. It was before all a fight against Simyan and it gave the public an opportunity to get even for the inconveniences and bother it had to swallow year in and out in Post-and especially Telephone-the strike? It would be a utopia to consider that through this one precedent the right of coalition of the officials would be respected by all future governments. But the moral tmoression of the victory is surely calculated to give the organizations of the officlais a hitherto unexpected develop-

Will closer and lasting relations between the officials, subordinates and workingmen be striven for? We hope so. In to-day's meeting which decided the return to work the President of the telephone girls called for three cheers for the proletariat of the postal service. If the consciousness of the officials that they belong to the proletariat takes root, then this result will be the most lasting and important success of the strike.

THE BOIL RIPENING.

Spokane I-Am-A-Bums as Police Spies.

Spokane, Wash., April 3 .- Walsh and Wilson, of the I-am-a-Bums, are continually howling "Scab!" "Pinkerton!" "Employment Sharks!" etc., insinuating that the S. L. P. is in sympathy with Pinkertons, etc. That this is the old ery of "Stop thief!" is now proven by themselves.

In one of its straggling issues, the Bush Temple Bulletin" of February 27. had an article from Walsh in which he tells how the Spokesman-Review (capitalist) was praising him for the WORK HE HAD DONE FOR THE POLICE during the riot of January 18th, and his joy is great in pointing out the attention he is receiving from his masters.

In the Bulletin of March 6th, referring to the riot of February 16th Walsh says: "The chief of police came to the hall the other night and asked that I go out and hold a street meeting and try to cool down that crowd and get them to the hall." The Spokane Industrial Worker of March 25th (the I-am-a-Bum's organ) says "A bunch of barrel ums from the Lousawa Inn (Rev Bull's resort) who were drunk and noisy in the vacant lot next to the I. W. W. hall Sunday were taken to jail on the complaint of the union.' The fact is, some men who apparently did not intend to pay tribute to Walsh and Wilson, and who were not bothering anybody but just stepped into an alley and took a drink out of a bottle, were arrested on complaint of Wilson.

But there is more.

The Employment Agents' Association has asked the City Council to pass an ordinance to fix a license of $100 and a bond of $1,000 for employment offices, so that if men are shipped out where there is no work, they can get back their fee and fare. If this is not trying to squeeze out the small agencies; what is it? Can it be possible that some of the large employment agents had anything to do with the starting of these riots and getting windows broken on purpose to assist the police to have an ordinance declared legal which will stop a good deal of competition and shut off those who are not able to put up the cash? If this ordinance passes the council then the small employment offices are dished.

Can it be possible that Wilson and Walsh were agents for those large employment, offices? During the riots of January 18th and February 16th these large employment offices were not molested at all, although they had caused the most of the trouble by shipping men out where there was no work. Those gan the movement, but officials, who, American," "Lawrence," "Adams" and "Sweitzer" were the ones which suffered. But they are not; the smallest of the employment agencies. They are able to pay their license and put up bonds. The riots, evidently incited by the large agencies, were also meant to bring the smaller ones into line. They can stand a little extra expense to have the smallest fry put out of existence which is not able to pay license and put up bonds.

Wilson is always pointing out how the employment agents are taking the judges out for automobile rides. Walsh and Wilson admit that they themselves are working with and assisting the police department. No more need be said on this head

Who are the agents of the capitalist class to start riots and put a stop to free speech?

Who is it that starts riots to help the city administration to collect licenses and to assist the most prominent employment agents with the object in view of stopping as many as possible from going into the same business?

Who is doing more to accomplish this than J. H. Walsh and James Wilson? Who are the agents of the capitalists, and who are the Pinkertons in the labor movement in Spokane?

Is any one so blind that he cannot see? Will it be necessary for Walsh to show his credentials and Wilson to produce a "star" before those men can get their eyes opened?

If all those points, to stop speaking on the street, legalize employment offices and putting the small employment agents out of business and above all to inject a wrong conception of industrial unionism into the working class of the northwest can be accomplished by the capitalist class a celebration would be in order with a group of guests of honor, composed of some of the leading citizens from the Chambers of Commerce, the leading Employment Agents, Ex-Chief of Police Rice, J. H. Walsh and the most prominent of all in the center in the person of James Wilson as the star in the performance.

THE LABOR MOVEMENT IN FRANCE

SYNDICALISTS AND ANTI-MILITARIST WINGS BROUGHT TO DECLARE FOR POLITICAL ACTION.

Translated from "Proletary" (Russian) | became almost the beginning of the by J. Kresswell.

The late October, 1908, convention of c United Socialist Party and the Genation of Labor in France all undoubtedly serve as the turning movement. At head of the General Confederation of Labor at that time, were the references of the English trade unionist type, among whom were active adherents of eures' theory of the co-operation of feases. Gerard, the then secretary of he Confederation, used to support in the ederation Millerand, who opened wide se treasury of the ministry of Comn used to give bansellties used to give to labor ns free lyceams and pecuniary subs. Consequently the demoralization Suesdists trade unions, captured temporarily the General Confederation of Laboration me the moving spirite in theory The reformers also prepared a lo field for anarcho-syndicalists. The tility to political action which selzed laboring mastes in the rising period liam, appears only as a jus es of the parliatactics. Only four years have nece "revolutionary" syndicalism phed, yet it is now passing. We ourselves to a short review of the on this syndicalism has gone

themselves at Bo

Social Revolution. "The words, "general strike," became a sacred communa on their lips, At the Paris Convention of 1901 it was even decided to form special committee to prepare for such strike, and the syndicalists were deeply convinced that the day when the working class would go on strike would be the last of the bourgeois regime. Syndicalist agitators taught the workers that high dues, rich union treasuries and numerous syndicates lead to narrow Eng mism only that strikes must always be hastily improvised, and to pre pare for them long is unnecessary. The owardly and apathetic, and they as eates in embryo always acted with sur prising self-assurance, and the unsu essful outcome of strikes never worried them. Strikes in their eyes always served as "revolutionary gymnastics."

With such views the ayndicalists prepared themselves for the first decisive battle, which they were to give to "capi-tal" on the 1st of May, 1906, in order to gain the eight hour day. Their strik ing and impressive revolutionary procla-mations and orations, and the previously raised hue and cry were so great that the were really on the eve of a social catas trophe. The radical ministry of Clemen ceau being then in power it concentrated in Paris and in provincial proletarian centers enormous military, forces. The French workingmen, without a sou in their union treasuries, without strong syndicates, temporarily influenced by the revolutionary phraseology of the demo-gogues, stumbled not only over the more perfectly organized capital, but also upon ts traditional defender, the government's mobilized army. The result, as hould have been expected, was the complete defeat of the workers. - A grea number of unions became almost wholly demoralized and disbanded. Others lost considerable of their membership. For nstance, the union of metal workers in 1906 lost 6,000 out of 14,000 members, i. e., more than a third. The federation of pressmen, whose caution the syndi-callets ridiculed and condemned was the only one to carry on a successful strug-Thanks to an ample treasury an in gaining the nine-hour day in a considwas the blow delivered to the working ment may be judged from the fact that the number of absolutely successful strikes for this year reached only seven per cent, while in the years 1896-1905, the average for successful strikes was 14 per cent. The Confederation of Labor, which, according to Pouget had 250,000 members in 1902, had at the con pention of Amiens in 1906 only 203,000

Far poorer results were shown from syndicalist practice for the last two years, which even the revolutionary lead es Pouget and Griffeulhes confess, At the Marseilles convention the Confederation had, according to Temporary Secretary Luke, 294,398 members, but this increase of 91,000 is due to the so-called reform mions. Only the railway union, at the head of which is the right wing Jauresist Berard, increased from 24,000 to 43,000 a gain of 21,000. Next follows the union nce of the moderate Socialists Baly and Corday, and which joined the Coneration on the day following the bloody defeat at Ville Neuve. If we add the textile union with the Guesdist Renar at their head, which increased its ranks for this time with 7,000 members and which follows in general the same line of action as the foregoing unions and as the building trades syndicates, which increased from 4,600 in 1906 to 40,000 in 1908, i. e., an increase of 35,400; it will be evident that these four unions alone should have given an increase of 94.000 to the Confederation. But as the total crease is not over 91,000, it follows that the Confederation in two years of intense propaganda lost 3,000 members. At the same time the bourgeoisie had of remained idle. During the one year 1906, the numbers in employers' associaions increased from 268,000 to 315,271. gain of 18 per cent. A more rapid progress is shown by the class-conscious or ganization of capital in 1907. In the metallurgical, electrical, automobile, glass and chemical industries a series of trusts we're formed, almost embracing all the ational industries. The league of merchants and storekeepers alone, which was shortly formed to combat the Sunday rest idea, counts 100,000 members. To these well organized forces of capital th Confederation of Labor proposed to give battle with the small undisciplined and provisionless army, composing only twenty-seven per cent of France's workpopulation, (294,000 out of 11.000. 000), and only one-third of the organized labor of the land, the total of which

The revolutionary syndicalists, who during six years held noisy harangues about a general strike, understood the necessity of large and powerful organizations, when their attempt to call a general strike during the May agitation and the events at Draveil-Vigneux re sulted in complete defeat. These events conclusively proved that their practical influence upon organized labor was absolutely nill. Pouget, the real head of the as well in questions of anti-militarism revolutionary syndicalists, wrote at the end of June in the "Voice of the People": "Unfortunately, it must be acknowledged that if the idea of the general strike has made great theoretical gains in France, in practice we are behind even the Italian proletariat. The cause of this appears to be the state of illusion of the vorkers. To the practical syndicalist the lessons of the past have not been the errors of the past." Griffenthes, secre- participate in the international confertary of the Confederation, confessed to the editor of "L'Humanite" that the empty revolutionary phraseology scared away the laboring masses, especially in strike" should be deliberated. At Marthe provinces, and instilled distrust in sellles they were satisfied with the trade unions. He added that what was wanted was less noise and more orcanization work. Luke, the temporary ecretary of the Confederation, still more moderately: "What the pro letariat wants is real results, i. e., real eforms. And it has come to the conclu ion that for the realization and preser ration of such reforms strong organiza ions are absolutely necessary."

The same evolutionary experience ha een made by other "revolutionary" syndicates. They have lost the sarcastic and tack contemporary class-conscious prole tarian organizations of Western Europe As a result the majority of the trades mion established high membership dues Their contempt for the necessity of num crous and powerful syndicates has van shed and such hot heads as the secretary of the metal workers' union, Marrhein dvises the workers to carefully prepare for each strike and to survey the field of battle before hand. A few ultra-syn dicalists still pin their faith to "revolutionary manoeuvres." But from the de hates at Marseilles it is clearly seen how quickly the French proletariat is freeing tself from the guardianship of neo-syn dicalism.

In those debates no mention was ever made of a general strike. The responsi bility for the August 3rd events was by all present placed upon the government' shoulders, but if the whole administration of the Confederation hadn't at that moment been behind prison bars, the prehistoric" tactics of the "revolution ary" syndicalists would have been se erely condemned right there and then Latopy, another secretary of the metal workers' union and a good "revolutionary syndicalist, expressed himself thusly I would like to know whether we will ontinue to pass resolutions, which in the future we are unable to carry out or defend. . . I would that henceforth we shouldn't enter the battlefield for the leasure and vanity of a few leaders who themselves remain in the security of their homes." This arrow was intended for the theoreticians and a few of the remaining supporters of syndicalism.

The syndicalists had to beat a retreat, and of the international trades union secretariat. At Amiens the syndicalists voted for the ultra-revolutionary resolution of Yvetot, binding them to carry on a strong anti-military and "anti-patriotic" propaganda, and at Marseilles, Marrheim, the prime mover of this resolution brought forth another, in which there was not one word about "anti-militarism" or "anti-patriotism." At Amiens the Confederation of Labor resolved to ences of trades union secretaries only under the condition that the questions of "anti-militarism" and the "general moderate request?" the international secretariat to be required to put on the order of the day the question of call for the convention of the international trades unions.

It is true that the "revolutionary" syndicalists have as yet preserved their majority in the central organizations, but this is because of the exceptionally peculiar mode of representation at the conventions, where every section of the syndicate is in possession of just one vote, no matter what its numerical nagging tone, in which they used to at- strength may be. For instance, the produce union, numbering 3,000 members. had 39 votes at Marseilles, while the miners' union, with a membership of 30,000, had only 35 votes. The metal workers' union, with a membership of 14,000, had 111 votes, while the railway union, with more than 45,000 members, was in possession of only 70 votes. Therefore, the numerically weaker unions occupied in small production, were in fact the rulers of these conventions. This is the real reason of the practical neglect of the majority of organized labor to obey the resolutions passed at conventions by a fictitious majority of delegates. No wonder the "revolutionary" syndicalists oppose with might and main a more just and proportional representation in central organizations of the Confederation, for on the day of such realization, there will appear, at the head of those organizations pure and simple reformers instead of the as now reformers turned inside-out.

At Lyons, where the question of pro portional representation was first raised only five per cent. of the delegates pres ent were in favor of, such a; measure At Montpelier, this number rose to sixteen per cent.; at Bourges, twenty-six per cent.; and at Marseilles, thirty-four per cent., which, according to the minut est calculations, represent 160,000 workers out of the total 170,000 in the Confederation. In fact, even now the majority of the trades unions, those who consider themselves "revolutionary." do not in their practice differ from the reform-final solving of the great question of creation. How did the animals and plants, which inhabit our earth, come into the world? Whence did man him self, the most perfect of organic beings come from? As long as man has existed, attempts have been made to solve this question. First, the thesis of creation through a god was put forth, who nt teacher and popularizer of had designed a special plan of creation of deserve our attention, even if and executed it in an appropriate manhad designed a special plan of creation ner. Sometimes this god appears in the form of a poet, sometimes in the form of a mechanical engineer, who works with great skill and finally blows into achines the life-giving substance That peculiar myth of creation has also found its way into science, especially through Linneaus, who put forth the thesis that there are as many species of animals and plants as have been created by God. Even in antiquity it had been attempted to explain the earth by natural development. But these germs were suppressed through the diffusion of dualism, which was preached on one side by Plato, and on the other by Christianity. This dualism mained itself to the beginning of the enth century.

Lamarck was the first who fought this tion; he created the transforma tion theory. As the most important factors in this transformation process, he named adaptation and heredity. La-marck did not except man from this process. He recognized the natural unity of the great vertebrates and first presented the four classes: Fishes, am-phibians, birds, and mammals. At tha time already Lamarck said that through transformation man has become the highest mammal. This foundation pillar of our modern theory of evolution hattered the old myth of creation. But it was fought so energetically by ac-cepted authorities that it was pretty nearly forgotten. When fifty years later marck-Darwinian theory renders is the new, and was called in short "Darwin-

The apparent opposites between the failure of Lamarck and the great success of Darwin explain themselves through the brilliant progress which natural science has made, and also through the numerous discoveries on the field of physiology. Besides, Darwinism filled in the wide spaces which Lamarck had left !

Darwin advanced the theory of selec-tion, and solved the great riddle of the mechanical formation and adaptability of the organisms. He explained that na-It was his labors that presented a clear and harmonious world-picture. He gave the natural causes for the wonderful nomena of daily life, and he proved the omnipotence of natural laws in connction to the old mystic conception of a personal creator. What was long known in astronomy and geology he proved in natural science,

Lamarck and Darwin were self-educated men; by observing nature directly they arrived at their conclusions. Lamarck ascertained first the difference between the vertebrates and invertebrates. At the investigations of thou-sands of plants and animals he found that everywhere there existed internal relationship. He compared also the skeletons of old animals, and arrived at the conclusion that they must be ancestors of present-day organisms. But he was unable to force recognition of his himself the question: How have the remarkable changes in the numerous breeds of horses and pigeons been brought about? He recognized that organic life extended over more than a hundred million years, and he compared the excavated forms with the diminutive forms of to-day. He found certain similarities and therefore concluded that these ancient animals were akin to the types of to-day. Although Darwin never desired to be a philosopher, he was more of a philosopher than all those who call themselves so. He desired to keep to the empirical method and recognize only what he could prove by thousands of examples.

Darwin proceeded differently. On his ourney of exploration through South America, Darwin could, in strange regions, carry on extensive fourneys of study. After his return from this world frip, his work, 'The Origin of Species," appeared. Lamarck had tried the solution by the deductive processes'; Darwin used the inductive. Darwin for years studied transformation feer?

The most significant problem for him was the origin of man. Lamarck had already tried to answer this question by the transmission theory of descent from animal to man. Lamarek describes the remarkable path of this process of transformation. He also explains the reasoning powers, this highest activity of psychic phenomena. Darwin developed this further, but he feared the general prejudice against animal descent, although he first only hinted at it. This intimation appeared to the German translator so hazardous that he left it out entirely. But after Buechner and Voigt had come forward in Germany, Darwin's work on the descent of man and sexual selection appeared in 1871.

The great general importance of this anthropological work lies in the presentation of the origin of present forms from other forms. The soul is to Darwin not a supernatural thing which lives in the body and then leaves the same, but the sum total of brain activity. To avoid misunderstanding concerning the hated ape descent I would declare: It is absolutely certain that even the most man-like apes were not ancestors of men.

The principal point that concerned Darwin was undoubtedly the unity of the mammal species. All mammals have so many remarkable characteristic qualities in their bodily formations that no one any more doubts their common descent. None less than Goethe had already recognized that. Long has been the dispute as to how far Goethe should be regarded as a forerunner of Darwin. want. Straight and Truthful-

He was the first physiologist who put to | But this much is certain: That the form theory, as faid down by Goethe 120 years ago, is to be regarded as the immediate forerunner of Lamarck's and of Darwin's theory. Goethe likewise includes man in his development.

That clear monistic world conception is the basis on which Goethe's most beautiful creations rest. It is the atheistic religion as taught centuries ago by Giordano Bruno in Italy and Spinoza in Holland, and which to-day, through the empirical method, has been con-

Lamarck, Darwin and Goethe have in common deep and profound thoughts, tion which reigns throughout nature and which includes man was apparent to each of them. Through the recognition of this teaching we learn to understand what is spirit. We are freed from the errors and prejudices of the traditional dualistic world conception. Corpernicus destroyed the error that the earth was the center of the universe. Darwin destroyed the dogma that man is the predestined center of life inon earth. After the stormy applause subsided

Haeckel again took the floor to tell his own role in the battle for the acceptance of Darwinism. His parting words were: "A day before yesterday, when I delivered my last academic lecture, so much affection and gratitude on the part of my pupils was bestowed upon me that I can only say my modest services are by far overestimated. I am only one of the epigones who has followed in the footsteps of our great heroes, Goethe, Lamarck and Darwin, and in the half century of my activity as a natural scientist I have presented to my students that which I recognized as true. I know that, as a human being, I am liable to errors, but when to-day I look back over this long period of a fastidious and combative life, I can close with a certain satisfaction. The fundamental thoughts of our leaders are, by the latest investigations, raised to such soundness that they, I believe, can never be destroyed.-From the German, for The

The times of that superstition which uted revolutions to the ill-will of few agitators have long passed away. eryone knows nowadays that wher ever there is a revolutionary convuln, there must be some social want the background, which is prevented, by out-worn institutions, from satisfyitself. The want may not yet be felt as strongly, as generally, as might ure immediate success; but every empt at forcible repression will only ring it forth stronger and stronger ntil it bursts its fetters.

THE PARISIAN POSTAL STRIKE.

European exchanges, freshly arrived. are all full of information upon the recent strike of the Parisian Postal employes. The one that summarizes the completest is the Berlin "Vorwaerts" in a letter of its correspondent m Paris. The letter will be found in nglish in this issue. Indeed, it was an

This notwithstanding, promotions and other good things had been falling re under the influence of the iticings in the parliament. It is not merely by reason of these fea ures that the Parisian Postal strike s rank as an event. It assume on of two terms that it gave birth, rather, prominence to—and both of lich illumine its essence.

The two terms are-la Republique secule (the Trades Union, or the ally Organized Republic) and its folds a Govern-

Such a State is an industrial Republic, a Republique Syndicale. The obverse of this spells the overthrow of the existing and opposite composition of government implied in term Political Government, or Political State, and referred to contemptuously luring the Parisian strike as the Etat Patron. The two terms ring with the well-tuned treble of Revolution.

No wonder the Parisian Postal strike is electrifying the European Socialist Movement. May it also electrify the American-with shame for its backwardness, with ardor to leap to the leading place that its opportunities devolve upon it the duty to assume.

A PAINTING ON THE TARIFF.

The sentimental free trade Democrats in Congress-there are sentimentalists even among capitalist politicians-who are grieving beyond measure at the defections from the ranks of their party in favor of a protective tariff for some in dustry or other in their own districts, should study a certain picture, copies of which are frequently seen,-and also look behind" the picture, study all that the picture tells.

It is a great picture. It represents Bismarck, the "Iron Chancellor" dictating at Versailles the conditions for peace with France to the French Commissioners Jules Favre and Adolfe Thiers. The Chancellor looks all iron. Favre leans with dismay towards Thiers. Thiers himself seems crushed, buried in a large arm-chair. But that is only one side of the picture.

Now let us look behind the picture and around it. Adolfe Thiers, together with his par ticular coterie, was interested in the textile industries located in the North of France. The textile industries located in Elsass and Lorraine were serious competitors with their northern France fel low weaving concerns. In the competition the one cut the other's throat. The competition hurt the pockets of Thiers and his coterie. The "Iron Chancellor" demanded the annexation to Germany of the very districts that were crowding the Thiers textile concerns. Was this a blow to crush Thiers? Not at all. The Thiers, buried in the large arm-chair in the picture, and looking far away, was figuring mentally what a boon the Iron Chancellor's demand was to him and his coterie. With the textile industries of Elsass and Lorraine under a foreign flag they ceased to be competitors with the Thiers establishment. The tariff wall could be raised against them. Done!and big were the profits derived by the

There is no such thing as principle; there is no such thing as patriotism to the level-headed capitalist and his politicians. The Thiers factories' stock shot up. That was worth the dismemberment of France to him. The "sublime principle" of free exchange can go to the dogs at any moment if the free trader has an industry from which a tariff promises to draw larger revenues. The "patriotic principle" of protection vanishes like vapor at any moment if the protectionist is interested in an industry from which free trade promises to yield bim a larger swag.

Thiersites.

The picture in question should be studied-likewise the economics that hang thereby.

TAKING VAN CLEAVE AT HIS WORD

A more indignant man there would not be in forty states than Mr. J. W. Van Cleave, of Buck Stove notoriety, were the workers to take him at his word.

While busy in New Orleans on the 30th of last month directing industry in his St. Louis shops by telepathy, Van Cleave paused a moment to say:

"The workers of the country, have o more right than has capital to put a premium on dishonesty and a penalty on energy."

"No more right than capital"? How nuch right then has capital, in this particular direction?

First, as to putting a premium on dishonesty.

To take but one out of fifty instance evealed in the present tariff debate in Congress, a Mr. Rogers, president of four umber companies which between them monopolize the lumber trade of North Dakota, came before the Ways and Means Committee of the House while it was in session on the tariff bill before the opening of Congress, and begged for a eduction in the duty on lumber, on the plea that the consumer would reap the enefit thereof. On the 27th, three days pefore Van Cleave oped his mouth in New Orleans, this Rogers was shown or the floor of the House to be buying lumper at from $5 to $8 per thousand les han he was a year and a half ago, and to e selling it at exactly the same price Rather like putting a premium on dishonesty, is it not?

And now as to the penalty on energy The recent survey of the Pittsburg in dustrial field revealed how the steel workers were jacked up to ever ligher speed and overwork. A certain month is et aside for a record. Every known obstacle is removed. Every pound of steam is crowded on, day and night, week in week out, for the month. The new ecord is attained, let the cost be what it may to the men. Then the word is past around that what they did that nonth they are expected to do every month, or else-discharge. And so . it goes till time for another "record month" omes round. Something like putting a enalty on energy, this is, is it not?

Evidently, if the workers were to take an Cleave at his word, and assume it s their right to reward dishonesty and penálize energy "as much as capital loes," Mr. Van Cleave and his crew would alk platitudes on the other side of their aces. However, the worthies need have no fear. Labor will leave to them the rewarding of dishonesty and the punishng of industry-until it gets ready to sweep them and their practices into the unprecedented blizzard that thwarted all the displayful plans for the inauguration ceremonies at Washington immediately resulted in a crop of prolooking to the prevention of similar disappointments in the future to revellers in ostentation and parade. While this strain for "improvement" is pulsat-Law and Order." Especially loud was ing strongly, the Constitution is being deliberately violated and thereby amended in a vital respect and in unconstitutional manner, and yet not a whisper is heard in opposition.

The Constitution provides that "all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives. There was, there is a reason for this The conformation of the Senate is essentially un-democratic. Its history: the reason for its existence; the length, aye, the continuity of its life-all combine to remove the Senate from close contact with the people. For these reasons that body was not held the proper one to be vested with the power to originate hills for raising revenue. The power was vested deliberately in the House, the branch of two short years' life, hence presumably in direct touch with and directly amenable to the tax payer, from whose pockets the revenue was to come. Of course, the Senate being a part of Congress, the legislative body, it was given a say in such matters. While vesting in the House the power to originate revenue bills, the Constitution allowed the Senate "to propose or concur with amendments" on these, "a on other bills." Obviously, the act of "amending" by wholly recasting is another thing. It is this very thing that the Senate is now doing with the Tariff inate, has not yet (April 8) passed the new tariff bill. It is discussing the schedules. How the bill will come out of the House no one does, or can know. This notwithstanding, with no bill passed by the House and now before it for consideration and possible "amendment," the Senate Finance Committee is holding sessions, giving private hearings to representatives of private interests, and drafting a new bill, which Standard Oil father-in-law, Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, calmly, coolly, yet most revolutionarily, announces "will be ready by the time the House has passed its bill."

In form the Constitution exists: it essence it exists no longer. Whatever is unessential about it is revered with the suspicious reverence that bigots, who violate every law divine and human, ever bestow upon the outside of the platter. An amendment of so unessential a thing as Inauguration Day is to be gone about reverently in constitutional manner. An amendment tha centers legislative power in the few members of a committee of one branch of Congress-and that branch the Senate-upon so vital a thing as the raising of revenue, and which thereby effects a revolution-such an amendment is adopted de facto, by practice, roughshoddedly.

THE PANIC IN GERMANY.

In Spite of It, Capitalists Make Eleven Per Cent. "Profits."

Berlin April 9 .- Taking the returns of the joint stock companies of Germany on the results of their business during 1908 as the best available data to sum up the economic movement in the empire, and measure the extent to which it has been affected by the crisis at the close of 1907, it is seen that the German capitalist class made big dividends in spite of the crash.

The annual reports of these companies are collected by the central registry office in Berlin, which has issued a statistical summary, covering the business done by 4.731 corporations. These latter have furnished complete statements on the profit or oss of the year's transactions. A considerable number of other companies

There is no great economic subjectwhether financial, tariff or otherwis that comes up in Congress without its acting like a plow, throwing up untold conomic issues. It is so again with the tariff now under discussion in Congress. The People has, since the discussion arose, considered a number of these issues-indeed, the only practical benefit to be derived by the Socialist Movement from the consideration of the laws proposed by capitalism. Among these spe cial economic issues, or points, on which much . confusion exists . and clearness should prevail, is that of "salaries" and "wages."

The tariff reformers in Congress, together with their echoes or sprompters out of Congress, ever join the words "salaries" and "wages," using them as invertible terms. It is the burden of the tariff reformer's song that the "receivers of salaries and wages" are the consumers most deeply interested in a low tariff. It is quite certain that many a one who uses such a phrase knows he is juggling with words. It is equally certain, however, that many more do not The cultivated ignorance in the capitalist class is extensive and deep enough to free many of its loudest shouters of the stigma of deliberate deception.

"Salary" is one thing; "wages" another. The salary-receiver belongs under a category that is radically different from the category under which the wagereceiver belongs.

There may be small salary-receivers. while there are large salary-receivers, re cciving as large as $25,000, $50,000, $100,000. On the other hand, wages may be more or less, but never rise above a certain maximum, which, under the bes circumstances, is small. The crass differonce in the sizes of possible salaries and of possible wage points to the radical cause of the difference between their respective receivers.

The salary-receiver does not collect his price; the wage receiver does. The salary collected by the salary-receiver is not determined in a market-it is determined by "pull." The wages collected by the wage-receiver is determined in a market-the labor market. In other words, the salary-receiver is not a merchandise; the wage-receiver is.

The economic conclusions that follow from this difference, in so far as they bear upon the tariff, are weighty:-

Seeing that the salary-receiver is not merchandise, bought and sold in any market, and that "pull" is the determining factor in his carnings, it follows that the lower the price of his necessaries of life, the larger must be the amount left over for him to expend in other directions; and, contrariwise, the higher the price of his necessaries of life, all the less can he preserve for other burposes.

Seeing, on the other hand, that the vage-receiver is a merchandise, bought nd sold in a market, it follows that his wages are his price in the market. Price is determined by supply and demand. Seeing that the supply and the demand for him is the determining factor of his earnings, it follows that, let the price of his necessaries of life be high or low it does not determine his affluence. Be prices high as they may, if the supply a premature explosion of dynamite in of the wage-receiver in the labor market mine No. 37 of the Berwind-White falls below the demand, then (unless the Coal Company, one-half mile from here, capitalist class is sufficiently organized o bayonet or club him into working cheaply, as is done now in Congo and ered and, according to the mine inspec- often among us in rural districts.)—then as they may, if the supply of the wage receiver is above the demand, down will go his earnings. And vice versa.

Obviously, it is juggling with words to bracket "salaries" and "wages," and declare the two suffer equally from a high tariff, and are equally relieved by a low one. The jugglery with the two terms, now going on in Congress is a favorite one, apart from tariff discussions, with the class of railroad and other Directors and capitalist magnates. Intent upon blurring the class lines, and thereby spreading confusion, these gentlemen are frequently heard, on the one hand, calling themselves "wage earners" and their $20,000-$50,000 and even higher salaries "wages," and, on the other hand, calling the wages of their proletarian clerks "salaries." "Salaries" are that portion of wealth plundered from Labor, that the plunderer bestows upon himself and his menial plunderers for the purpose of reducing, on paper, the amount of the actual plunder, making it appear not quite as large as it actually is, and at the same time decorating himself and his subaltern beneficiaries with a bogus badge of useful service. "Wages" are the price that the wage earner collects for his merchandise labor power, in the labor market, where he is old and bought for a pittance of his own product.

DANISH ELECTIONS

-Woman Suffrage, Contrary to "N. Y. Call's" Claims, Did Not Aid So-

By Axel Staal, Jersey City Heights. The municipal elections held or

March 12, 1909, gave the Danish women their first opportunity to vote. The year previous a measure was passed by both legislative houses giving all unmarried women over twentyfive years of age and the married women of the same age, whose husbands were assessed as carning an income of 1,000 kr. ($275), the right to vote and to be candidates at municipal elections. It was also decreed that the basis of representation of the different parties should be decided according to the proportion of votes received by the parties.

The elections took place, and a couple of days later the press despatches announced that seven women were elected in Copenhagen. Nothing further appeared until I saw the following report in "The N. Y. Call" of March 25:

VICTORY IN DENMARK.

Women Voters Help Socialists Increase Strength in Copenhagen. (Special to The Call.)

Copenhagen, March 25 .- The results of the recent municipal election here have shown that the main effect of giving women the ballot has been to in- , is all undone again. A Revolution, our cruse the strength of the Socialists in the City Council.

There were a number of women cardidates and several of them were elected. The Council now stands as follower 20 Socialists 2 of them women: 16 Conservatives, 2 of them women 5 Radicals, 2 of them women; and one Independent woman member.

While the figures given in this report are correct, there is no truth in the comment on them. The Socialists of Copenhagen lost the majority that they had for twelve years in the City Coun-

I just received newspapers from Denmark, and they all state that the Socialists are now put, for four years at least, in the minority, and that the Socialist leader Borgbjerg's words: "We will have the Red Flag waving over Copenhagen City Hall." will have to wait for their fulfilment four years, if not more.

Before election the representation was: 20 pure Socialists, 15 Radicals, elected on the Socialist ticket, or to put it into "Americanes," S. P. tainted, and 7 Anti-Socialists. Only two tickets were in the field on election day, the Socialist and the Anti-Socialist.

Now the figures are: 20 pure Socialists, 5 Radicals, who are elected on their own ticket; 16 Conservatives, and 1 Prohibitionist. Four tickets were in the field: 20 Socialist against 22 Anti-Socialists (adlied bourgeois tickets), is the result. Not a very notable victory at all

Did the principles of Socialism suffer a defeat? No. The Socialists did not lose their former supporters, and they have still twenty men to represent them in the Council.

The new votes, the votes of the women, turned this election. Where formerly the Socialists, with only two tickets in the field, obtained a clear majority, they now did not now obtain a majority, despite the fact that the capitalists split up into three factions. which might have made votes for one of the tickets unproductive of result owing to proportional representation, If this system had not been the legal one, the capitalists; with their three tickets combined, could have taken every seat in the Council. They polled 00,474 votes against 44,845 for the Socialists What a "victory" that would have been! The women turned out in full force.

In the election districts the increase in voters varied from 89 to 112 per cent. All over the country the results were disastrous to Socialist representation. In about 100 minor cities, of which I have news, only one remains in control of Socialists, while formerly half a dozen or more were clearly ours. More "victory." On March 29 I visited "The Call" office to find out what correspondent furnished them with their news. From one of the editors I learned that the "Special to The Call" was simply taken rom the Berlin "Vorwaerts." The Chicago Daily Socialist also had some news of this "victory." I then laid another little clipping before Mr. Smith, but he informed me that this clipping belonged to Mrs. Stokes department. Ward. Whitmore has been a "Socialist" for ten months. Previously he was a life long Republican, but he changed his politics because he saw the evils of "Standard Oil boodle" and of rebate evils. Certainly a grand conception of Socialism. But, then, the S. P. cares not for that. As long as Whitmore proves a vote puller, he's the man.

W. D. HAYWOOD IN 'FRISCO.

To the Daily and Weekly People:-W. D. Haywood, erstwhile hero of Boise jail, came into California with the famfare of trumpets and the clash of cymbals that were manipulated by the Socialist party under whose crazy quilt banner he marched. But even martyrs must drink and eat like the unexalted. So it came to pass that this suffering saint received one-half the net proceeds of each meeting. This be assured, most gentle reader, was no mere pittance, since at some meetings he received as high as $75, and there were days when he delivered more than one lecture.

But we waited for the prophet of the mines, eager to hear the message that he spoke.

And he came, this fat prophet with the heavy jowls, and at Dreamland rink he delivered his message. By the by, this modern messiah's harp has but few strings, and he plays but one monotonou. tune thereon. What this is has already been adequately described and dissected in previous issues of The People.

But while the great throng waited the oming of the great man, many minor lights harangued the audience. One of them made an effective plea for funds that should go to Preston and Smith. The result was $118. When W. D. Haywood heard of this, he, to his everlasting shame, protested with violent virulence against the sending of this money and insolently laid claim to it on the ground that everything collected at his meetings belonged to him. But even for the hybrid vote mongering S. P. this was too much, and he was turned down. To mollify him, however, a Haywood Social Club was organized which on one night raised $45 for their pedestaled hero. To do so the entire membership had to surrender themselves to the drink demon And right nobly these altruists performed their sacrifice.

It is whispered with irritating reiteration that W. D. Haywood has himself made a pact with this demon. It is said that at various bookings he failed to put in appearance because he could not resist the lure of the bottle. From San Luis Obisco comes the story that the sheriff went into the Socialist party headquarters there and informed the members present: "Your man is down town drunk. I don't want him. Go get him." This they did and put him to bed. After Haywood's lecture in San Francisco, a flirtation began between him and P. H. McCarthy, president of the local Building Trades Council, and Johansen, author of the "Spirit of Labor," and the recipient of a $6 a day plum from Building Trades Council clique, McCarthy wanted the martyr to speak for the B. T. C. But Bill was coy and wanted to know what was "in it." And now, patient reader, mark me well. At the next meeting of the B. T. C. a "Socialist" admirer of Haywood made a motion to give him $25 for a lecture. An amendment was made by Tvietmore, Secretary of B. T. C. Tvietmore who made false affidavits to have one Paulson, a Socialist, deported as an anarchist because he had made a motion in the Cement Workers' Union to give $500 to the Moyer, Haywood, and Pettibone defense while these men were being tried. Now this same Tvietmore slips Haywood $100 for a single lecture. But he carned his "thirty pieces of silver," did Haywood. In his address he made a virulent attack on those "ugly ape faced Japs who sit in San Francisco's school rooms polluting the morals of little girls." He wound up his tirade by declaring that "the only man worse than a Jap was the fellow who hired him.' At the close of this splendid effort, P. H. McCarthy, arch labor fakir of the Pacific Coast called for three cheers for Bill Haywood and they were given with spirit

After the meeting the leading labor fakirs took Haywood into a waiting auto, touring the all-night resorts and absorbing astonishing quantities of liquor. Political plans were laid for the sheet, "The Daily News." This paper in future. Just what these plans are it is difficult to ascertain, though I am reliably informed that Haywood will come back in the fall to speak for the Union Eighth Ward; Henry M. Silverberg, Labor party at the municipal elections.

Haywood also spoke before the Labor Council at the behest of Gallagher, Benham, Fureseth, Casey and McArthurlabor fakirs everyone of them. The last Wards, the Republican candidates have named gentleman said at one time that withdrawn from the race. AT THE "CALL" FAIR.

To the Daily and Weekly People:-Dropping in at the "Call" fair Thursday night my first impression was that I had "got in the wrong pew." The place looked more like a food exhibit than a Socialist fair. I brought away a stack of "Socialist" literature that tells why this flour, that milk, a certain brand of codfish, biscuits, paper patterns, suspenders, etc., etc., should be either eaten or worn, Among these is a card with needles.

A correspondence school prospectus tells how any one may lift himself by the boot-straps by taking their course One of the testimonials relates how one of their students won a hundred dollar prize in an advertising contest, There were 12,000 contestants. When the student "graduates" he probably finds it as easy to get a job as the 11,999 other contestants did to get a prize

The craft unionists were handing out booklets:, "What They Think of Trade Unions"; the "They" including a cardinal and an Episcopal Bishop; utterances from Wendell Phillips, and Lincoln, also quoted, look strangely out of place in the collection. Another union leastet recommends arbitration agreements

Other features of the fair smacked the dime museum. The private inerests of the S. P. press also asserted themselves, as is natural; the Wilshire booth competing with the Call boots A voting contest showed Spargo and Hilquit, the "historian," neck and neck, with some forty odd votes, as the favorite writer; the "brilliant editor" of the Call having but seven votes. In another contest one vote was cast for John D. Rockefeller. The attendant said that at last year's fair Roosevelt polled quite a number of votes-he did not but might have added that those votes went last year for Taft.

The crowd was at no time large and money was tight. The girls importuned in vain. One nearly wept as she asked me to buy a pamphlet, the sales of which were the "only means of support" of somebody. The entertainment consisted of a stunt by three ilg dancers. Their antics and solemi faces reminded one of amateur night at a cheap theatre. When they sang the booth barkers drowned them out completely.

The "alte genossen" were conspicuous by their absence.

ECONOMIC EQUALS.

Only Upon Them Can a True Society Be Based.

There can be no true society except that of economic equals. You cannot have either social or political equality in any true sense until you recognize that no individual-whatever function he or she may fulfill or whatever position he or she may occupy-can ever be more than an average unit of human society. "A man's a man for a' that."

The earth and instruments of labor are means of production to the workers, because by operating on and with these things they produce all the world's wealth and perform all the cessary service, production to the capitalists-because they, the industrious men, go out on they produce nothing. In their case the earth and tools of production are means of robbery, euphoniously termed rent, interest and profit, dividends, reward of abstinence, compensation for risk, reward of foresight, and wages of ability. To this class these are means of appropriation, of exploitation, of robbery-in short, Capital.

In exceptional cases where a capitalist takes part in the necessary labor, his work reckons no more than a unit of average social labor.

The man who thinks he has a right to a higher standard of living than his fellows in a society where wealth is cellectively produced, should be treated with contempt.-Sydney, Australia, "People."

HOW SUPER, KIRSCHENHEIMER "REDUCED EXPENSES."

A Story Which Has Set the Workmer of the New York Butchers' Dressed Meat Co. A-Talking and A-Thinking -Jesuit Tactics Not in It with This Modern Slave Driver.

A story of up-to-date methods in wage-cutting which has just leaked out around the New York Butchers' Dressed Meat Company's plant, at 39th street and Eleventh avenue, has set all the more enlightened of the workmen there a-talking. The fact that it all happened some time ago does not detract from the interest the story has caused, and although the workmen talk of it in whispers, lest they be overheard and "sacked," yet they do talk. Which is a healthy sign. A young superintendent named Kirschenhelmer is the hero of the tale; and no enviable reputation it has created for him among the men who know what's what. When Kirschenheimer came to the big meat works something over a year ago, he found the dressers in a certain department getting thirteen cents per carcass on the beeves cut up. The floormen, who work along with the dressers, were getting nine cents per carcass for another part of the butchering process. This made twenty-two cents paid per hoof in Kirschenheimer's department. and those odd two cents loomed big as Standard Oil fines in the eyes of the directors of the firm.

Word was past along to Kirsche helmer to cut off those two cents. He felt around among the dressers and the floormen, and concluded that any direct attempt to cut them was dangerous. They might strike. The dressers especially vowed they would stand for no wage reduction. The more Kirschenheimer studied over the problem, the bigger those two cents got to look, until at last he decided that just to show how good a super. he was, and make himsell solid with the company, he would get them off, anyhow, and two more to keep them company. This is how he worked it:

First he went to the floormen with a spiel like this: "You poor floormen, I've watched you work, and seen what a hard time you have of it, while those lazy dressers who don't work half as hard as you, get four cents more on a carcass. I'll tell you" (as if a sudden idea had struck him), "I'll tell you-You ought to be getting the thirteen cents in this department, not they. So I'll raise you, all the way from nine to thirteen, and to keep my figures even, I'll cut the dressers from their thirteen down to nine."

The floormen, flattered at the attention shown them, and not quick enough to see what lay behind it, were willing. They got raised, the dressers got cut in the same ratio, and the dressers struck. But this strike did not bother Kirsch enheimer a bit. Alone, the dressers could never win. With the aid of the floormen, victory for them would have been certain. But now he had both sets pitted against each other in a way that made co-operation impossible. The floormen were not going out on four cents. Besides, hadn't the super. told them they were industrious, while But these things are not means of the dressers were lazy? Why should strike to support the lazy ones on whom the cut that had just fallen was no more than a just punishment for their evil ways!

So the strike was lost, as any one with half an eye could see that it wouldbe. The scabs who came in to take the dressers' places received the nincent rate their predecessors had struck against, and the work was resumed.

But Kirschenheimer's expenses were still twenty-two cents per beef, you will say. Ah, but Kirschenheimer had not yet played his last card. Now watch. No sooner was the strike thoroughly crushed, and the scabs well broken in, working as well as the previous dressers had been, and receiving, mark you, the nine cent rate-than what does Mr. Super, do, but-Cut the floormen! Back to their original nine cents he cut them. They, good craft-minded wage slaves, still "had no grievance"! Were they not as well off as before the manoeuvring commenced? The raise, it was the super's. The super. gave, and he took away, that was all. They had nothing to grumble about. They stayed docilely at work at their old nine cent rate.

And now behold Super. Kirschenheimer getting his slaughtering and dressing done for eighteen cents per neef, the rebellious dressers ousted sound Socialist literature.

A. J., LOUISVILLE, KY.-The coming of the middle class into the political Movement of Socialism surely exposes the Movement to middle class influences. The same danger exists in the coming of smoked out middle class men into the economic Movement. The danger is to be counteracted only by strict adherance to the class interests of the proletariat. The entrance of middle class elements into the two Movements is desirable inasmuch as it helps proletarianize larger numbers of the ropulation, and indoctrinate them with Socialism

D. B. M., GRANITE, OKLA. "Variable capital". is the name by which Marx designates that portion of the invested capital which is represented by labor-power. "Constant capital"\ is the name by which he designates that portion of the invested capital which is represented by the instruments of production, raw and auxiliary material. The latter is called "constant capital" because it ONLY transfers its OWN value to the new commodity made out of it, and mparts no new value-hence "constant." The former is called "variable capital" because it not only transfers its own value to the commodity which it turns out, but may add to the value according to the variably increased time that it operates-hence "variable." For instance, the value of a balc-of cloth, valued, say, at $1,000 is made up of the value of the raw material consumed and of the wear and tear of the machinery employed (constant capital) + the value of the laborpower paid for (variable capital) + the additional, or surplus, value fmparted by labor-power and not paid for. The distinction is not a fine spun one. Its importance lies:

First, in that it brings out the fact hat the workingman is plundered today, not only of the surplus value that he produces, but he is also plundered of the reward for the service he renders in preserving for the capitalist the value of the machinery, etc., which the labor process transfers to the goods produced. Machinery, etc., not n operation depreciates. The depreclated value evaporates.

Secondly, in that it explains the reason why, in cases of sudden declines in prices speculators prefer for their speculative ventures material on which the less labor has been spent-cured leather rather than shoes, varn rather then cloth etc. The more numerous the labor-processes the larger the element of the "variable capital," the less certain the result.

Kirschenheimer owes his presence in this country, it is commonly reported around the slaughter house, to partner Sulzberger, of the east side packing house. While on a trip to Germany Sulzberger got his eye on Kirschenheimer, and sizing him up as a good slave driver, advised him to come over. Apparently his protege is living up to the hopes entertained for him.

The members of Section Bridgeport, Conn., are to donate a half a day's pay as a May Day offering, to the Party's publishing establishment. Many of our friends may not be in a position to do the same, but there is a way in which they can help make May Day. 1909, a red letter day in the history of the Movement, and that is by each one securing a new reader to the Weekly People. Can you think of a better way of celebrating the Day than by extending the propaganda of the Movement to which alone the Day has significance? Begin the work right now and see how many new readers you can get.

Up to Saturday, April 10, we received orders for 7,150 extra copies of the May Day issue of the Weekly People. Don't delay in sending orders for this special issue.

> I found Jennie O'Hara, . living in Wood's Run, Allegheny, working in a stogy factory. She had never worked elsewhere. Jennie, who is now sixteen years of age, began to work before her thirteenth birthday, which was then the lowest legal limit. Her working day was from 7 a, m, to 6 p, m, with a scant half hour for luncheon. During the Christmas rush she worked overtim intil 8 p. m. three days in the week several consecutive weeks. As to her employment certificate she said: "The squire was a friend of my mother so she didn't have to pay for my certificate nor ewear to it." Said Jennie: "Some girls have to stop in three months, just when they are learning. The stuff makes 'em sick. The girls often faint. In the winter when the windows are shut it's bad when you go in. It smells so bad. But then you get used to it." Jennie is con-

Azef, the Russian Spy, Makes Further Revelations.

The beginnings of the Russian revelution date back some thirty or forty years; but up to the eve of this twentieth century the malcontents were mostly students, who had no fellowing in the country. Their efforts, therefore, were always shattered, and the enemies of the Czar ended their days in exile and in fortress dungeons.

The new century, however, ushered in a new era. Formerly Russian soclety had consisted mainly of peasants, landowners, and trades people. Industrial workers there were none to speak of. But, as factories were springing up mushroom-like all over the country, the peasants were attracted to come to the cities, and rapidly an entirely new class of skilled and unskilled factory labor.

The transplantation from one scene to another had an unsettling effect upon the stolld sons of moujiks, and a feeling of discontent spread generally amongst them.

Thus, at the period I am writing about, Russia was in a state of great fermentation. Workmen-and even factory girls-began to grumble openly, asking for better economic conditions, political freedom, using terms of which, a few years ago, they had scarcely known the meaning.

Thus people regarded the revolutionists like prophets sent from heaven to preach them a new gospel of freedom and happiness.

While the revolutionists were thus active, enrolling new members into their party everywhere, the secret police organized a movement to counteract those effects,

For pure callousness, I think, there is nothing equal in the world to the methods they employed.

Under the direction of General Trepoff, the notorious tyrant, and of de Pleave, Minister of the Interior, police agents were sent into every town of Russia, with orders to found revolution trade unions, and to incite the workmen to strike for higher ways.

Now, according to Russian law, every striker is liable to five years' exile in Siberia.

The agents met with enormous suc ess, and, to the amszement of everybody-even of the revolutionistsstrikes soon broke out everywhere The capitalists were in a state of consternation, and sent urgent appeals to de Plehve, who promised stern measures. Yet, by the Minister's orders the strikes continued merrily. The ordinary police, of course, knew nothing of this ministerial plot, and made hun dreds of arrests, capturing also a number of "leaders"-the secret police

By orders from St. Petersburg all those "leaders" were sent to Mosco and there set free! The ordinary police were stupefied by such tactics, but dared say nothing.

But, if the "leaders" were pardoned the workmen who had followed their advice were less leniently dealt with. In a single year 15,000 strikers were sent to prison and to Siberia.

Of all those agent-provocateurs Father Gapon was one of the most successful ones amidst the workers of St. Petersburg. Under the cloak of religion and cant, he ruined the homes of the poorest, and gave his blessings to the orphans and widows.

In the guise of the "friend of the people," he had, in the instance of a single family, induced the husband to participate in a strike, and caused his arrest. A few days later he went to console the grief-stricken wife, and before leaving, mixed some Socialistic pamphlets amongst the odds and ends lying about in the workmen's dwell-

On the same night the police searched the place, found the pamphlets, and arrested the eldest son, a lad of eighteen. Again the reverend father paid a visit. This time the family was in utter destitution, the two bread-winners being in prison. Gapon left some alms. Again and again he brought scraps of food and bits of clothing to the widow and the little orphans, and gained great popularity amongst the poor of the neighborhood. The widow, with her mites, followed during the four years to the next elechim later on to the Winter Palace on tion, to make enough converts to place Red Sunday, with thousands of other poor people, and, a victim of the carthe necessary number of Socialists in the Council, the number that will fully nage organized by Gapon, and the police, she was, with many other victims, thrown into the River Nevs, and swept to the ocean by the icy cirrents.-London Answers.
