

MY VOICE MAY NOT BE STRONG ENOUGH

By Horace Traubel. My voice may not be strong enough to lift itself clear of the crowd. But my voice may be strong enough to strengthen the voice of the crowd. And the one else may hear my voice I may hear my voice myself.

PARTY NEWS

(Continued from page 3.) of the S. L. P. put several holes in the idealistic presentation of the question. Sterling in reply stated he believed that Socialism was a dream born of injustice and that the trade union action would be compelled to take political action and that it would proceed to abolish all monopoly.

National Platform of the Socialist Party

The Socialist Party, in convention assembled, makes its appeal to the American people by presenting as its program the idea of liberty and self-government, which has been born in the only political movement standing for the program and principles by which the liberty and self-government of the people is the only political organization that is democratic, and that has for its purpose the securing of the rights of the people.

By controlling all the sources of social revenue, the possessing class is able to control the political and social life of the nation. The Socialists are therefore for the total abolition of the private ownership of the means of production.

AMERICA'S ONLY HOPE

The one strong American middle class has dwindled to a fading splinter at the feet of monopoly, and the Democratic party, which once stood for this middle class, is now but a shallow seiche of fraud, making its treachery to the people behind halting and hobbling combinations of empty words.

IN GREAT CITIES

Wherever there are great cities, with lordly buildings and massive domes, and towering spires, arrogantly flaunting man's omniscience even to the skies, be assured that, at the base of the domes and in the shadow of the spires, there crouch poor hungry mortals.

The Socialists are for the total abolition of the private ownership of the means of production, and for the substitution of the public ownership of the means of production, and for the substitution of the public ownership of the means of production.
