MANDELA ILL: ANGER GROWS

WINNIE MANDELA is 'frantic with worry' about the health of her husband, Nelson Mandela, who was taken from his prison cell to a Cape Town hospital this week.

She is 'not satisfied' with a statement by the prison authorities that the jailed nationalist leader was seen by a specialist and then taken back to Pollsmoor Prison.

Lawyers will make an urgent application on Monday for Mrs Mandela and family doctors to see Mandela, 67, who has spent more than 20 years in prison on frame-up treason charges.

Angry concern about Mandela's condition coincided with a warning from the opposition United Democratic Front (UDF) that it expected to be banned shortly.

'Banning the UDF would be tantamount to declaring war on our people and their organisations,' the statement said.

The 2 million-strong UDF is a multi-racial organisation founded almost two years ago by the Rev Allan Boesak who was arrested and jailed last week under the State of Emergency.

It is an umbrella for almost 600 organisations representing trade union, community, church and anti-apartheid bodies.

The Botha regime yesterday ordered the indefinite shutdown of some 500 schools for 'coloured' students in the western Cape Province.

Officials said about 350,000 'coloured' students would be affected by the closure of Cape schools. The regime has not bothered to shut black schools since most of them have been empty for weeks because of a schools strike.

The school shutdown follows rising unrest among the 'coloured' youth who have taken to the streets to demand the release of Boesak, who is a Cape 'coloured', and a lifting of the ban on the Congress of South African Students (COSAS).

Thirty people were killed by police last week when a planned march in Cape Town to demand the release of Mandela was brutally broken up by soldiers and armed police.

BY ALEX MITCHELL

On Wednesday 'coloured' youth invaded the Cape Town's whites-only suburb of Windsor Park throwing rocks and petrol bombs. Yesterday two houses in the white suburb of Amalinda in Port Elizabeth were petrol-bombed.

Panic-stricken whites are now stocking up with weapons and ammunition against the relentless advance of the African revolution.

Gunshops report a roaring trade while security firms are taking on staff, giving them arms-training and hiring them to white-owned businesses at fabulous rates.

There are 13 million weapons legally held by the white population which is almost three guns for each man, woman and child in the white population.

Adrian Vlok, deputy Minister for Law and Order, warned this week that the South African security forces could not be responsible for the security of every South African at all times.

Opening a conference of the Security Association of South Africa, he urged South Africans to take on the responsibility to look after themselves.

A security exhibition featured guns, special razor-edged wire, helmets with visors, bullet-proof vests and gas canisters.

A metallic baton called a 'Persuader', sold in nine or 39-inch models, was accompanied by a leaflet which said: 'Selling at sensible prices, the Persuaders are machined from high tensile aircraft aluminium and can be filled with sand or lead for extra effect.'

Meanwhile two top Pretoria businessmen will lead a delegation to Lusaka, the capital of Zambia, to meet leaders of Mandela's banned African National Congress.

The move coincides with frantic efforts by the racist regime to stall a US Congress move to impose sanctions next week.

In an interview in California President Reagan refused to say whether he would sign the sanctions legislation or veto it.

POUND FALLS

THE POUND plunged more than four cents against the US dollar yesterday in what foreign exchange dealers described as 'a totally disorderly market'.

The pound, which closed the previous night at $1.3680, fell to $1.3260. A week ago it was fixed at $1.40.

Dealers said sterling's fall resulted from a surge in the US dollar but the precarious position of the South African economy was also involved.

'The market is so disorderly that some banks have stopped making deals,' said one money dealer.

Court order against Yorkshire NUM

BY A NEWS LINE REPORTER

AN ELECTION to choose a new representative for the Yorkshire coalfield on the executive of the National Union of Mineworkers was halted by a High Court judge yesterday.

Justice Walton ordered the union not to count votes or declare the result of the election which, he claimed, was almost certainly being conducted in breach of the union's rules.

He granted injunctions to John Walsh, 48, area agent for North Yorkshire, a candidate in the poll.

His counsel told the judge that the union had acted unlawfully by ordering a branch vote instead of an individual ballot of members.

The judge said that the new NUM rule book, adopted at the annual conference in July, had been drawn up to comply with the Trade Union Act 1984 which required that anyone with a vote on the union executive should be elected by a ballot of all members.

Although the rule book specifies a ballot of full elections of executive representatives, it merely calls for 'election by the membership' for vacancies occurring during a term of office.

The current election is caused by the impending retirement of Yorkshire area general secretary Owen Briscoe, who steps down in November as a member of the executive.

Instead of an individual ballot the election for Briscoe's replacement had been conducted as a branch vote with branch meetings deciding how the votes of members should be cast.

The judge said: 'I can see no rational argument that would begin to persuade me that the rule does not mean what it says, that it is necessary to have a vote of all the members — one man, one vote.'

The judge added: 'I appreciate to the full the reasons why the Yorkshire area of the NUM wish to hold a branch ballot rather than an individual ballot.'

Individual ballots are expensive whether or not there is government money available.

Foulstone turns on witnesses

STRIKE-BREAKING miner Ken Foulstone, accused of burglary, yesterday made claims against witnesses who had given evidence against him.

Foulstone, who last year took the National Union of Mineworkers to the High Court in a case which led to their funds being sequestered, claimed two witnesses against him had committed perjury.

He also said George Toose, as well as another witness Robert Vernon, had affairs with his first wife Jean.

Earlier this week Toose told the court that in 1977 he was visited by Foulstone who tried to sell him property stolen from homes.

Robert Vernon had said he had admitted the burglaries and he claimed Foulstone was his partner in crime.

Foulstone, 45, from Nottinghamshire has pleaded not guilty to three charges of burglary. They relate to break-ins at Selby Hall, Notts; Cantley Hall, near Doncaster; and a bungalow in Doncaster.

The jury also heard evidence from Foulstone's second wife Diana, who denied claims by the children from his first marriage that he once threatened to kill them.

God posters censored

THE HEAVY hand of censorship has struck again — this time against an artist and the gallery trying to put up his work in various places in London.

Les Levine, an artist from California, is in London sponsored by the Institute of Contemporary Arts (ICA) and the Artangel Trust. His poster artworks were to be shown together with an exhibition at the ICA.

His work is about political issues and shows soldiers and protesters with slogans such as 'Kill God', 'Starve God' written on them. Levine says he is against killing people, and wants to make people think.

He told News Line yesterday that he was amazed at the speed with which billposting companies began to cover up hoardings, after putting up his pictures on Wednesday.

The ICA's solicitors met with representatives of the London and Provincial company and after considerable discussion it was agreed that the posters would go up on 18 hoardings in Chalk Farm and Elephant and Castle — but with a sticker saying the ICA took responsibility for them.

Levine said he tried very hard to ask what the objections to his work were.

'They said the police had complained, but we could never get the name of the person who complained. They also said they had a complaint from the Advertising Council, but we phoned up and found this wasn't true.'

'So we suspect it was righteous indignation on their part.'

'Part of the reason, they said, is that they don't feel they can put God on billboards. But I'm sure that if my posters said "Give me a Guinness, God", that would have been all right.'

'If it weren't art, we would not have had this kind of problem.'

'They are expressing how this thing affected them psychologically, and they responded.'

'If it were not effective, they would not have done this. The information is so blatant and so clear they were afraid that people would get the message.'

£100,000 Emergency Fund

THIS WEEKEND is absolutely decisive for the £100,000 Emergency Fund. Please go out and raise every single penny and pound that you can.

It is a challenge for every single member of the Workers Revolutionary Party, the Young Socialists and every reader of the News Line.

The racist South African regime is proceeding ruthlessly to try to crush the black masses, as shown by its threat to ban the United Democratic Front and the closure of hundreds of 'coloured' schools.

The white minority dictatorship has stepped up its brutal intimidation because it knows that its days are numbered.

Here in Britain, too, the Tory government's attacks on the trade union movement and the youth continue unabated for the same reason — the working class is undefeated and the world economic and political crisis is deepening.

This week's armed forces' operation 'Brave Defender' is part of the Tory Bonapartist regime's civil war plans, involving training for repression on a national scale against the working class.

The only answer is to make urgent political preparations in the working class. This centres on the organisation of the General Strike.

A General Strike would pose the struggle for working-class power. The building of revolutionary leadership is therefore the burning question today, and the reason why we must raise our Emergency Fund as soon as possible.

Yesterday we received £169.80 from the following branches and supporters:

Runcorn £1, Ellesmere Port £20, Dingle £15, Speke £10, Nottingham £10, Harlesden £5, Islington £1.50, HC £6.80, Hammersmith £5, Clapham £12.50, Ferndale £10, Angell £20, Lavender Hill £20, Tulse Hill £18, Brixton £10, Rectory £5. Our total is now £69,410.91.

Swan-Hunter sit-in ends

HUNDREDS of striking shipyard workers yesterday ended a six-day occupation at four yards on the Tyne, but vowed to continue the dispute over changes in working practices.

Paul Stockdale, secretary of the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions, said: 'There would have been moves to smash the occupation legally with writs so we decided to evacuate the yards and abandon the occupation.'

'But this dispute will continue... it has made us even more determined to get our grievances settled,' he added.

Nearly 3,500 men were told of the new move at mass meetings on Tyne-side yesterday. Strike headquarters were then moved to nearby Wall-send.

Beirut massacre

BEIRUT — At least 17 unarmed Palestinians were summarily executed by the Shi'ite Amal Muslim militia in a raid on Thursday, a Palestinian group said yesterday.

The Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine accused the Shi'ite Amal Muslim militia of the atrocity during an attack on a southern suburb of the Lebanese capital.

Amal soldiers had raided the mainly mainly

Shi'ite Haret Hreik suburb and stormed the pro-Syrian DFPLP's militia headquarters, where many Palestinians had taken refuge.

A DFPLP statement, identifying 12 of the victims, said: 'The units then executed at least 17 Palestinian civilians in the main street.'

'Amal took more than 30 youths to a security office in the same district. Nothing is known about their fate.'

Inquiry demand by health workers

MEMBERS of the health union COHSE at a south east London psychiatric hospital have been suspended following an occupation of the hospital switchboard on Wednesday night.

The workers were demanding an independent inquiry into the management of the psychiatric unit at Dulwich Hospital, after being concerned at a number of incidents.

They have complained about dangers to patients through the use of agency nurses and have made allegations of racism in some cases.

Seven workers, including the branch secretary, Roland Lam Man Chun, were suspended over a five-week period on full pay, subject to disciplinary action.

The COHSE health union claimed that only one of these suspensions was justified. After union pressure, five suspensions were lifted, but not that of Lam Man Chun.

Management refused to accede to the COHSE demand for an independent inquiry and to demands for the two managers responsible for the suspensions to be removed.

The union also asked for the removal of the personnel officer, Mike Pollard, who they say has given them a signed statement that he is in favour replacing 70 per cent of the staff at the unit.

Workers held a ballot and voted to carry out the occupation when management refused to concede on any of these demands.

Seven people took over the switchboard and stopped all but essential phone-calls from coming in.

On Thursday three of those involved in the occupation were also suspended.

The accreditation of the branch officers involved was withdrawn and management refused to recognise the responsible full-time officer, Mick Murphy, who is currently barred from the hospital premises.

The union says that this withdrawal has resulted in depriving COHSE members at Dulwich of any representation and has prevented the branch holding its political fund ballot, as required by the government anti-trade union laws.

On Thursday, when the ballot was supposed to take place, management made the scrutineers, who are also the branch officers, leave the site.

The workers have received pledges of support from other COHSE branches and from the NUPE health union.

A picket will be held outside Dulwich hospital on Monday morning.

Murphy said: 'This action by the management is typical

Rival group to Black Caucus

A RIVAL organisation to Black Caucus has been formed in Liverpool. Called the Merseyside Anti-Racist Campaign (MARC), it was launched at the city council's Municipal Annexe on Wednesday night.

MARC was formed in opposition to the Black Caucus, which led the fight against the council's appointment of Sampson Bond, a supporter of the 'Militant' tendency, as the Liverpool council's race relations officer.

Black organisations have opposed Bond's appointment on the grounds that he is an opponent of 'positive action' in favour of the black community.

MARC has accused Black Caucus supporters of threatening to plunge Liverpool 'into a full-scale racial riot'.

But Black Caucus counters by saying the race situation is being provoked by the Sam Bond affair and by the dissolution of the old Race Relations Liaison Committee, which was replaced by a new Equal Opportunities Committee (EOC).

Ben Tovin, chairman of the Merseyside Community Relations Council, said he believed the new MARC group consisted of 'a small collection of individuals who seem very influenced by the "Militant" tendency propaganda of the Labour Party'.

BY OUR OWN REPORTER

A spokesman for MARC, Anil Singh, alleged that Black Caucus was made up of middle-class professionals, unrepresentative of the 'thousands of genuine black people that live in Liverpool'.

A leaflet from 'Militant' also recently accused

Black Caucus of being 'a small, increasingly lumpen group, unrepresentative of the black community', to the anger of many community groups and trade unionists.

It has been alleged that 'Militant' supporters from as far away as Bradford have joined the Granby ward of the Labour Party to fight for their line on race relations.

Margaret Simey, chairman of the Liverpool Police Committee, and a member of the Granby ward, denounced 'Militant' and warned of the dangers of racial conflagration as the result of the meddling of outsiders in the city.

The city police themselves are in the throes of a major revision of their techniques for policing the Liverpool 8 area, which is hardest hit by unemployment, deprivation and neglect.

A recent incident at the Admiral Street police station threatened to become a riot, when a crowd insisted on the release of Steve Nichols.

It was only the intervention of the genuine leading representatives of Black Caucus that quietened the situation. Sampson Bond was nowhere to be seen on that occasion.

Anger over wage cuts

LABOURERS at the Maintenance and Building Works department of Liverpool council's direct labour organisation are up in arms over cuts in their wages.

The issue arose before the council made its declaration of impending bankruptcy on Wednesday.

The labourers have been wrangling for months with the new high-powered executive over the phasing out of the old bonus scheme.

A new system is to be introduced based on total mobility of labour operating from mobile caravans and based on a single central depot.

The district Labour Party has had a hand in this reorganisation of what they consider to have been 'a hopelessly inadequate Housing Repair Service'.

Bonus

The dispute is over pool bonus. The men affected by these changes insist on a pro-rata payment linking craft operatives to labourers.

They say all bonus earnings on the caravan scheme should be published on both individual and pool basis.

They want time sheets to be named or be re-named bonus sheets.

And they want a trade group pooled bonus earnings system to be applied on all caravans where requested by the unions.

The labourers fear that with the so-called drive for efficiency, the crafts-men will pocket the whole bonus themselves, leaving the labourers to manage on a basic wage which is notoriously low.

The outcome of this condition would be that the men would be forced to look elsewhere for a better paid job, or go on the dole.

Thus 'greater efficiency' would be achieved, the workforce slimmed down 'voluntarily' and a wedge driven between trade union craftsmen and labourers and union and union.

Policies

Trade unionists look to Liverpool council to practice socialist policies in relation to wages, that is the consolidation of all bonus into basic pay, ending divisive bonus schemes.

Tommy Brennan, T&GWU labourer, told News Line: 'As of next

Kenny Shields (left), with his pay slip, and Mick Westhead who said 'My badge says I support Liverpool council but I can't afford to support them now?'

Drivers to strike over suspension

A MEETING of bus drivers employed by the Crossville bus company in Liverpool voted yesterday to strike in protest at the suspension of one of their colleagues.

The dispute involves 160 drivers in the Transport and General Workers' Union from the Love Lane depot in the city.

It began when one driver was suspended without pay for refusing to drive a defective bus.

Kenny Peeney, the district official for the passenger transport section, said: 'Once the lads got to know, they all drove their buses in and walked out. They have now voted to stay out.

'The custom and practice when someone refuses to operate a defective bus is suspension with pay. If that had taken place, it could have been settled with management.'

'The management are now refusing to meet the men unless they return to work. The people of Merseyside are being deprived of a service because of the line being taken by management.'

week I expect to be down £26 on account of the dispute over the full bonus system.

'We've always had pool bonus for years. Now when it comes to suit them, they don't want it.'

'I take home on average about £84. So you can see what this leaves me!'

'It's only since the new manager was put in that we've lost the pool bonus system.'

Billy Maddox, another T&GWU labourer, said he would be waiting for five weeks' wages before he will be applying to the DHSS for family income supplement.

'Social life is cut down to nothing and I might as well be on the dole.'

Poor

Mick Westhead added: 'They've stopped our money right away. They are stretching our allegiance to the council. We have a poor standard of living anyway.'

'They've always insisted on pool bonus and we agreed. Now they want to do away with it to suit their purpose. I've got to borrow money to pay our fares to work. We've been shabbily treated.'

John White said: 'My case is the same as Mick's. I am skint. I have been off bonus two weeks last week. I have had to live on £75 with two kids. I'd be better off on the dole. Perhaps that's what they want.'

'That way they can keep their record of not shedding labour. They can say we packed in.'

Kenny Shields said: 'I was out working with three lads from UCATT and out of four of us was the only one not getting bonus!'

Meeting

'The council is manipulating the unions. We want a meeting with the council. We have not withdrawn our labour in spite of all this.'

'It's hypocritical the way they get us to work for the miners during the strike and then they do this to us. We did the work, they got the credit.'

Saudi oil plan shock

NEW YORK — Unconfirmed reports that the Saudi Arabian kingdom plans to sell its oil at spot (speculative) market-related prices have shocked traders and buyers.

The plan could slash at least $3 from a barrel of Saudi crude oil that is officially marked at $28 a barrel.

It could trigger a sharp decline in world oil prices and a collapse of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries, according to the New York experts yesterday.

Middle Eastern oil producers, already at loggerheads over pricing and production policies that obstructed any accord at the OPEC meeting in Geneva last July, will be among the hardest hit.

The experts described the likely pact with the Arabian-American Oil Company (Aramco) — the Saudis' long-time partners in oil — as 'netback' agreements under which crude oil is priced in line with the spot market price of refined products.

Riyadh was apparently preparing to place Saudi national interests ahead of OPEC's demands, they said.

OPEC oil ministers fuelled the growing panic in the industry when they announced early this week that they had scheduled an extraordinary meeting for October 3 in Vienna.

Opecna, the OPEC news agency, announced the forthcoming meeting, saying the need for additional talks was agreed last July.

There had been a rise in crude oil prices for some weeks before the rumour began circulating.

Some Nigerian grades were trading above official price levels and Saudi light crude was itself selling a mere 25 cents below its official peg on Tuesday.

But prices on the Western European spot market and New York futures exchange fell for the second successive day yesterday, with drops of up to 50 cents a barrel and Saudi light crude down 20 cents at $27.60 a barrel.

A CAPTION in News Line (Thursday August 29, page 8) wrongly referred to Slumberland workers being photographed with the March to Release the Jailed Miners. The workers who attended the march public meeting in Manchester were in fact sacked Silentnight workers from Barnoldswick.

BREAKDOWN WARNING ON SCIENCE RESEARCH

THE NUMBER of young researchers is getting lower and the number of older researchers is rising, the latest issue of 'New Scientist' reveals.

'Hitherto, as each generation passed through the scientific system, another generation was ready with the skills and training to replace them,' says the article, entitled 'The Greying of Britain's Science'.

'Now there are signs that this regeneration has come to a standstill. Jobs in scientific research are harder to come by, especially for the young.'

BY A NEWS LINE REPORTER

And the article warns that if the trend continues 'there will come a time when the structure of the scientific establishment breaks down'.

'New Scientist' conducted a detailed survey at one research establishment, the Cavendish Laboratory (the Department of Physics at Cambridge University), where data was collected on the age of its scientists since the end of World War II.

Throughout most of the 1950s, the average age of scientists there was 40 or slightly less. In the 1960s this rose to about 41 or 42, and stayed there for most of the 1970s.

But towards the end of the 1970s, the average age began to rise significantly, and in the 1980s it is now 47.

At the end of the 1940s, the study found, half the researchers at the Cavendish were under 35, at the beginning of the 1980s, the proportion had fallen to just over 10 per cent.

The figure has only dropped to below 20 per cent in the past five years.

The article points out that ten years ago there were more support staff than students, now there are more research students than staff.

Staff

In 1972-1975 there were 132 research students and 182 research staff but last year there were 173 researchers and only 150 support staff.

The secretary of the Cavendish Laboratory, John Deakin, warns that this is one of the most dangerous threats to future research, and could become the limiting factor in deciding where a particular project goes ahead — because there are not enough technicians.

There is also an increase on contract research posts, lasting up to five years. But scientific trade unions take the view that short-term contracts cannot substitute for permanent jobs, the article says.

'They see contract posts as a means whereby the government cynically avoids the responsibility of employing people permanently.'

Other examples include the Royal Greenwich

Observatory (RGO), where the proportion of people under 25 has fallen to a third of its 1976 level.

In the same period, the number of people between the ages of 25 and 29 has dropped from 16 per cent to 11 per cent. The numbers of people aged 30-34 has remained fairly constant, and the numbers of people between 35-50 have increased.

The article states: 'Growing old is certainly not a crime, but a policy of starving research establishments, such as the RGO, of the oxygen that fans the flames of innovation surely is.'

Refuge faces closure

A REFUGE for down-and-outs in south east London took its final new admission yesterday.

The DHSS resettlement unit in Camberwell, known as 'Spike', has existed for over 100 years. The centre will be closed down in November when its lease with Southwark council expires.

Staff at Camberwell say that the old Victorian buildings at the centre should be demolished and replaced by modern purpose-built accommodation.

But they are angry that no replacement for the refuge is to be provided.

The men who use the unit are homeless, unemployed and without means. A high proportion have lost touch with their family and with community services.

For all its faults, the Camberwell centre has become a vital refuge, providing accommodation and support for men in severe need, the staff say.

Some of the staff, employed by the DHSS and members of the Civil Service Union, will be redeployed but 12 are being made redundant.

Civil Service Union official Mike Barke said yesterday that the closure move was 'privatisation through the back door'.

The DHSS claims that beds have been provided by charitable organisations with government funds to replace the refuge.

But staff point out that these private homes do not offer direct access to people 'off the street'.

Radiation check for fishermen

TWO fishermen have had radiation checks after hauling aboard the end section of a discharge pipe from the Dounreay atom plant in Caithness in the north of Scotland.

The men, aboard the 30-ft boat 'The Northern Lights' were pulling in lobster creels when their rope became entangled with a two foot section of pipeline.

After they landed at their home port of Scrabster, skipper George King, 37, and James Bremner, 34, were examined by Dounreay health monitors. The section of the pipeline was also examined.

The UK Atomic Energy Authority said their checks had shown the two men were well within internationally recognised radioactivity levels.

Pipe

The monitoring showed the outside of the pipe to have a reading of 2.5 millirems an hour, with its interior having a much higher count of 150 millirems an hour.

An authority spokesman said they had found no trace of contamination.

The fishermen had agreed to provide samples of lobsters near the discharge pipe for analysis by the Agriculture Ministry.

They were hauling their creels up when the rope snagged on what they first suspected was a piece of scrap iron.

Bremner said: 'We both hauled on the rope and it was only when I pulled the load over the deck that we realised we had hooked a piece of the pipeline.'

'We also took aboard the two marker buoys but some monitoring equipment was so entangled that we had to cut the ropes above it and send it back into the water.'

Tribunal supports sacked miner

SACKED Lancashire miner Dennis Pinnington has won support from a Liverpool industrial tribunal in his fight for reinstatement.

The three-man tribunal unanimously decided that Pinnington, who served a three-month jail sentence earlier this year, had been unfairly dismissed.

They are to meet NCB officials at Bold colliery next month to seek his immediate reinstatement.

Miners at Bold were jubilant as news of the tribunal's findings spread around the pit.

Many of the workforce, including senior overmen, had written to the tribunal to praise Pinnington's past conduct and supporting his reinstatement.

But there are fears that the NCB will reject the decision in line with the national policy of sacking miners accused of 'violence' and acts committed on coal board property while they were on strike.

Biko anniversary

BLACK Consciousness Week was launched yesterday with commemorations that will include the 8th anniversary of the death of the movement's founder, Steve Biko.

The week culminates with Steve Biko Day on September 12. Anti-apartheid meetings and rallies have been organised by the Black Consciousness Movement to mark the week.

The BCM has called for widespread support: 'We call upon all British workers to put pressure on their leadership to give unstinting support to the Black workers in South Africa, most of whom live below subsistence level.'

'Despite their Herculean struggle our black workers, led by the Black Allied Mining and Construction Workers Union and the (black) National Union of Mineworkers, contributed in solidarity to the British miners in their recent, gallant strike against Thatcherism.'

'We, therefore, ask for your whole-hearted support, especially to the NUM, the biggest black union in South Africa, in its impending showdown with the imperialist "randlords", the white Chamber of Miners.'

'Our multimform struggle, in all its manifestations, spell, in loud and clear tones, the doom of not only apartheid but the whole capitalist system of exploitation.'

The BCM will hold an anniversary meeting on September 12 at 7p.m. at 18-22 Ashwin Street, London E8.

Additional information may be obtained from BCM, BM Box 4830, London WC1 M3 XX or by telephoning 01 732 4750/01 654 9462.

WEATHER

APART from a few showers over the northern isles and near northern and eastern coasts of Scotland at first, the day will start mainly bright and dry over Scotland, England and Wales. Over northern Ireland it will be a rather cloudy start. This cloudy weather with outbreaks of rain will spread slowly southeast during the day, though eastern parts will stay dry, and Scotland, northern and eastern England will have sunshine at times. Temperatures will be rather below normal and rather cold in the cloudier western districts.

OUTLOOK: Cloudy with rain at times in the south, drier brighter weather in the north will spread slowly south. Temperatures mostly rather cool.

TUC

Silentnight backed

BEN RUBNER

THE TUC congress yesterday gave its unanimous backing to the sacked workers from the Silentnight bedding factory in Lancashire.

A great cheer went up from delegates when a group of the victimised workers unfurled banners and hung them from the visitors' balcony.

Ben Rubner, leader of the furniture workers' union FTAT, said that his members had been subjected to violence and intimidation while trying to maintain their picket lines.

He said that workers at the bed manufacturers had agreed to forego a wage increase in exchange for a guarantee that their jobs were safe.

'But the employers reneged on that agreement within months,' he said angrily.

'We are appealing to the whole of the trade union movement to give your support to these lads and lasses so that they get a satisfactory outcome to this bitter dispute.'

The resolution stated: 'Congress wholeheartedly endorses and welcomes the General Council's call to all TUC affiliates for assistance to these workers.'

Sacked guards 'held to ransom'

RAIL union leaders issued an urgent appeal to the TUC congress yesterday for support to secure the reinstatement of guards sacked for opposing driver-only operation.

Jimmy Knapp, general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen (NUR), said: 'British Rail's actions have been provocative and intimidatory in the extreme.'

'They have sacked our people for trying to defend their national agreements and their right to negotiate.'

'They have sunk to the level of hijackers and kidnapers. They are holding our people to ransom. I'm telling you that they won't get that ransom.'

'We are asking you to help us in the campaign to get the jobs back of our sacked members.'

Knapp was moving a resolution condemning cuts in rail jobs and services which are threatened by the Tories' £235 million reduction in cash aid.

The motion, which was overwhelming endorsed by delegates, called for an integrated transport system.

ASLEF vice-president Lew Adams echoed Knapp's appeal for assistance in the fight to get reinstatement for the victimised guards.

'There will be no peace in this industry until they are reinstated,' he predicted.

'Our industry is in crisis, not through the making of workers, but because of the belligerent attitude of British Rail management.'

Chairman Gill

KEN GILL, general secretary of the draughtmen's union AUEW-TASS, yesterday became the new president of the TUC.

Gill, who was recently expelled from the Communist Party, was elected by the General Council meeting immediately following the close of congress and will hold office for a year.

ANGER OVER NEW PUBLIC ORDER LAWS

REPORTS BY BEN RUDDER AND SIMON VEVERS

TUC delegates expressed their anger yesterday over government moves to enact new repressive public order legislation.

Aidan White, treasurer of the National Union of Journalists, said: 'It will have a chilling effect on all of us. It will affect our right to march, protest and picket.'

He said the miners' strike, and particularly the outcome of the recent Orgreave trials, had underlined the necessity for an urgent review into policing methods.

'The police are playing a part in defending unpopular government policy. They are Maggie's militia — a sort of private army.'

White predicted that the new legislation would 'lead to more anger and frustration and a further explosion of public disorder'.

Danny Sergeant, president of the SOGAT print union, described the Tory proposals as 'a further attempt to silence any opposition and dissent.'

'The new police powers would seriously limit any trade union activity,' he warned.

The NUJ resolution called on the TUC to mount a vigorous campaign against any clamp on the right to picket and to seek an urgent meeting with the new Home Secretary Douglas Hurd.

Leslie Christie, general secretary designate of the Society of Civil and Public Servants (SCPS), said that recent attacks on civil liberties were all designed to 'stamp out opposition to the semi-fascist policies of the government'.

He said it was an outrage that leading members of the TUC General Council had had their phones tapped and been subjected to constant surveillance.

Christie condemned the government's decision to press for the prosecution of civil servant Clive Ponting.

'Anybody who is looking for subversives should not pick on the civil servant who's telling the truth, but the minister who is lying to the people.'

Alan Healey, of the Association of First Division Civil Servants (FDA), said the criminal prosecution of Ponting was 'vicious and vindictive'.

THE congress, on the advice of the General Council, opposed a call from the National Association of Probation Officers (NAPO), for 'an alternative criminal justice strategy'.

NAPO secretary Bill Beaumont said that the

A transport union delegate preserving this year's TUC platform on film millions spent on the construction of new prisons would be better invested in new hospitals, schools and improved social services.

Tony Christopher, of the Inland Revenue Staff Federation, said on behalf of the TUC leadership that it could not accept the resolution because it called for the decriminalisation of cannabis possession.

DANNY SERGEANT

Deportation threat

NALGO official Alan Jinkinson made an impassioned plea for support for two members of his union who are faced with deportation by the Thatcher government.

Shaheed Saeed and Muhammad Idrish have both been hounded by the immigration authorities although they have lived in Britain for several years.

AUEW-TASS general secretary Ken Gill gave a pledge on behalf of the General Council that action would be taken to try and get the deportation orders lifted.

Support for Nicaragua

LUCINDA BROADBENT

THE TUC denounced the Reagan administration's conspiracy against the Nicaraguan revolution, firmly rejecting a hostile amendment from right-wing leaders of the electricians' union.

ACTT delegate Lucinda Broadbent described her visit to the central American country when she moved the successful resolution.

She said that for the first time Nicaraguan trade unionists were able to organise without fear under the Sandinist government.

'Under dictatorships workers face being sacked, tortured, raped or killed for organising in their workplaces,' she added, calling for closer ties with the Nicaraguan trade unions.

Laurie Gardner, from the SCPS civil servants' union, urged delegates to reject the EETPU amendment which suggested that trade unionists were not free under the Sandinist government.

He declared to applause: 'Ignore the amendment. Establish links with the main trade union centres. Do not allow another Chile in Nicaragua.'

LIMA — Peru will use its resources to fight unemployment and poverty rather than pay its $14 billion foreign debt, President Alan Garcia said. 'We need resources, and that's why we have told the foreign banks that we will not pay while Peruvians have no jobs,' he told a rally of about 10,000.

Candidates desert Punjab elections

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

NEW DELHI — More than half of Punjab election candidates yesterday withdrew their nominations in the wake of a government manhunt for militant Sikhs.

The sudden withdrawal was a humiliating shock for Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, whose government has refused to cancel the September 25 polls despite widespread unrest in the state.

Of the 2,237 nominations for the 117 state seats and 13 Lok Sabha (national parliamentary) seats, only 922 remained listed yesterday when the official campaign began.

Punjab is besieged by more than 100,000 Indian army troops who have also taken over border security from the regular Border Security Guard.

Cause

Fears over the recent spate of assassinations of pro-New Delhi politicians, among them two of Gandhi's top lieutenants in Congress (I) Party politics, appeared to have caused the withdrawals.

New Delhi politician Arjun Dass, 46, and his bodyguard were among the latest to be gunned down in a wave of sub-machine-gun attacks in the national capital and Punjab this week.

Dass was allegedly killed by militant Sikhs avenging the death of more than 2,000 innocent Sikhs in New Delhi after Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was assassinated on October 31 by two of her elite Sikh bodyguard.

The assassinated politician is widely believed to have been responsible, with other Congress (I) politicians, for opening up party registers to hired thugs seeking Sikh addresses.

Another Gandhi protégé implicated in the anti-Sikh pogroms of last November, Lalit Maken, was assassinated five weeks ago.

The army's blatantly anti-Sikh manhunt is likely to have deeply offended the vast majority of Punjabis of all the major religions and sects, contributing to the shock withdrawals.

Rush

United News of India news agency said: 'There was a massive rush for withdrawals before the deadline expired.'

The federal government has provided the remaining candidates with bullet-proof vests and armed bodyguards.

Beirut battles

BEIRUT — DRUZE and Shi'ite Moslem militias battled with machine-guns and rocket-propelled grenades for several hours overnight in the Lebanese capital on Thursday, according to reports yesterday.

The fighting was the gravest violation so far of a July security plan for west Beirut, supervised by Syrian military observers and designed to end inter-Moslem militia clashes.

The fighting between the mainly Druze Progressive Socialist Party and the Shi'ite Amal Moslem movement coincided with new Shi'ite attacks on Bourj al-Barajneh, the Palestinian refugee camp in Beirut's southern suburbs.

Fighting

Beirut newspapers have reported five people killed and 47 wounded since Tuesday in the worst fighting there since the five-week attack on three Palestinian camps, including Bourj al-Barajneh, in May and June.

Witnesses said Thursday night's Druze-Shi'ite battles engulfed most of west Beirut.

Peres confronts Zionist settlers

TEL AVIV — Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres yesterday confronted Zionist settlers on the occupied West Bank and told them to stop erecting illegal settlements.

He made an unexpected visit to militant Arab city of Hebron where Zionists have taken over apartments to create a Jewish presence.

Peres reprimanded them for trying to take over part of the casbah in the city of 40,000 Palestinians.

The location of settlements was decided by 'parliament and in the Cabinet — not in the casbah. Nothing illegal will be permitted', he said.

He arrived shortly after the army evicted a Zionist group which tried to establish another unauthorised settlement on the Tel Rumeida heights in central Hebron.

'We shall succeed eventually, we always do,' said Ehud Mikhil, 23, one of the Zionists removed after five hours.

The leader of the Zionist provocation against Hebron and its Arab residents, Miriam Levinger, said more than 150 Jews were now living at four locations in central Hebron.

Their stone homes are surrounded by coils of barbed wire and guarded round the clock by Israeli soldiers.

Earlier this week former Defence Minister Ariel Sharon, the butcher of Beirut, called for more settlements to be built in the occupied territories.

He was speaking after a 38-year-old reservist soldier was stabbed to death and another wounded outside one of the Zionist flats in Hebron.

Sabra's Gaza Hospital — one of many buildings shelled during the May-June Shi'ite attacks on the Palestinian camps

'One of the main steps for increasing security is Jewish settlement,' Sharon said.

The right-wing Herut party attacked the Labour Party with whom it shares office in the nine-party coalition government. By frowning on settlement-building in Hebron, Labour had 'strengthened the enemies of Israel who carried out this attack', Herut said.

Ortega pledges rights

MANAGUA — President Daniel Ortega yesterday said Nicaragua's constitution should guarantee democracy, a mixed economy and non-aligned foreign policy.

He made the call in a report to the political commission of the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN).

Ortega said the constitution, which must be approved by the national assembly by the end of next year, should defend all political, social and economic sectors of the country.

The US-backed Nicaraguan Democratic Force (FDN) counter-revolutionary group, newly equipped with military hardware, is threatening to escalate military actions against Nicaragua.

Night curfew imposed on Tamils

COLOMBO — The Sri Lankan authorities relaxed a 16-hour curfew in north-eastern Trincomalee yesterday but imposed 12-hour night-time curbs.

The 16-hour curfew drastically restricting the Tamil civilian population had been in force for two days, after the military suffered renewed setbacks at the hands of Eelam (Tamil Nation) liberation fighters.

Two separate raids in the Trincomalee region on Thursday, one on a Sinhala government settlement and another on a police station, have shocked the military authorities and the racist Sinhala bourgeois regime in Colombo.

The state-owned 'Daily News' said there was speculation that Velupillai Prabhakaran, the leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, was in the district.

It alleged Prabhakaran had been seen in the nearby village of Sirimapura hours before it was attacked by the Eelam guerrillas.

The newspaper said security authorities were investigating reports that a bearded man in cassock spotted in the area might be the LTTE leader.

The government has charged the LTTE, the largest of the six Eelam liberation organisations, with carrying out most of the attacks on security forces this week.

Colombo's 'Sun' newspaper said Indian Foreign Secretary Romesh Bhandari, the key Indian bureaucrat at the collapsed Bhutan talks, was likely to visit the Sri Lankan capital next week.

The newspaper said he was expected to meet President Junius Jayewardene but the authorities declined to confirm the report.

The Bhutan collapsed on August 17, after a Sri Lankan army rampage in northern Vavuniya, when at least 100 unarmed Tamil civilians were massacred and an unaccounted number of others wounded.

ARRESTS AS RAIDS IN WHITE AREAS CONTINUE

South African youth under arrest by the racist regime for boycotting classes — now the rebellion has spread to white areas

JOHANNESBURG — Scores of people were arrested by the apartheid authorities yesterday after a second successive day of attacks on a whites-only suburb in East London, eastern Cape.

The Botha regime's crisis intensified, meanwhile, with the rand sliding to 38 cents after closing overnight at 39.60 cents.

In London Central Bank governor Gerhard de Kock conducted urgent talks to try to find a way out of a potential collapse of Pretoria's beleaguered economy.

East London's unrest was part of the most serious of the incidents of undefeated black rebellion against the racist white minority republic in the past 19 months.

Police reported that groups of angry black youth had hurled petrol bombs at two houses in the East London suburb.

The black youths were joined by mixed-race youth in Cape Town, where they invaded another whites-only suburb.

The Cape Town raid sparked the first reported incident of white residents opening fire from their houses to protect their property.

State radio quoted Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange as saying the unrest was diminishing, particularly in areas put under a state of emergency on July 21.

But he said the level of rebellion in regions purportedly not under emergency rule was three times as high as in the two areas in the Cape and around Johannesburg, where the repressive regulations are in force.

There was no comment from apartheid officials on whether Le Grange's remarks indicated the regime was considering extending the emergency to other towns.

West Germany's bankers in Frankfurt — a major source of finance for Pretoria — yesterday admitted they may be forced to reschedule their loans to the Botha regime.

Frankfurt commercial bankers said their debt exposure to Pretoria was so large that they may have little option but to co-operate with Botha's week-old four-month freeze on foreign capital repayments.

Outstanding loans from South Africa by West German banks are estimated, from official figures, to be at least $1.9 billion, of which $800 million are due within the next 12 months.

In London, de Kock gave his reasons for Pretoria's freeze: 'We could not pay back certain banks all their credit without imposing a "standstill" in order to be fair to all the banks.'

The Botha regime is so alarmed by the financial crisis that it refuses officially to call the freeze a freeze; 'standstill' is the authorised term.

De Kock continued to face serious difficulties in obtaining assurances for new investments to prop up the deeply undermined South African economy.

Chile trade unionists held

SANTIAGO — Trade union leaders Rodolfo Seguel and Manuel Bustos, who organised this week's anti-government protests, have been charged under the state of siege laws.

Cabinet secretary general Francisco Cuadra said about 100 people would be charged with organising the protests.

At least seven people were shot dead, dozens injured and 577 arrested as demonstrators defied police and heavy military patrols in the most serious protests this year.

Troops were sent in to reinforce police in four slum areas around Santiago.

Shanty-dwellers retaliated with petrol bombs from behind barricades of burning tyres and rocks after police fired tear gas and rubber bullets at them.

Fire

The army opened up with bursts of machine-gun fire. They also used buckshot and tear gas, while air force troops sealed off districts where protest was widespread.

The demonstrations were called to demand an immediate return to democracy and were fuelled by the government's rejection of an opposition plan for a return to civilian rule.

Next Wednesday is the 12th anniversary of General Augusto Pinochet's US-sponsored military coup of September 11, 1973.

MUBARAK'S NEW MEN

CAIRO — New Egyptian Prime Minister Ali Lutfi has named a Cabinet that retains most of his predecessor's ministers.

The men in charge of four key ministries, foreign affairs, defence, economic planning and agriculture — kept their jobs and were made deputy Prime Ministers.

Lutfi, an economist, was appointed on Wednesday night by President Hosni Mubarak, in an attempt to stem the country's deepening economic crisis.

He has replaced Kamal Hassan Ali, a soldier-politician who headed the LA PAZ — Bolivian workers protesting against economic austerity measures yesterday extended their general strike by four days.

Leaders of the COB confederation of trade unions said about 15,000 workers took part in a 'national march' through La Paz.

They were led by tin miners, the most powerful and militant section of the COB, who exploded dynamite charges in the capital, causing panic but no casualties.

COB leader Walter Delgadillo told the march rally: 'This is a war of life and death, not just for salaries but for the salvation of the fatherland.'

He said the strike, originally called for 48 hours and due to have ended yesterday, would be extended to midnight on Monday.

The government has declared the strike illegal.

The COB called the strike after the month-old government of President Victor Paz Estenssoro last week froze public sector wages.

He devalued the currency by 95 per cent, claiming it was necessary to halt inflation running at more than 14,000 per cent a year.

The measures, which included the decentralisation of the state oil and mining companies, sparked immediate price increases of 1,000 per cent for basic commodities.

Security forces were placed on alert during marches, held also in the country's nine provincial capitals.

Miners' leader Edgar Ramirez told the rally in La Paz that the decentralisation of the oil and mining companies was the first step to handing Bolivia's natural resources to multinational companies.

Citizen Murdoch goes Yankee

IN JULY 1979 Mr Rupert Murdoch stood in the witness stand of the Australian Broadcasting Tribunal in Melbourne. He was seeking approval for the purchase of a controlling interest in the lucrative Channel 10 television station.

Those who opposed Murdoch's takeover bid, including the Australian Labour Party (ALP), argued that while the publishing tycoon was an Australian citizen, he was not an Australian resident. This, they argued, contravened the Broadcasting and Television Act.

But when asked for his address, Murdoch crisply told the tribunal: 'Cavan, Yass, New South Wales.' And when questions were put about his business interests in London and New York and his homes abroad, Murdoch became the super-Aussie patriot.

'I started "The Australian". I am now accused of not being Australian. Who in this room can say that I am not a good Australian or a patriotic one?

'I regard myself as an Australian, serving an Australian company which has large interests around the world. I carry an Australian passport. My children are Australian. I pay my taxes in Australia.

'I have a home in Australia. It has all my personal belongings in it. It is lived in by no one but myself.'

Senator Gareth Evans, on behalf of the Labour Party, pointed out that Murdoch held an American 'green card' which allowed him to live and work in the United States. 'You are in fact almost now entitled to apply for (US) citizenship should that be your desire?' Evans asked.

Murdoch replied: 'Yes. But I think I have stated many times it is not my desire.'

This week, all that changed. The Dirty Digger became an American citizen. Murdoch did not sign up with Uncle Sam because of any sudden conversion to the American Way of Life. He did it to comply with US business legislation.

His new citizenship paves the way for his takeover of Metromedia Inc., one of America's biggest television networks, for $2 billion.

Murdoch stood with 185 other people in a Federal court in Manhattan to swear his allegiance to the US Constitution. 'I'm very proud and grateful to be sworn in as an American citizen,' he said afterwards.

(Incidentally, Murdoch had to take a test in July to see if he could read, write and speak English. Apparently he passed, which is more than can be said for some of his writers on 'The Sun' and the 'News of the World').

Murdoch's switch of citizenship shows how the international capitalist plunderers operate. If the Thatcher government decided to privatise the BBC and take bids from British-chaired companies, Murdoch would throw away his USA passport and become a Queen and Country Englishman — overnight!

Nationality, citizenship, passports, immigration controls etc. are all part of the reactionary paraphernalia of the equally reactionary nation state. By exploiting them for his own business and political ambitions, Murdoch has highlighted just how reactionary they are.

The working class is an international class. As a dispossessed class it has no country. It will gain its full material and spiritual emancipation only through the struggle for the world socialist revolution.

That involves the expropriation of the world capitalist class, including Mr Murdoch's media empire, and placing the banks, land and basic industry under workers' management and control in a federation of world socialist states.

TUC

Struggle over corporatism dominates TUC

BEN RUDDER looks back over this week's TUC

THE 117th Trades Union Congress in Blackpool last week demonstrated how the undefeated miners' struggle for jobs has intensified the crisis for the corporatist TUC and Labour leaders.

They suffered a humiliating political blow when the NUM resolution calling on a future Labour government to review the cases of jailed miners and reinstate sacked men was passed despite opposition from the TUC general council.

The resolution also committed the TUC leadership to seek the reimbursement of all NUM funds seized by the Tory state.

Delegates backed the miners in the battle against Tories and judiciary and voted to reaffirm the special 1982 Wembley conference decision to defy Tory anti-union law.

But while the delegates overwhelmingly rejected any acceptance of Tory cash for ballots, the majority of the general council allowed AUEW engineering union leaders to arrogantly and flagrantly violate this Congress policy.

The TUC leaders backed down before the AUEW and leaders of the EETPU electricians' union, thus undermining the will of delegates expressed only a few hours before.

AUEW general secretary Gavin Laird immediately seized on the general council's capitulation to encourage other leaders to take the corporatist road and accept Tory cash for ballots.

While the general council majority opposed the reimbursement of the NUM, which had all its funds stolen by the state for upholding trade union principles, they effectively sanctioned the acceptance of blood money from the same state by the AUEW and its supporters.

In the sessions between the closed door general council meetings, delegates reflected an opposite development in the working class. They threw out no-strike and single union deals, rejected a review of Wembley, backed 24-hour action if GCHQ workers are sacked and supported any union taking direct action against the South African racist regime.

The tense atmosphere which gripped the series of emergency general council meetings was sharpened precisely by these decisions.

The right wing only narrowly blocked the AUEW crisis from spilling onto the conference floor when a general council meeting on the eve of Congress decided by two votes not to demand a final answer from the AUEW before the Wembley resolutions were debated.

So close was the vote that the following day general secretary Norman Willis produced a speech of embarrassing ineptitude on GCHQ.

He was reported to have spoken privately of resignation when, on Tuesday, a number of delegates reversed their votes at the last minute and backed the NUM resolution.

So serious were the anxieties of Willis' supporters at this point that they stage managed a standing ovation for the general secretary on Wednesday for an undistinguished, if at least punctuated contribution supporting Labour's corporatist economic policy.

In this tolerant attitude by delegates was contained some serious dangers. While Willis' personal crisis was closely tied to the uncompromising fight led by the NUM, his uneasy recovery later in the week owed much to the appearance of Labour leader Neil Kinnock to prop up the right wing.

Kinnock intervened to back the AUEW, denounce the NUM motion and give weight to Willis' demands for capitulation to the EETPU electricians' union.

It was not coincidence that on the same day, a prominent leader of the Nottinghamshire black-leg breakaway organisation arrived, and was reported to have dined with members of the EETPU delegation.

The visit by a representative of the Nottinghamshire scabs to Blackpool revealed the interconnections between, and the impact of the NUM struggle for a united fight against the Thatcher government and the battle now unfolding rapidly within the whole trade union movement.

At stake both in Nottinghamshire and over the AUEW's breaking of ranks is the political struggle for the unity of the working class against the attacks of the capitalist state.

The nature of the fifth column within the trade union movement was brought out into the open by the unprincipled position of the AUEW leadership and the EETPU leadership's promise of 'unthinkable pacts' in pursuit of its corporatist aims.

These open declarations of intent, and the exposure of the role of the TUC majority in permitting the violation of the principle of trade union independence from the capitalist state was a political gain of vital significance.

Without the miners' 12-month struggle to carry out the principles of trade unionism in defence of jobs — verbally adopted by the TUC in past years — the question of discipline of those unions undermining this struggle would not have arisen.

The drawing up of the forces on either side of this fundamental divide, where the struggle against corporatism is firmly in the ascendant, sets the scene for the opening of what must be a ruthless struggle against the right wing in the AUEW, the EETPU and the whole trade union movement.

At the centre of this struggle is the need for the unity of the whole working class in an uncompromising fight against Thatcher's Bonapartist dictatorship, a struggle inseparable from the organisation of the General Strike to destroy her hated regime.

ouraging cheap labour'

THE Thatcher government was accused of encouraging unscrupulous employers to take on cheap labour during the debate on the proposed abolition of Wages Councils.

Garfield Davies, general secretary-elect of the shopworkers' union USDAW, said: 'The attack on Wages Councils will accelerate the rate at which more and more people are sentenced to low pay and poor working conditions.'

He said that while the Tories were assisting their friends by attacking minimum wage levels and statutory protection under the Shop Act, they were also paying judges and generals a £300-a-week pay increase.

Chris Hynes, for the National League of the Blind and Disabled, said: 'If the British trade union movement is synonymous with social and industrial justice, then you will fight just as ardently for the disabled.'

'I call on all trade unions to make sure that their disabled workers receive the full rate for the job. They should be paid for their ability and not penalised for their disability.'

● Congress delegates also voted to oppose Tory plans to abolish the Truck Acts. John Vickers, from the bakers' union, described the Tory plan as 'a divisive, dangerous attack on the working class. It's the road back to the Tories' cherished Victorian ideals.'

● Civil Service Union delegate John Randall said the government's closure of 27 Skill Centres was 'an act of unparalleled vandalism'.

Delegates unanimously resolved to oppose further closure plans, and called on TUC representatives on the corporatist Manpower Services Commission to press for a review of the Tories' Adult Training Strategy.

The Process and Practice of Cognition A series of four studies – Fortnightly courses start July 8

TUTOR G. HEALY

1. From the History of Philosophy

Kant had a dualistic starting point — for him consciousness was the subject of knowledge, whilst the world of 'things in themselves' was unknowable — He therefore transformed the opposition between subject and object into an absolute.

Hegel's conception of the objective world was equated to his 'absolute idea' as a product of thought. His dialectical, idealist, dualist method repudiated Kantian Scepticism, which he correctly claimed 'did not dare affirm "it is"', whilst Kant's 'modern idealism did not dare to regard cognition as a knowledge of the Thing in itself'. (Lenin's Collected Works, Volume 38, p.130-131). His conception of knowledge consisted of abstractions from his 'absolute idea' which accounts for their objective dialectical idealist origin.

As Marx and Engels explained: '... In Hegel's Phenomenologie the material, sensuously perceptible, objective foundations of the various estranged forms of human self-consciousness are allowed to remain. The whole destructive work results in the most conservative philosophy because it thinks it has overcome the objective world, the sensuously perceptible real world, by transforming it into a "thing of thought", a mere determinateness of self-consciousness, and can therefore also dissolve its opponent, which has become ethereal, in the "ether of pure thought". The Phenomenologie is therefore quite consistent in that it ends by replacing human reality by "absolute knowledge" ... The whole of the Phenomenologie is intended to prove that self-consciousness is the only reality and all reality.' (See Volume 4, Collected Works of Marx and Engels: 'The Holy Family or Critique of Critical Critique')

Engels, together with Marx, characterised nature as the proof of dialectics. To them practice was the basis of the verification of dialectical knowledge and not Hegel's 'absolute idea' which Engels described in Anti-Duhring as 'a colossal miscarriage' — the role of theory as a guide to practice explained.

READING: Anti-Duhring: Introduction-General (Engels), Dialectical Materialism — The History of Philosophy (Theodore Oizerman).

2. Practice and Cognition

'Sense-perception' (see Feuerbach) must be the basis of all science. Only when it proceeds from sense-perception in the twofold form of sensuous consciousness and sensuous need — that is, only when science proceeds from nature — is it true science. All history is the history of preparing and developing "man" to become the object of sensuous consciousness, and turning the requirements of "man as man" into his needs. History itself is a real part of natural history — of nature developing into man. Natural science will in time incorporate into itself the science of man, just as the science of man will incorporate into itself natural science; there will be one science. (See Volume 3, Collected Works of Marx and Engels: 'Economic and Philosophic Manuscripts of 1844').

The Individual, Particular and Universal I-P-U categories as a syllogism formed in the course of practice. 'Identical opposites' ... 'the individual exists only in the connection that leads to the universal. The universal exists only in the individual and through the individual. Every individual is (in one way or another) a universal.' (Lenin's Collected Works, Volume 38, p.361)

'My general consciousness is only the theoretical shape of that of which the living shape is the real community, the social fabric, although at the present day general consciousness is an abstraction from real life and as such confronts it with hostility. The activity of my general consciousness, as an activity, is therefore also my theoretical existence as a social being.

'Above all we must avoid postulating "society" again as an abstraction vis-a-vis the individual. The individual is the social being. His manifestations of life — even if they may not appear in the direct form of communal manifestations of life carried out in association with others are therefore an expression and confirmation of social life.' ... 'Thinking and Being are thus certainly distinct, but at the same time they are in unity with each other.' (Volume 3, Collected Works of Marx and Engels, ibid)

'The abolition of private property is therefore the complete emancipation of all human senses and qualities, but it is this emancipation precisely because these senses and attributes have become, subjectively and objectively, human.' (ibid)

The struggle against bourgeois idealist pressure in the everyday work of the Party — Dangers of a reluctance to analyse the results of the Party's practice — The negative role of administration and routine departmental work as things in themselves — The need for a constant struggle against 'blind activism', which without critical analysis relays bourgeois ideology into the Party. (See Political Letters Nos.7 and 3/7)

'Every individual is connected by thousands of transitions with other kinds of individuals (things, phenomena, processes), etc. Here already we have the elements, the germs, the concepts of necessity, of objective connection in nature etc.' — How such objective connections, without critical analysis, can become a centre for the generation of bourgeois ideology inside the Party.

'The distinction,' writes Lenin, 'between subjectivism (scepticism, sophistry, etc) and dialectics, incidentally, is that in (objective) dialectics the difference between the relative and the absolute is itself relative. For objective dialectics there is an absolute within the relative. For subjectivism and sophistry the relative is only relative and excludes the absolute.' (Collected Works, Volume 38, p.360)

How we can apprehend, through dialectical theory as a guide to practice, the absolute within the relative.

3. Disclosing the 'cell' of dialectics

'Thus,' writes Lenin 'in any proposition we can (and must) disclose as in a "nucleus" ("cell") the germs of all the elements of dialectics, and thereby show that dialectics is a property of all human knowledge in general.' (Collected Works, Volume 38, pp361-362)

A 'proposition' as the source of sensation contains IDENTITY, which is Positive — How in their self-relation, this Positive Identity is negated through the image of sensation into its own Negative DIFFERENCE. The unity of Positive and Negative in their self-relation constitutes ESSENCE — within this Essence Identity is Relative whilst Difference is Absolute — 'Essence' as Ground 'is a movement through different moments, absolute self mediation ...'

IDENTITY — DIFFERENCE — CONTRADICTION
(ANTI-THESIS)

Sub-divisions of ESSENCE are SEMBLANCE, APPEARANCE, ACTUALITY: analysed in their interconnection with the development of the 'Notion' and the 'practical idea'. (Lenin's Collected Works, Volume 38, p.130)

How through analysis these become the 'nucleus' 'cell' of the new proposition leading to the leap to the abstract notion and its positive in the theoretical idea which generates the driving force of the practice through the Notion of the 'practical idea'. (See box on top of p.143, Volume 38).

How 'human knowledge is not (or does not follow) a straight line, but a curve, which endlessly approximates a series of circles, a spiral' (Volume 38, p.363). How the dialectical relation between subject and object manifests itself through this 'spiral' — 'each new coil of the spiral repeats the preceding one but at a higher level' (Dictionary of Philosophy, Moscow 1984, p.398)

4. The Syllogism of Necessity

Lenin quotes Hegel approvingly (Volume 38, p.177): 'All things are a syllogism, a universal which is bound together with individuality through particularity; but of course they are not wholes consisting of three propositions.' — Hegel's analysis of syllogisms consists of 'INDIVIDUAL, PARTICULAR, UNIVERSAL'. I.P.U. (Volume 38, p.178)

'In reality,' wrote Hegel, 'subjectivity is only a stage of development from Being and Essence whereupon this subjectivity "dialectically breaks through its Barrier" and "opens out to objectivity by means of the syllogism".'

Lenin comments: 'Very profound and clever! The laws of Logic are the reflections of the objective in the subjective consciousness of man.' (Volume 38, p.183)

'The world is the other being of the idea,' emphasises Hegel, with Lenin insisting, 'subjectivity (or the Notion) and the object — are the same and not the same.' (Volume 38, p.184)

Lenin quotes Hegel approvingly ... 'It is wrong to regard subjectivity and objectivity as a fixed and abstract anti-thesis. Both are wholly dialectical.'

The syllogism of Necessity is manifested in the National March May 18-June 30.

a) The demand 'Release the Jailed Miners' manifests the connection with the world economic and political crisis and its effect upon the Individual in the conflict between the working class and the state.

b) 'Reinstate the Sacked Miners' is the Particular which faces the individual when he is released from jail or if he is convicted.

c) 'FIGHT PIT CLOSURES' are the universal tasks which face all miners.

d) This means all-out conflict with the 'anti-union laws'.

e) Which is inseparable from the struggle against 'scab labour schemes for youth'.

The theory of the Workers Revolutionary Party and tactics in the British socialist revolution

TUTOR PETER JONES

1. A study of Lenin's 'What is to be Done?'

a) The struggle for revolutionary theory versus 'freedom of criticism' The slogan 'freedom of criticism' as a 'veritable war-cry' (Lenin's Collected Works, Volume 5, p.350) — a declaration of war on democratic centralism and revolutionary theory. 'Freedom of criticism' is the beginning of the opportunist liquidation of the revolutionary movement.

'He who does not deliberately close his eyes cannot fail to see that the new "critical" trend in socialism is nothing more nor less than a new variety of opportunism. And if we judge people, not by the glittering uniforms they don or by the high-sounding appellations they give themselves, but by their actions and by what they actually advocate, it will be clear that "freedom of criticism" means freedom for an opportunist trend in Social-Democracy, freedom to convert Social-Democracy into a democratic party of reform, freedom to introduce bourgeois ideas and bourgeois elements into socialism.' (Volume 5, p.354-335)

Lenin explains how 'the very same social and political content of modern international opportunism reveals itself in a variety of ways according to national peculiarities'. (Volume 5, p.360)

The importance of the theoretical struggle — opposition to theory ('anti-theory') as capitulation to bourgeois ideology.

'Without revolutionary theory there can be no revolutionary movement. This idea cannot be insisted upon too strongly at a time when the fashionable preaching of opportunism goes hand in hand with an infatuation for the narrowest forms of practical activity.' (Volume 5, p.369)

b) The spontaneity of the masses and revolutionary consciousness Lenin explains that 'the "spontaneous element", in essence, represents nothing more nor less than consciousness in an embryonic form'. (Volume 5, p.374)

The spontaneous movement represents 'the class struggle in embryo, but only in embryo'. (Volume 5, p.375)

'We have said that there could not have been Social-Democratic consciousness among the workers. It would have to be brought to them from without. The history of all countries shows that the working class, exclusively by its own effort, is able to develop only trade-union consciousness, i.e., the conviction that it is necessary to combine in unions, fight the employers, and strive to compel the government to pass necessary labour legislation etc. The theory of socialism, however, grew out of the philosophic, historical, and economic theories elaborated by educated representatives of the propertied classes, by intellectuals. By their social status, the founders of modern scientific socialism, Marx and Engels, themselves belonged to the bourgeois intelligentsia.' (Volume 5, p.375)

The revolutionary situation in Britain and the dangers of 'bowing to spontaneity'.

'And so, we have become convinced that the fundamental error committed by the "new trend" in Russian Social-Democracy is its bowing to spontaneity and its failure to understand that the spontaneity of the masses demands a high degree of consciousness from us Social-Democrats. The greater the spontaneous upsurge of the masses and the more widespread the movement, the more rapid, incomparably so, the demand for greater consciousness in the theoretical, political, and organisational work of Social-Democracy.' (Volume 5, p.396)

2. The Workers Revolutionary Party and the United Front tactic

a) The revolutionary identity of the Party is the heart of the United Front

The task of the Communist Party is to lead the proletarian revolution. In order to summon the proletariat for the direct conquest of power and to achieve it the Communist Party must base itself on the overwhelming majority of the working class. So long as it does not hold this majority, the Party must fight to win it. The Party can achieve this only by remaining an absolutely independent organisation with a clear programme and strict internal discipline.' ('On the United Front', in First Five Years of the Communist International, Volume 2, p.91)

b) The United Front tactic: 'the most important method in the struggle for the masses'. (Trotsky's Writings on Britain, Volume 2)

The United Front tactic is a method for building the WRP in struggle against reformism and Stalinism:

'A basic principle of this tactic is: "With the masses — always; with the vacillating leaders — sometimes, but only so long as they stand at the head of the masses." It is necessary to make use of vacillating leaders while the masses are pushing them ahead, without for a moment abandoning criticism of these leaders. And it is necessary to break with them at the right time when they turn from vacillation to hostile action and betrayal. It is necessary to use the occasion of the break to expose the traitorous leaders and to contrast their position to that of the masses. It is precisely in this that the revolutionary essence of the United Front policy consists. Without this, the struggle for the masses always threatens to turn into an opportunist kowtowing to spontaneity covered up by an in-no-way-binding criticism of opportunism in words alone.' (Trotsky's Writings on Britain, Volume 2, p.191)

The revolutionary tactic of the United Front versus Stalinist 'social fascism' and 'Popular Frontism'.

The significance and lessons of the National March to Release the Jailed Miners for the campaign for the United Front today.

3. Trotskyism and the crisis of Stalinism

The counter-revolutionary role of international Stalinism; the rise of the Stalinist bureaucracy — a product of the delay in the world revolution; Trotskyism — the continuation of Leninism — versus Stalinism; permanent revolution versus socialism in one country and peaceful co-existence with capitalism; the lessons of the 1926 General Strike and the Stalinist betrayals of the 1930s; the revolutionary tactic of the United Front versus social fascism and Popular Frontism; the Stalinist distortion of the Marxist theory of the state; the permanent revolution and the crisis of Stalinism today; the split within British Stalinism; Stalinism and the miners' strike.

4. The struggle for power in Britain: the decisive revolutionary role of the Workers Revolutionary Party

The Workers Revolutionary Party — the subjective factor of the British socialist revolution; the building of the WRP and the Young Socialists — the struggle for revolutionary leadership in the working class against reformism, Stalinism and revisionism; Marxism versus spontaneity; the necessity of cadre training; strategy and tactics in the struggle for power; the significance of the National March to Release the Jailed Miners; the development of the campaign in the trade unions and the Labour Party for support for the demands of the march; the smashing of the capitalist state and the dictatorship of the proletariat; the struggle for the General Strike, Community Councils (Soviets) and a Workers Revolutionary Government.

Walter switches to Primo Dominie

THE HIGHLIGHT of today's racing is the Vernons Sprint Cup at HAYDOCK, in which Walter Swinburne has deserted Royal Ascot winner Dafayna in favour of her stable companion Primo Dominie (3.15).

Dafayna was most impressive at Ascot, where she quickened clear in the final furlong of the Cork and Orrery stakes to beat Gabatit by seven lengths, with Grey Desire over five lengths back in sixth, and Sharp

On the strength of that run, the filly started second favourite behind Never So Bold in the Nicros July Cup at Newmarket, where she finished third, beaten two-and-a-half lengths and short head, by went on to win the King George Stakes at Goodwood and run second to Never So Bold in the William Hill Sprint championship at York, where he was clearly beaten two lengths.

There is clearly little between Michael Stoute's duo, but, with the benefit of a recent outing under his belt, Primo Dominie may just come out on top this time.

The John Smith's Brewery Handicap may go to the Pat Haslam-trained Virgin Isle (2.45).

The four-year-old had three lengths to spare over Tantino at Newmarket last time out, and is taken to defy his penalty.

Notts pair want 'the big one'

RICHARD HADLEE ... New Zealander still wants a Trophy win to add to his career successes

KEITH FLETCHER ... Essex got better

CLIVE RICE and Richard Hadlee, Nottinghamshire's two great all-rounders, are determined to make up for their admittedly poor showing in the 1982 Benson Final when they spearhead their side's first appearance in the NatWest final at Lord's today.

Rice says: 'Ever since that disastrous day against Somerset, we have made it a point to produce something special in the county championship when we have been to Lord's.

'This time we are not going to let the occasion get the better of us — we are well prepared.'

Victory would be a marvellous finale to Rice's benefit season, but Hadlee, the 34-years-old New Zealander, goes into the game with equal determination.

He says: 'I have achieved just about everything I set out to do in my career, but I badly want this big one. Clive and I are not getting any younger, so we are set on

'We seem to be the underdogs, but that suits me fine. Nobody will be complacent.

'Our bowlers have done well under pressure and that will be the name of the game. I'll be quite happy to bowl my 12 overs and come out with nought for 30. I reckon that's as good as three for fifty.'

Keith Fletcher, Essex's hard-bitten leader, acknowledges the potential of Rice and Hadlee, but is as much concerned about Notts' top batting.

'They have fine openers in England men Chris Broad and Tim Robinson, while Derek Randall's form over the season emphasises what a menace he can be.

'Still, John Lever has shown over the years that he can whip out the very best batsmen at the start of one-day innings and we have our threat at the top of the order in Graham Gooch, whose 50 innings this summer have produced 25 scores of 50 or more.'

Syd's figures speak for themselves

DAVID LAWRENCE ... Stamina

DAVID 'SYD' LAWRENCE, the 21-year-old Gloucestershire fast bowler who created so much Test speculation during the summer, was capped by county captain David Graveney on Thursday. He hopes a country cap will follow this winter.

Alec Bedser, one of the selectors, went to Bristol this week to see the tall Frank Bruno look-alike, but rain prevented Lawrence taking the field in the first two days of Gloucestershire's match with Northants.

He will still feature largely on the agenda when the selectors meet on September 19 to discuss the squad for the Caribbean winter tour.

Lawrence is almost certainly booked for the 'B' tour of Bangladesh, Sri Lanka and Zimbabwe, but the arguments for him making the senior grade are most compelling. Just ask Bert Avery, the man who keeps the figures for Gloucestershire.

His books show Lawrence has not missed a match in the county's championship challenge. He has taken 82 wickets and borne the brunt of the attack, bowling 515 overs to date.

More importantly, he has shown incredible stamina — Avery's figures show the 6ft 4inches powerhouse has bowled 11 spells of ten overs or more.

Recently against Warwickshire, at Cheltenham, he fought back after a disappointing opening session of nought for 48 from 14 overs, to take three for 47 in a second spell.

He also shatters the myth that fast bowlers only prefer to strike when the ball is new, hard and bouncy.

Of his 82 wickets, 38 have come in his first spell in an innings, equally 38 have come in his second, and six more have followed on the occasions when he has been recalled into the attack for a third time.

Graveney needs no more convincing of his player's pedigree. 'Ideally I'd like to use him every time in five-over spells, but it's difficult to get the ball off him.

Like Notts, Essex are grateful for the chance to erase the memory of a rough performance in a Lord's final.

They had this year's Benson final under control before letting it slip to Leicestershire.

Fletcher says: 'We have got better as the season has gone on and we have shown great character in reaching this final. We are not going to let it slip again.'

Notts seamer Kevin Saxelby has recovered from a shoulder injury which has sidelined him for two weeks, and is fit for today's final.

Revival at Kenilworth Road

HATTERS' STEEL RIM

BY MATTHEW NUGENT

THERE are signs at Kenilworth Road already this season that Luton's days of struggling in Division One are over.

Now the fight is on to challenge the Division's big boys for the honours — and the belief that the Hatters can win something this time has convinced several of their star players to stay with the club.

Challenge

'Ricky (Hill) and I certainly contemplated parting company with Luton during the summer,' Brian Stein admitted this week. 'But manager David Pleat convinced us that the club would challenge for honours this season.'

'And while we haven't set the First Division alight in recent weeks, the signs are that we have the squad which can go places this season.'

Why Stein and Hill stayed on

RICKY HILL was persuaded by manager DAVID PLEAT to stay with Luton

Chelsea make the short trip up the M1 to Luton for an 11a.m. kick-off. Stein is convinced that the Londoners will give his club the kind of workout that could really entertain the fans.

'Chelsea are a dangerous side, and now that Kerry Dixon has scored his first goal of the season he will be anxious to add to his tally against us,' added Stein.

'But while I think we are playing the kind of football the fans want to see, we have added a little steel to our all-round game. We won't be a pushover for anybody.'

Pleat's policy of buying talented youngsters and throwing them in at the deep end in recent seasons looks like paying dividends this year.

Goalkeeper Andy Dibble is a case in point, as is central defender Paul Elliott, who is set to return today after a two-match absence with an ankle injury, midfielder David Preece and striker Chukwuemeka Nwajobi.

Chance

Indeed Stein was plucked from non-League football at Edgware and given his chance by Luton.

'I suppose that is another factor that had to be taken into consideration when I thought about leaving during the summer,' added Stein.

'Luton had, after all, given me my chance and they have always been good to me.'

Stein's loyalty could be rewarded this season with Luton certain to make soccer fans throughout the country sit up and take notice over the coming months.

BRIAN STEIN . . . Decided to stay and fight for honours

Chris meets Geordie pals

But there'll be no favours

TOTTENHAM striker Chris Waddle admits that he will be stepping into the unknown when he comes up against his old Newcastle team-mates at White Hart Lane this afternoon.

'It will be the first time anything like facing old pals has happened to me, so I don't really know how it will feel,' said the 24-year-old Geordie, who joined Spurs for £590,000 in the summer.

'It will be nice to see the Newcastle lads again, but they are certainly not going to give me anything for being an old mate and the same goes for me. Of course I have been watching their results this season. After all, I was part of the club for quite a few years and most of the players are people I have worked alongside for two or three years.'

Apart from wanting to put one over his old club, Waddle is also aware that a good showing could win him a place in the England team for next week's World Cup qualifier against Rumania.

'With the England game coming up, a good performance would be nicely-timed, though when you are new to a team, you have got to give most of your thoughts to settling in there. Keeping an England place will be a bonus.'

Although he made a marvellous start to his Spurs' career by scoring twice on his debut, Waddle was less than satisfied with his contribution to this week's 4-1 win against Chelsea.

'Wednesday night was the first time I had played wide and I wasn't too happy with my own performance, but it's a question of learning the Tottenham style and that can take time.'

'But I have enjoyed the way the manager is giving me a bit of freedom. He believes I have got the beating of most full-backs and has told me to go on and beat them.'

Glenn Hoddle, who has been under treatment for a groin strain, should be fit for the game against Newcastle, whose vice-captain Kenny Wharton was ruled out after twisting a knee in training yesterday.

Rob McKinnon, a 19-year-old Scottish full-back was called up and could make his debut. Newcastle are also set to recall Alan Davies, out of action since the opening day of the season with a pulled hamstring.

CHRIS WADDLE . . . First experience of meeting old pals

■ EVERTON, not surprisingly, retain the new striking partnership of Graeme Sharp and Gary Lineker when they face QPR at Loftus Road.

Manager Howard Kendall hopes to name an unchanged team, but must wait for fitness checks on Kevin Ratcliffe (toe injury), Pete Reid (hamstring), Derek Mountfield (calf) and Pat van den Hauwe (virus).

■ IPSWICH have again delayed a decision on the return of Terry Butcher after a cartilage operation, but the England centre half looks likely to play at bottom-of-the-table West Bromwich.

Striker Garth Crooks, a

£100,000 signing from Spurs, played only 18 minutes of the first game of the season, but should be back as the Throstles attempt to halt a run of five successive defeats.

■ LUTHER BLISSET is again a substitute at Liverpool, who are unchanged with the recovery of Jan Molby from a groin strain.

■ WEST HAM'S Tony Gale, Alan Devonshire and Ray Stewart will have fitness tests before their match at Sheffield Wednesday.

■ BIRMINGHAM could include 17-year-old apprentice Julian Dicks for the local derby against Aston Villa.

Sandy loses SFA appeal

HEARTS' striker Sandy Clark yesterday lost his appeal against the three-match suspension imposed on him by the Scottish FA last week. Clark, ordered off along with clubmate Walter Kidd and Ally McCoist of Rangers on August 24, had earlier gone to court to have the ban quashed.

After that failed, he appealed to the SFA, while Kidd decided to accept his punishment.

■ CELTIC set out on a revenge mission to Easter Road today following their shock defeat by Hibernian in the Skol Cup at the same ground on Wednesday.

Manager David Hay said: 'I would like to see the excitement of Wednesday repeated — but with a different outcome.'

He has lost Mo Johnston, through injury, and Murdo MacLeod and Davie Provan face fitness tests.

Line-up

■ RANGERS will have midfielder Dougie Bell back in the line-up to face St Mirren at Ibrox. He takes over for Dave McKinnon, while Robert Fleck replaces the suspended McCoist.

■ CHAMPIONS Aberdeen face Hearts for the second time in four days at Pittodrie with a pair of 18-year-olds — midfielder Steven Gray and striker Paul Wright — added to their squad.

You must play

INJURY-HIT Brighton had their attempt to postpone today's Second Division game against Blackburn blocked by the Football League yesterday.

Brighton have nine players on the treatment table, but manager Chris Cattlin failed to convince the League that he could not field a side. Now he will ask captain Danny Wilson and striker Alan Biley to ignore painful back injuries and on-loan defence Martin Keown to play with a swollen knee.

Six others have no chance. Justin Fashanu (knee operation), Chris Hutchings (broken arm), Gerry Ryan (broken leg), Steve Gattling (pelvic operation), Terry Connor (broken foot) and Eric Young (knee) have given the club its worst crisis for years.

INJURY-HIT BRIGHTON TOLD

'Brighton sounded us out, but we pointed out that it is League policy not to allow postponements for injury, only for an epidemic,' said a League spokesman. 'Once we put them in the picture they accepted the situation.'

Brighton have extended Sheffield Wednesday defender Galvin Oliver's loan spell for a second month.

■ DARLINGTON'S Third Division match against Bury has been called off. The injury and illness crisis which caused Tuesday's Milk Cup tie at Scunthorpe to be called off, has not improved.

Darlington have four fit players.

McMahon signs for Liverpool

STEVE McMAHON, whose cost Aston Villa £300,000 when they signed him from Everton just over two years ago, finally achieved his ambition yesterday by returning to his native Merseyside to sign for Liverpool.

The club's new player-manager Kenny Dalglish ended weeks of speculation by signing the powerful midfielder for around £350,000.

It was his first major signing and he said: 'It takes a lot to make a good player, and Steve is a good player. We will let him settle in and if he tries his best, he will be good enough for us.'

The deal came too late for McMahon to be considered for today's Anfield clash with Watford.

Middlesex leapfrog two places

MIDDLESEX leapfrogged over both Hampshire and Gloucestershire yesterday to go top of the county championship table.

While Middlesex beat Leicestershire by ten wickets at Grace Road, Hampshire could only draw with Kent at Folkestone and Gloucestershire were foiled by a last-wicket Northamptonshire stand at Bristol.

Middlesex owed their victory mainly to burly West Indian pace bowler Wayne Daniel, who took seven wickets for 62 as Leicestershire were dismissed for 185 in their second innings.

This left Middlesex needing 46 for victory and Wilf Slack and Keith Brown knocked off the runs in 14.1 overs.

The sudden switch of fortunes in the table make for an interesting and exciting finale to the season.

Hampshire are only two points behind Middlesex. They declared their second innings at 156 for five and left Kent 231 to win in a minimum of 62 overs.

At first it looked as if Hampshire would win in comfort for they had Kent struggling at 47 for four in the first 19 overs. But then Chris Cowdrey (39) and Eldine Baptiste (68) put on 110 for the fifth wicket and Kent, who finished on 172 for seven, easily held out for the draw.

Result

Gloucestershire, desperately needing a victory to maintain their championship challenge, tried hard to produce a result with the cooperation of Northamptonshire captain Geoff Cook.

First Gloucestershire took their first innings total to 228. Cook then forfeited Northamptonshire's first innings and Gloucestershire made 16 without loss in their second, before declaring, leaving their rivals to make 245 in 66 overs.

Northamptonshire slumped to 164 for nine with nine overs to go, but Neil Mallender (43 not out) and Jim Griffiths (one not out) hung on for a draw.

Surrey's outside change of winning the title disappeared when they were beaten by three wickets by Sussex at The Oval, while Worcestershire beat Somerset by 124 runs at Worcester.

REDS SIZZLING

OXFORD UNITED travel to Old Trafford this afternoon, the latest team to try and put a stop to Manchester United's incredible start to the new season.

Ron Atkinson's marauding Red Devils have already accumulated maximum points from their first six matches, conceding just two goals in the process and taking a five-point lead on nearest rivals Everton.

They are half-way towards surpassing the record of 11 set by Tottenham at the beginning of their double season of 1960-1961. Atkinson claimed yesterday: 'The way we are playing now, we could keep our 100-per-cent record intact for a long time.'

'We have not only won our first six matches, we have had six quality performances. Everyone is keen to knock us off our perch and every game has a cup tie atmosphere, but that has never been any different at Old Trafford.'

United's defender Paul McGrath said: 'While other teams have been slowly finding their form this season, we have clicked from the kick-off.'

'United have been threatening for the past two seasons to set the League Championship alight — it looks as if we have finally begun to sizzle,' added McGrath.

United's impressive start to the season has meant that Old Trafford has been packed on the three occasions there has been League fixtures there. The 51,102 that turned up on Wednesday night when they defeated Newcastle 3-0 brought the total so far this season to an incredible 151,618.

'The fans must sense that this could well be United's season,' added McGrath. 'And right now I cannot see any team stopping our run so far.'

Oxford, having lost their last three matches, don't appear to have the strength to hold off another United onslaught. Morale appears to be low at the Manor Ground.

After Tuesday night's 5-1 hammering at Coventry, defender David Langan said: 'The club have got to buy two or three players soon or we could very well be swamped in this, the club's first season in Division One.'

'We have got a good squad at Oxford, but it's just not good enough for the First Division. The club has got to be prepared to buy in at least a couple of proven players if we are to hold on to our new-found status this season.'

United don't have that problem, and unless there is one of the first major shocks of the season, Old Trafford should be celebrating another three League Championship points this evening.

PAUL ALLEN (above) crossed London from West Ham during the summer to join Chris Waddle as an important new signing for Tottenham Hotspur. In their first match of the season, both scored against Watford. But since then there have been some erratic performances from the star-studded squad. Today they come up against
