South African whites DESPERATE FOR A DEAL

BY ALEX MITCHELL

LUSAKA — A delegation of top white South African businessmen yesterday flew to a game reserve in Zambia for secret talks with Oliver Tambo, president of the banned African National Congress (ANC).

The ANC leaders have gone into the talks without any mandate from the oppressed black masses and while Botha's security forces are murdering, torturing and locking up countless workers and youth.

Three weeks ago, President Botha said he was 'crossing the Rubicon' when he announced insulting cosmetic changes to his racist regime.

It can equally be said that the ANC leadership has now crossed its Rubicon and exposed itself in front of the masses for this act of monumental class collaboration.

The parties to yesterday's talks, the white captains of commerce and industry and Tambo's ANC, are both desperate to head off the mass movement and prevent revolution.

Their meeting was hosted by Zambia's President Kenneth Kaunda acting in close collaboration with the Reagan administration and the Thatcher government.

Kaunda is desperately trying to repeat the treachery he carried out against the armed struggle for the liberation of Zimbabwe from the racist rule of Ian Smith.

In 1979, when he hosted the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference in Lusaka, Kaunda and the other 'front-line' leaders forced the ZANU and ZAPU freedom fighters to suspend their armed struggle and enter the trap of the Lancaster House talks in London.

The outcome was a British-imposed constitution which left the Rhodesian capitalist state intact and provided an inbuilt guarantee for the white minority to retain their privileges and power.

The Pretoria delegation to the Mfuwe holiday resort, 300 miles east of Lusaka, includes some of the most powerful figures in the white business community. They are:

GAVIN RELLY, chairman of the Anglo American Corporation, South

MIKE ROSHOLT of Barlow Rand, the mining conglomerate which took over the UK company J. Bibby and Sons earlier this year;

HUGH MURRAY, publisher of the quarterly business magazine 'Leadership S.A.'

Conference

As yesterday's talks got underway in Zambia, the Botha regime prohibited a major church conference which was to have been addressed by Bishop Desmond Tutu.

The World Conference on Religion and Peace had planned to hold a mass gathering in Soweto this weekend.

Earlier, Tutu dismissed

a call by the President's Council for the abolition of pass laws which restrict the movement of blacks.

He said they were 'piecemeal reforms', adding: 'I don't want apartheid reformed, I want it dismantled.'

The Botha regime yesterday appointed top Swiss banker, Fritz Leutwiler, former head of the Bank of International Settlements, as its foreign debt negotiator.

Pretoria's overseas debt is estimated at $22 billion, of which $12 billion is short-term repayable this year.

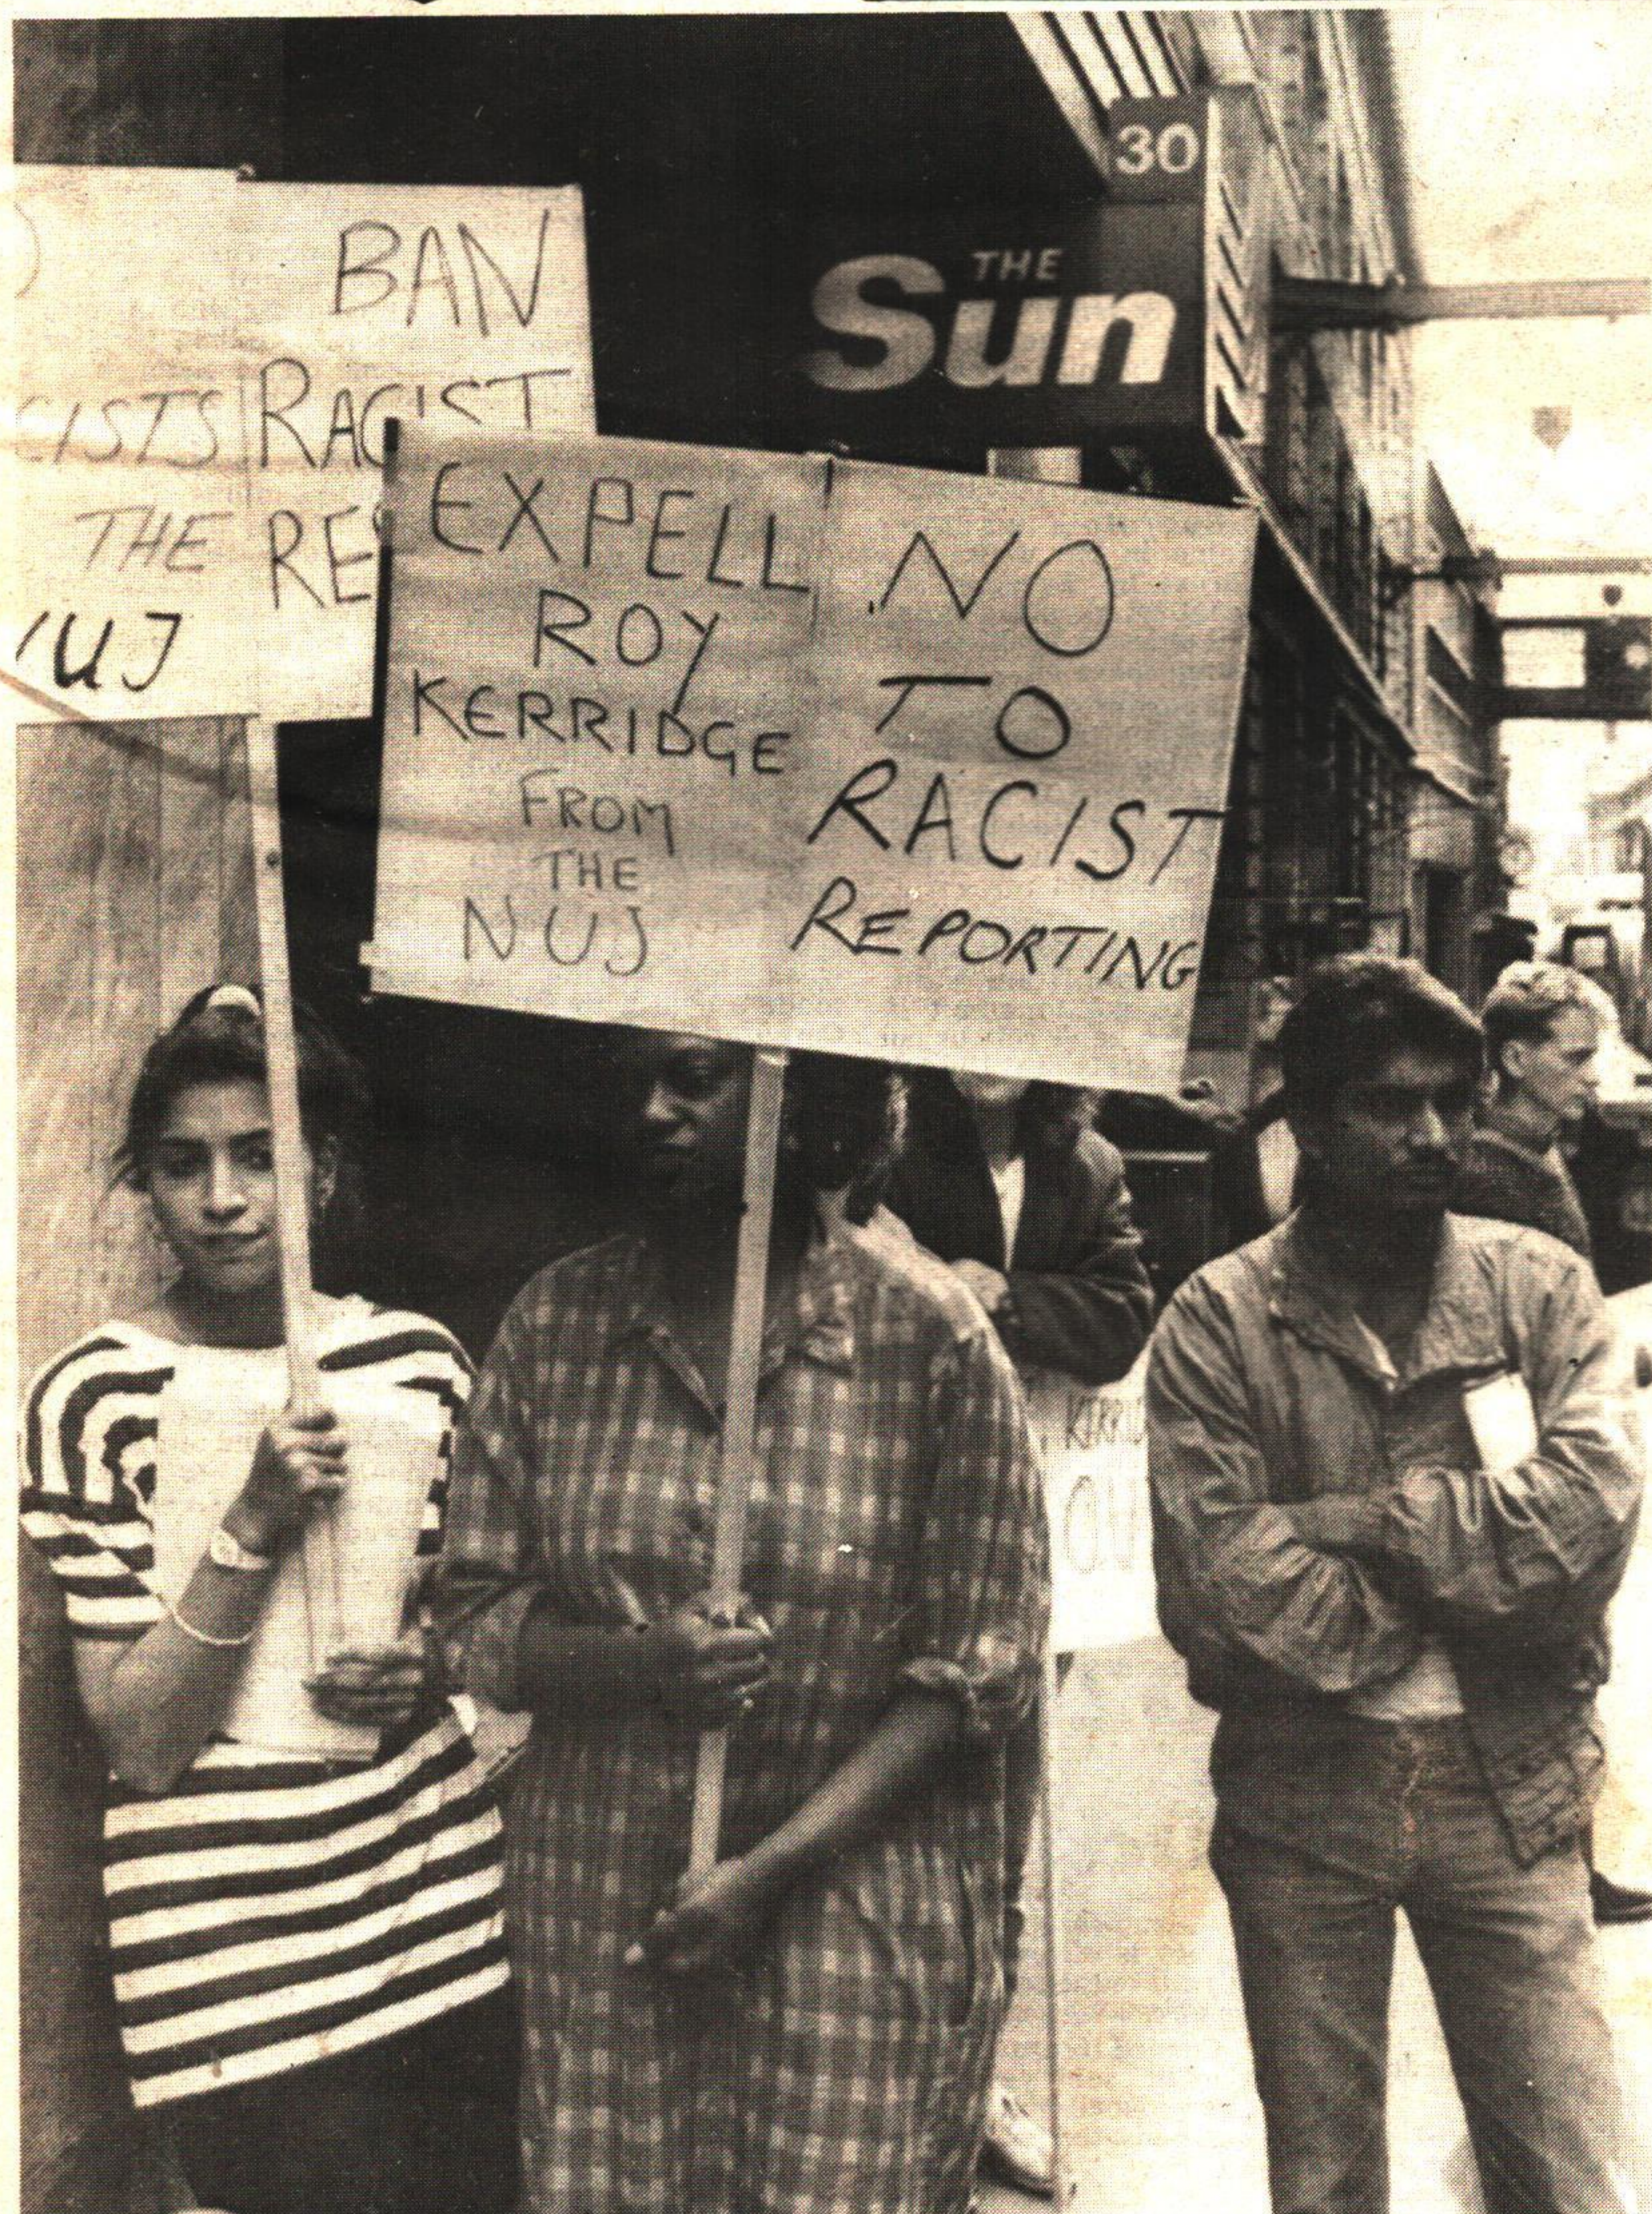

Two weeks ago the regime placed a four-month suspension on debt repayments and Leutwiler's job will be to organise a rescheduling operation with British, West European and US banks.

With the racist regime on the rack of economic crisis and a mounting offensive by the black working class, we say:

● No talks with the Botha regime or its business henchmen!

● Arm the African workers!

● Victory to the socialist revolution in Azania!

Pit review talks break down

TALKS between the National Coal Board and the three mining unions on establishing a new colliery review procedure to deal with proposed pit closures broke down yesterday.

The sticking point in the ninth round of talks on the issue was the composition of the proposed review body, said an NCB spokesman afterwards.

The unions are insisting that the review panel should consist of a judge and a barrister, but the NCB is insisting on a larger body.

Although no new date has been set for further talks, NCB industrial relations chief Kevan Hunt said the board was 'willing to meet further to resolve this one outstanding issue'.

Jailed scab leader sacked

SCAB miners' leader Ken Foulstone, now serving a three-month jail sentence for burglary, will be sacked but can apply to get his job back, the Coal Board said yesterday.

NCB rules state that any miner jailed for more than 21 days must be dismissed because he would be in breach of contract by not being available for work.

Re-apply

An NCB spokesman said: 'Miners dismissed in this way can, of course, reapply for their job when they are released, but whether they are offered a job will depend on the circumstances under which they were sent to prison, and on whether there is a job available.'

Foulstone, who took court action against the NUM with fellow scab leader Robert Taylor, was convicted of stealing silverware and antiques worth more than £1,600 from a bungalow in Doncaster in 1977.

Peace camp blockade plan

PROTESTERS at a peace camp outside Faslane base in Scotland have called for a mass blockade of the base next Monday.

Faslane is the proposed home port for the multi-billion pound Trident submarine.

The blockade is called to coincide with the 24th anniversary of a blockade of the US Polaris submarine base on the Holy Loch in 1961, where over 300 people were arrested.

The blockade is the first of a series of seven actions planned for the next 18 months in the Rainbow Campaign.

Jobs swindle

SACKFULS of mail from hundreds of desperate people poured in when two swindlers advertised jobs for salesmen in 30 newspapers around the country.

Charge

They tried to charge £150 to each applicant. But the jobs, offered with a basic £8,500 salary, a car and bonuses, did not exist.

When detectives arrived at the company Eagle Electronics which was claimed to be part of a giant American business corporation they found it was operating from one small rented office.

'There was nothing to sell. There was no sales force and no market position to maintain. Eagle Electronics was just a name,' said Colin Pitt, prosecuting at the Old Bailey.

Victims of the swindle were told they were coming in on the ground floor of a completely new company.

They were asked to pay £150 and attend a three-day seminar.

One man even gave up a job in an unemployment blackspot because the prospect sounded so good, said Pitt. Now he was jobless.

Brian Hill, 47 of Cheshire, and Russell Ruddiman, 47, of Leeds, both admitted conspiracy to defraud.

Cashed

Police moved in before any of the cheques could be cashed and the only losers were hotels booked for bogus job interviews and never paid. They were owed between £3,000 and £4,000, said Pitt.

The two men will be sentenced on Monday.

Drive September fund total up this weekend

DON'T let it go any more. Raise extra amounts this weekend and boost our total. It only stands at £63.18 which is much too low for this time of the month. Please send in every amount you can.

It is the time to stand firm against Thatcher and her attacks. From all quarters the movement builds up against the government — from the youth and from all sections of the working class who are determined to fight back against the state attacks on jobs, services and basic democratic rights.

Use the News Line to give a revolutionary lead in this period. Build up support for our paper everywhere. Step up the campaign to collect this month's fund. Post your donations to:

£100,000 Emergency Fund

THIS is a critical week for our £100,000 Emergency Fund. We are issuing an urgent appeal today to every party member and reader of the daily News Line to help us complete our target in good order.

So far we have raised over £70,000 and we extend our warmest thanks to all those comrades and friends who have made contributions. But frankly we have a long way still to go and no time to lose in raising the outstanding amount.

This weekend is decisive. Every member and reader must be visited and extra collections should be made in all areas to boost our total.

The revolt by youth in Handsworth this week demonstrates the powerful resistance of the working class to the Thatcher government, its slump policies of mass unemployment and the unrestrained violence of the police.

And it is not confined to one suburb of Birmingham. In all the inner-city areas the ruthless policies of the government are creating a powder-keg atmosphere and the conditions for class confrontation on an unprecedented scale.

Youth in Handsworth and other socially deprived areas who are rebelling against mass unemployment are in a common struggle with the black South African masses who are dealing mortal blows to the hated apartheid regime.

We insist that the Thatcher government will not be brought down through sporadic explosions of anger in urban areas, but through the mobilisation of the whole working class in a General Strike.

Our fund must be completed so that the Workers Revolutionary Party, the Young Socialists and the daily News Line are equipped for the historic task of giving revolutionary leadership to the working class in the struggle for power.

Can we have a sustained effort this weekend? If you have not yet contributed, please make a donation. If you have, dig even deeper, make a further sacrifice to ensure the success of our fund.

Yesterday we received £157.85 from the following branches:

BBC £20; Willesden £20; Vauxhall £10; Runcorn £1.50; Scotland Road £5; Speke £15; East Leeds £75; Blidworth £5; Norwich South £6; Exeter £9.35.

The grand total is now: £70,427.23. Please send off your donations today to: WRP Emergency Fund, 21B Old Town, Clapham, London SW4 0JT.

JOCK STEIN

THOUSANDS MOURN STEIN

TEN thousand people lined the streets of Glasgow yesterday to pay their last respects to Scottish football legend Jock Stein.

Many fans, young and old, wept openly as the funeral cortege made its way through the city.

The 62-year-old Scotland manager died on Tuesday night after collapsing at the end of Scotland's world cup qualifying match with Wales at Cardiff.

His widow, Jean, son George and daughter Rae were joined in mourning yesterday by the top names in British football, past and present.

Rock star Rod Stewart was also among the mourners and Scotland's captain, Graeme Souness, who now plays for Sampdoria, flew in from Italy.

After the service at Linn crematorium, England manager Bobby Robson said: 'He was a man with dignity and a touch of class. No one is irreplaceable, but of all the managers in football he will be one of the most difficult to replace. He will be missed terribly.'

'Jock Stein was an ordinary man and yet he was a special man. The turnout today is a mark of respect to him. On the way here there were thousands lining the road. It was very impressive, very moving.'

Tory funds frozen in S. African bank

A TORY council which tried to make a quick profit on rate-payers' money in South Africa has had its funds frozen by the apartheid regime's banks.

Now, the councillors at Kettering Borough Council have had to take out a large loan to cover the funds deposited in the Nedbank Limited Company in August.

The cash, earmarked for a rate precept payment to Northamptonshire County Council, was surplus to immediate requirements.

But South Africa has introduced a standstill period of at least four months on all foreign debt repayments.

The council has refused to disclose how much money is involved, but it is believed the sum could be as much as £1 million.

Council treasurer Peter Candlin said yesterday: 'The council will be fully compensated for the loan we have been forced to take out. At this stage we don't think it necessary to publicly disclose how much is involved.'

JAKARTA — OPEC's power as a key oil producer and regulator had declined from its peak in the 1970s, Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto said yesterday in comments on its 25th anniversary today.

He warned that the world was heading towards 'an oil crunch' and a new cycle of scarcity unless there was co-operation in stabilising prices and production.

Subroto's warning came in the wake of a threat by Ecuador, the smallest member, to pull out unless it is allowed to pump more oil.

Ecuador's threat will dominate the emergency meeting of OPEC ministers scheduled for October 3, in addition to a host of other pricing and output problems.

Subroto, chairman of OPEC's Market Monitoring Committee, said: 'We've got to admit it. But you can't rule us out completely in the oil market.'

'My message is that we continue to seek dialogue with non-OPEC producers and consumers to work for stability of the oil market in the next 25 years.'

'Gradually we are moving to another part of the cycle from scarcity to glut to scarcity again.'

He reminded non-bloc members that they were not discovering as much oil as they were producing and that OPEC still held two-thirds of the world's reserve.

But he added: 'If we are not careful, it could be sooner rather than later — an oil crunch,' he said.

Fears for the state of the market run so deep that the organisation has planned no ceremony to mark the 25th of its recently turbulent years.

The squabbling OPEC members have discovered also that from once dominating even the 'Seven Sisters' — Exxon, Texaco, Royal/Dutch Shell, Mobil, Gulf Oil, British Petroleum and Standard Oil of California — they are now under threat of being outwitted through complex trading deals with them.

The Saudi Arabian kingdom helped worsen the fears when London oil traders revealed this week that Riyadh had made a deal with Exxon Corporation, Texaco Incorporated, Mobil Corporation, the Royal Dutch/Shell Group and Mitsubishi Corporation.

According to the traders, Saudi Arabia could treble output to about 3.5 million barrels per day (BPD) by the end of the month as a result of the accord.

Riyadh is understood to have 'signed and sealed' agreements with them to sell 1.25 million BPD of crude oil at 'netback' — spot market rates.

Saudi Arabia's oil output fell to a 20-year-low of about 1.5 million BPD last month but all that had altered with the new agreements, the London analysts said.

It was in 1973 that OPEC's ministers met in Kuwait and, for the first time, boosted prices unilaterally. Within three months, prices soared 127 per cent.

It will be an OPEC leadership that has exhausted its clout — with most oils hardly selling at anywhere near the present official price of $28 a barrel — that will meet in Vienna.

Israeli health cash crisis

TEL AVIV — Hundreds of chronically ill old people were shunted from hospital to hospital yesterday because of a cash crisis in the Israeli health service.

Dozens of small, debt-laden private hospitals, largely dependent on funds from the health ministry, discharged patients and moved them to state hospitals.

State radio said about 1,000 old and psychiatric patients had been transferred.

Yoel Sperling, chairman of the Private Geriatric Hospitals Association, said they had been forced to act because the government owed private hospitals about 7 billion shekels ($4.6 billion).

Health Minister Mordechai Gur held emergency talks with hospital directors and later accused the Treasury of delaying the transfer of funds.

Sperling complained the crisis had been developing for weeks.

WEATHER

RAIN over southern Scotland, northern Ireland, Wales and northern England will move south to remaining parts of England during the day. Brighter weather with showers already over northern Scotland will extend to all other districts except southern England by midnight. It will be very windy with gales in many places — severe in parts of the northwest. Temperatures will be generally a little below normal.

Outlook: Showers mostly dying out, but further rain spreading across all areas from the west later. Near normal temperatures.

Liverpool unions angry over council's tactics

A MAJOR crisis broke out in Liverpool yesterday over the City Council's handling of its rate-capping fight against the Tory government.

Industrial action is due to start on Monday against the council's effective pay cut to housing maintenance workers.

And in a separate reaction from council workers, local government officers are refusing to process letters warning 30,000 employees that they will have no wages from December 18.

Documents so far withheld from council workers in the city indicate that the council may run out of money two months before this date.

Letters

A meeting of the Liverpool District Labour Party executive was told on Wednesday night that if the letters were not delivered before the council meeting on Monday, then borrowing would be disallowed and funds run out in October.

This revelation is certain to intensify concern among the trade unions. The unions have already threatened to blockade the city hall on Monday in an effort to stop the council taking a decision to sack its workers.

Strike action has already been threatened by NALGO and teachers if the letters to council employees mention sackings.

This problem has been at the heart of prolonged legal wrangling within the council. While issuing redundancy notices would be legally valid, it would provoke the unions. However, a declaration that wages will not be paid could constitute a breach of contract by the council.

Decision

A mass meeting of shop stewards from the council will be held today. It follows a decision yesterday by 500 housing maintenance direct workers meeting at Transport

House to stop ancillary work for the Labour council's untried 'caravan scheme' for council workers.

The scheme involves employees working from caravans instead of depots.

The council have already withheld bonus payments — up to a third of take-home pay — from direct labour workers involved in the scheme. But from Monday, the workers will begin a policy of non-cooperation unless their bonus payments are restored.

The meeting also decided that if the dispute over bonuses was not resolved by September 25, the workers would pull out of a planned demonstration against Tory attacks on local government organised by the council.

Resolution

The housing maintenance workers also resolved to move an emergency resolution on the council's joint shop stewards' committee calling for an end to all negotiations until bonus is reimbursed.

Stewards are also to organise a mass lobby of the council's low pay unit and bring maximum publicity to bear on their dispute.

Many at yesterday's meeting called for immediate strike action over the bonus dispute, but the eventual resolution was passed unanimously.

Many bitter words were spoken. NALGO housing steward Jim Jones described the way negotiations are conducted as 'an insult to trade unionists'. He cited the case of the suspension of pay of a shop steward.

scribed council negotiators as unyielding and 'intransigent'.

Charlie Rainford, EET-PU shop steward added that one councillor had been verbally abusive, and that letters given to the stewards were 'full of lies and half-truths'.

He added that out of 1,300 workers, only 600 are provided for in the new 'caravan scheme'.

'What about the other 700?' he asked. 'There is no provision for them in future plans.'

Alan Walmsley, GMBATU, described the negotiations as 'growing more sinister all the time'.

Shortly after the meeting broke up, members of the T&GWU transport union in the housing department decided to break with the old joint shop stewards' committee.

Committee

This leaves UCATT the only remaining union involved in the committee. It is also the only union to have complied with the council's demands on the introduction of the caravan scheme.

The meeting concluded with an altercation between the stewards who were departing and two leading Liverpool City councillors. The trade unionists were reportedly accused of treachery for their defence of members' bonus pay.

Blackleg miner transferred

THE blackleg miner being carried to work when taxi driver David Wilkie was killed in South Wales during the miners' strike has been transferred to a pit in Leicestershire.

David Williams, 35, has moved with his wife and two children from the mining village of Rhymney, Mid-Glamorgan.

The Coal Board refused to discuss reports of his transfer, but an NUM lodge official at the Merthyr Vale pit said Williams left the area last week.

Last week, scab family Paul and Joy Watson from Aberdare moved from South Wales to Nottinghamshire. Watson was the only one of 700 miners at the Phurnacite plant to break the strike.

The two young miners jailed for life after being found guilty of murder are serving their sentence in Gartree jail in Leicestershire.

Dean Hancock and Russell Shankland, both 21, have appealed against their sentence. The appeal is to be heard in London next month.

'Dirty 30' granted injunction

LEICESTERSHIRE'S former striking miners — the 'Dirty 30' — were granted an injunction in the High Court yesterday giving them full speaking and voting rights at NUM branch meetings.

The miners had complained to Justice Simon Brown at a private hearing in London that their area union had used non-payment of union dues during the strike to prevent former strikers from being heard at meetings.

Later their chairman Malcolm Pinnegar said: 'This victory will allow us to attend branch meetings this weekend to argue against the Leicester area breaking away from the national union.'

Another leader of the 'Dirty 30' Mick Richmond said: 'It is tragic that we had to appeal to the courts to back our right to participate in our own area union after we had spent a year of sacrifice fighting for the miners' union.'

Rail talks confirmed

RAIL unions leaders confirmed that they would hold talks on driver-only operation with British Rail next week, but will not discuss other productivity proposals.

After meeting leaders of the train drivers' union, ASLEF, NUR general secretary Jimmy Knapp said: 'We are free to talk about driver-only operation of trains. I think that is what the public expect us to talk about.'

short-term boost to public funds.

With other parties committed to restoring Serps, Constable added: 'The subject of pensions is by nature a long-term one and the nation cannot afford to have the whole structure of pensions provision continually revised by successive governments.'

Abolition of Serps would be irresponsible on the 'basis of a quick consultation over the holiday period, particularly when the information contained in the green paper was extremely inadequate.'

A survey of BIM members showed only 18 per cent in favour of abolishing Serps while 74 per cent said more time and information was needed.

Opposition to the changes also came from the Standard Life Assurance company which said Serps should not be abolished and reform should only proceed if there was all-party agreement.

Managing director George Gwilt disputed the claim that Serps had to be scrapped because of its escalating cost.

Some reduction in benefits might be needed in the next century, 'but we think it is extremely unlikely that it would require total abolition.'

'It is the total cost to the community that is important'.

DOOR FAULT BLAMED FOR CRASH DEATHS

Jammed cover hindered escape

A FAULT on one of the doors of the British Air Tours Boeing 737 which burst into flames at Manchester, killing 55 people, probably cost the lives of some of those who perished, a senior air authority chief admitted yesterday.

Ronald Ashford, director general of airworthiness at the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA), told a press conference in London that it was likely more people would have escaped the blaze and killer fumes if the door had worked properly.

An interim report was published yesterday on the disaster involving the holiday jet, which had been taking off for Corfu, with 131 passengers.

The accidents investigation branch of the Department of Transport, disclosed that when cabin staff tried to open the right front door as the blazing aircraft came to a halt, an inflatable emergency slide cover jammed it shut for vital seconds.

Although the door was finally forced open and 31 passengers escaped that way, Ashford said it had held up the evacuation.

'I think it is probable, indeed likely, that more people might have got out if that delay had not been there. It is a fact that more people actually got out through that door when it was open than either of the other two exits.'

Despite the problems, CAA chairman John Dent said no immediate steps were being taken to modify standard tests for aircraft evacuation applied to new planes.

But he said airlines had been notified and door modifications were under way.

This meant that aircraft were daily flying passengers without having the door system modified. Cabin staff had been told to open the doors 'smoothly' in an emergency. It was believed that 'harsh' treatment had caused the problem on the Manchester plane.

The Federal Aviation Authority — America's equivalent of the CAA — said the door was temporarily jammed by an escape chute.

BL denies 'concern' over Gartcosh

CLAIMS by the Scottish TUC that the British Leyland car company was 'deeply unhappy' about the closure of the Gartcosh steelworks were denied yesterday.

In a letter to Prime Minister Thatcher, the STUC said that confidential minutes of a meeting between Austin Rover and the British Steel Corporation showed the car firm expressing 'deep concern'.

Steel

Gartcosh supplies finished steel for Austin Rover, and the STUC claims the car firm fears alternative BSC plants, particularly Shotton and Port Talbot in Wales, have 'completely unproved track records'.

But an Austin Rover spokesman said yesterday: 'The closure of Gartcosh will not give us any difficulties in ensuring that we get the volumes of steel we need from British Steel mills.'

'We have had assurances that the BSC will pay particular attention to the quality of their products from alternative mills and therefore we do not anticipate any problems with our steel suppliers.'

Police forces 'too thinly stretched'

POLICE chiefs have told Tory Home Secretary Douglas Hurd that their forces are being stretched 'dangerously thin' during unrest on the streets.

Chief constables at their annual conference in Preston pressed for more resources and more sweeping powers, warning the Tories that they are 'barely getting by' with ordinary policing methods and the numbers available to them.

Charles McLachlan, Nottinghamshire Chief Constable and retiring president of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) said he had told Hurd that levels of policing would 'have to be looked at'.

He claimed that he was not in favour of introducing a para-military 'third force', like the CRS in France. Of course a national riot police force exists and was deployed against the miners' during their year-long strike and against youth in Handsworth this week.

McLachlan said: 'Perhaps we can convince the Home Secretary of points we are making, but it is perhaps more difficult to get parliament to listen.'

Greater Manchester Chief Constable James Anderton said: 'We need more help and we hope we can get it.'

McLachlan claimed that the police chiefs had not discussed the Handsworth clashes but had received a report from West Midlands chief constable Geoffrey Dear.

The Nottingham police chief hit out at increasing operational demands on the police. 'Police strengths have gone up, but these have been rendered valueless by increasing demands being put on the service. We are being buried in administrative and bureaucratic nonsense.'

He said they objected strongly to the suggestion that they would soon have to record all traffic accidents, which would increase their work tenfold.

McLachlan also asserted that the Police and Criminal Evidence Bill would hamper police work and provide a 'haven for the professional criminal'.

Row over Thatcher painting

AN OIL painting of a smiling Margaret Thatcher sitting on a lavatory seat has been rejected for showing at an exhibition in the Irish Republic.

Artist Claire Mullen described the selection committee for the local Dun Laoghaire annual art show as 'a stuffy, humourless lot', after her picture was turned down.

She said her depiction in oils, titled 'Shanks Mare' — a study of a woman in a lavatory — had been intended to add light relief to an exhibition 'brimming with rows of conventional landscapes'. It showed Thatcher with her knickers around her ankles and a toilet roll on the floor, she said, and was 'a piece of fun, not a political statement'.

She described as 'an unhappy coincidence' the fact that the women on the seat resembled the British Prime Minister.

Mullen said she had received offers of up to £200 to sell the painting, and another from a Fianna Fail party member of the European Parliament who wanted to auction the picture to raise funds for charity.

JOSEPH'S ULTIMATUM ON TEACHER'S CASH

TORY Education Secretary Sir Keith Joseph yesterday rejected point-blank a new call from employers for more money to break the deadlock in the teachers' pay dispute.

And he warned that if the teachers reached no agreement in principle by October 11, the whole of the latest £1,250 million pay and conditions package for teachers will be withdrawn.

Joseph's refusal to budge came after an hour-long meeting in London with the Labour employers' leader on the Burnham negotiating committee, Nikki Harrison.

The millionaire Education Secretary, who was about to start the second half of a two-day visit in Staffordshire schools and colleges, cancelled the rest of the tour to come back.

Harrison said after meeting Joseph: 'I don't think Sir Keith and I had any more to say to each other. I don't see how it could be helpful to call another meeting of the Burnham Committee.'

Earlier she said the local authority employers' 5.85 per cent offer was already more than they could afford, and added that she may now call in the conciliation body ACAS.

The latest round of teachers' pay talks broke down after 11 hours on Thursday.

The unions rejected a 5.85 per cent offer, which they said was worse than previous offers. The new offer, phased over two years, was tied to changes in conditions of service and teachers' duties.

These include teachers having to cover for absent colleagues, agreeing to assessment and carrying out curriculum development and counselling work which is at present voluntary.

Offer

In return, the new offer is said to agree to payment for lunchtime supervision.

A spokesman for the biggest union, the National Union of Teachers, said after yesterday's meeting: 'It just confirms our view that Sir Keith Joseph is blocking a settlement.'

Nigel De Gruchy, deputy general secretary of the NAS/UWT, the second-biggest union, told News Line last night: 'It's no big deal. As far as I'm concerned if he wants to take his bag of peanuts away on October 11, let him.'

BY PENNY BLOOR

De Gruchy said Thursday's offer had been 'laughable' and a step back from the local authorities' proposal made in 1984. He accused the employers of now dancing to Joseph's tune.

The NAS/UWT rejected the changes in conditions. 'He wants us to sign on the dotted line for contractual slavery,' De Gruchy said.

Ideas

Harrison said she had put a number of ideas to Joseph and he had turned them all down.

They included whether he was prepared to consider the possibility of increasing his £1.25 billion 'reform' package, if they could get the teachers back to the negotiating table to discuss it.

Secondly, whether there was any possibility of extending his October 11 deadline for agreement in principle between the unions and the employers on the package.

Thirdly, would he agree to some scheme to releasing some of the money from the package to resolve the midday meals supervision problem in schools.

Joseph refused on all counts.

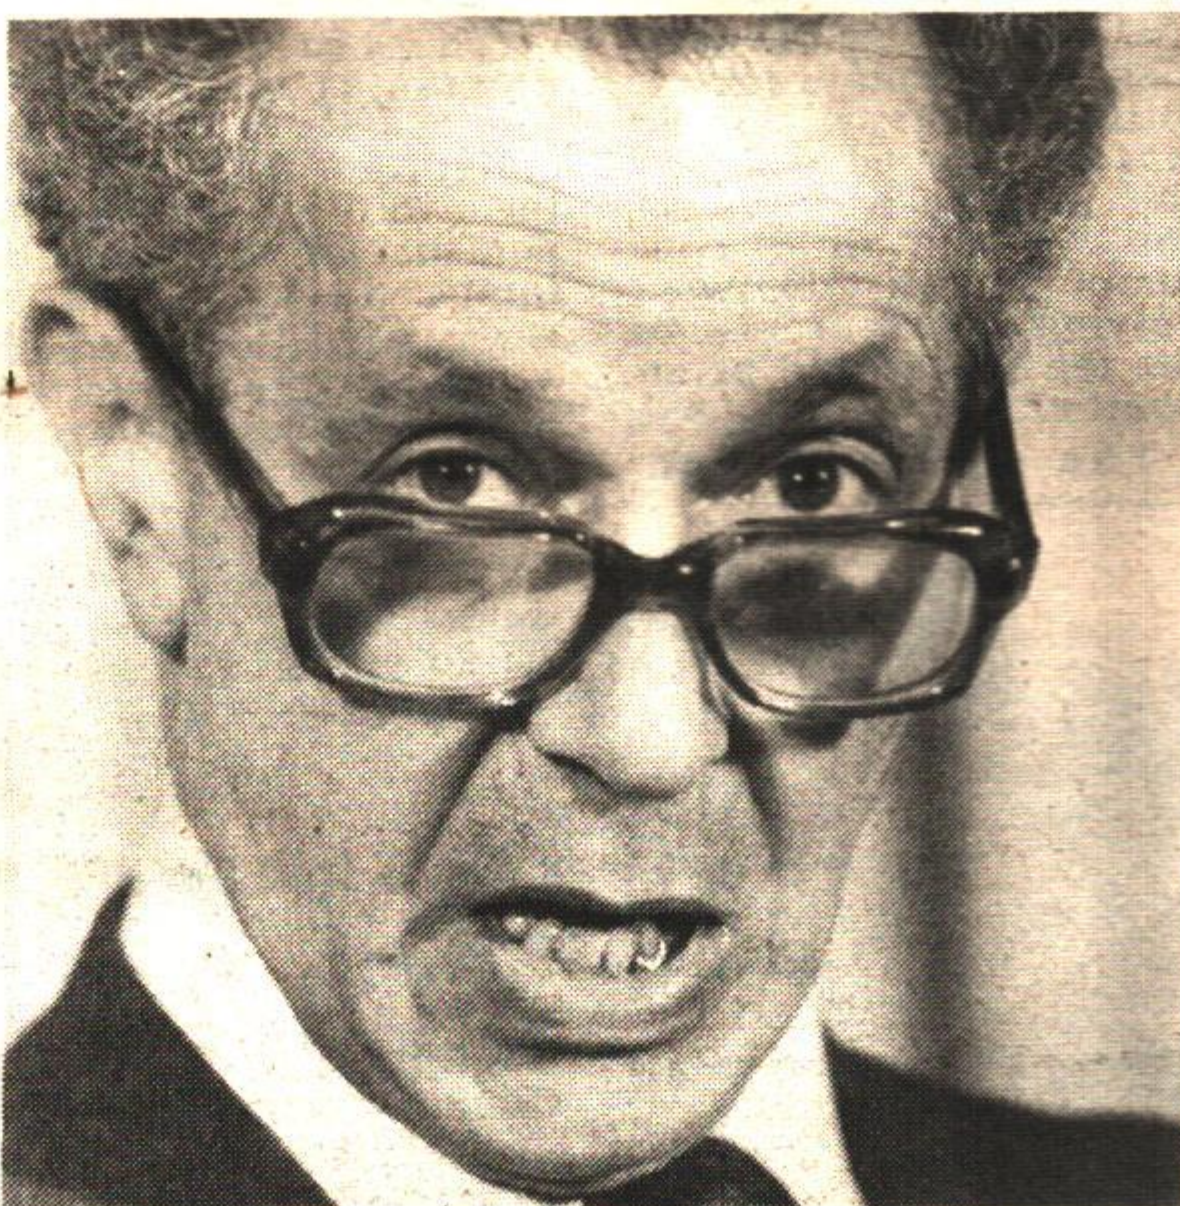

The NUT has announced details of regional strike rallies and demonstrations to be held next week.

by the half-day actions between September 16 and 30.

The NAS/UWT will begin selective indefinite strikes in 22 authorities over the same period.

Both unions will escalate their selective action so it affects schools in every local authority next month.

The no-compromise stance of Joseph and the Tories has angered thousands of teachers all over the country, many of whom are impatient with the limited selective actions called by the teachers' union leaders.

Offensive advice

PRIME Minister Thatcher's advice to the unemployed to stop moaning will haunt the government, Labour deputy leader Roy Hattersley said last night.

She had 'dropped the public relations mask' to deliver her 'honest message', he said in Birmingham.

'That piece of offensive advice will haunt this government for the rest of its life. Whenever Mrs Thatcher's voice drops down a couple of octaves and she simulates sympathy, someone will shout "Stop moaning".'

'It is a phrase that typifies this government's attitude towards the unemployed.'

Persist

'Worse still, it demonstrates that the government will still persist with those policies which have put 2 million men and women on the dole.'

'Nothing is going to change. Take it or leave it. Like it or lump it. But stop moaning.'

Pull the other one..

THE SHOW was 'Pull the Other One' and the cast gave producer Norman Robbins the same message when they walked out half way through their last night.

Disgruntled players upped and left in the interval when they learned there would be no profits to share out from their 16-week run.

Robbins, 47, who wrote, produced and starred in the play, was left with leading lady, Myrtle Devenish, to explain that the show would not go on.

The audience of 130 at the Palace Avenue Theatre in Paignton, Devon were told the cast had walked out and given their money back.

'I suppose they thought they were making a point. The audience were absolutely furious when they went out,' said Mr Robbins, of Courtney Road, Newton Abbott.

The show, a farce, was the first to be staged by Mr Robbins and the co-operative of seven actors. He said the idea was that any profit would be shared out at the end of the run.

Doel Luscombe, the joint leading man, said the cast had demanded to see balance sheets, but had not been handed them until the interval of the last performance on Thursday night.

Joint invasion exercise

CASTRIES — Hundreds of US, British and Caribbean troops are currently taking part in a four-day exercise in St Lucia to simulate a joint invasion of an island whose government is under attack from 'leftist insurgents'. The 'Exotic Palm' exercise brings together 300 US and British troops with 200 from the Caribbean.

Israeli fires at Arab bus

TEL AVIV — An Israeli soldier fired at an Arab bus in Jerusalem, wounding four passengers on Thursday night. The soldier, a reservist, said a bottle was thrown at him, but missed and he reacted by firing his Uzi submachine gun. Earlier this week Israeli soldiers shot and wounded five Palestinian youths who did not stop at army checkpoints.

Sedition charge on lawyer

KUALA LUMPUR — A Malaysian lawyers' leader yesterday pleaded not guilty to a charge of sedition lodged after his statement seeking a pardon for a man sentenced to die for having a gun. Bar Council Vice-President Param Cumaraswamy, 44, faces a possible $2,000 fine and/or three years in jail if found guilty.

US dodges ban for Iraq

WASHINGTON — Iraq has begun receiving US-made helicopters that may breach an arms embargo against warring Iran and Iraq, the 'Washington Post' said yesterday. The Reagan administration claims the helicopters are for civilian use, but the newspaper says they were initially developed as troop carriers for Iran.

US support for Duarte

WASHINGTON — The US House of Representatives has condemned the recent kidnapping of a daughter of Salvadoran dictator President Jose Napoleon Duarte. Voting 402 to 1, the Democratic-led House called the Tuesday kidnapping 'unjustified and reprehensible' and backed Duarte's measures to crush opposition.

Suharto visits E. Europe

JAKARTA — President Suharto left for Europe yesterday on a trade-boosting trip which will include his first state visits to East Europe since he took power two decades ago. He was due to arrive in Turkey later yesterday and go to Rumania on September 16 and Hungary on September 19.

Bank workers end strike

RIO DE JANEIRO — Leaders of Brazil's bank workers voted yesterday to end a two-day-old strike after accepting a 91 per cent pay offer. The strike, which closed most of the country's banks, was declared illegal on Thursday by a Sao Paulo labour court. The unions want pay increases four times a year rather than twice, with inflation at 227 per cent.

AUSTRALIAN UNIONS UNDER LEGAL ATTACK

SPECIAL REPORT
FROM NICK BEAMS
IN SYDNEY

SYDNEY — Australian trade unions are facing a barrage of legal attacks organised by the employers using anti-union laws passed by right-wing governments and kept on the statute books by the Hawke Labour government.

The latest anti-union hostilities broke out in the middle of the biennial congress of the Australian Council of Trade Unions, the equivalent of the British TUC.

This week a Federal court imposed a $100,000 (Aust) fine on the Australian Meat Industry Employees' Union.

The meatworkers' union already has its funds sequestered and in the hands of court-appointed accountants for refusing to pay an earlier $40,000 fine.

The union also faces a damages suit for up to $3 million for its refusal to lift a picket line at remote Mudginberri, in the Northern Territory. Pickets are outlawed under 'secondary picketing' legislation.

The day after the latest fine on the meatworkers, the Australian Opera Company threatened to sue the Australian Theatrical and Amusement

SEQEB power workers at a recent mass meeting

Employees Association for $5 million unless it lifted a picket line at the Sydney Opera House.

Handing down the decision on the meatworkers, Justice Lockhart said he was determined to punish the meatworkers' union for its 'criminal contempt' of court in twice defying court orders to lift the picket line at an abattoir.

The union had

'embarked on a collision course with the law and institutions in this country'.

'The orders which I propose to make reflect the court's intention to oblige the union to obey the laws of the land and to punish it for criminal contempt,' Lockhart said.

AMIEU federal secretary Jack O'Toole told the ACTU congress the union faced fines, legal costs and damages totalling $4 million.

He declared the union would stand by ACTU policy of refusing to pay fines under Section 45D of the Trade Practices Act, which is closely based on the Thatcher government's anti-union laws.

But the official resolution put to the ACTU congress merely expressed 'solidarity' with the meatworkers' union.

Prime Minister Hawke told the congress that union militancy was the greatest threat to the union movement, and not the new Liberal Party leadership of John Howard which has pledged to 'deregulate the labour market'.

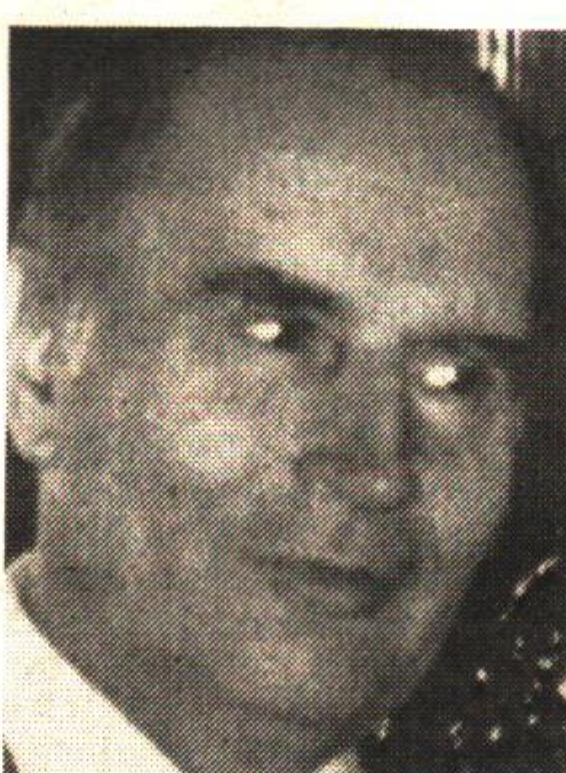

Hawke also told parliament in Canberra that he would not carry out his election pledge to repeal Section 45D.

Thailand Cabinet reshuffle

BANGKOK — Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanond was preparing a reshuffle of his military Cabinet yesterday, four days after an abortive army coup attempt.

The army-controlled parliament was scheduled to debate the abortive coup yesterday amid mounting pressure from Thai monarchists for the arrest and trial of those involved.

Supreme Commander General Arthit Kamlang-ek, meanwhile, escaped a bomb blast in the Bangkok suburb of Bangkhen.

MITTERRAND

Ariane blows up in Mitterrand's face

KOUROU, French Guyana — President Mitterrand was delivered a crushing humiliation yesterday when the Ariane rocket-launcher failed spectacularly on its 15th mission.

The launch was designed as a curtain-raiser for his provocative tour of the Mururoa Atoll nuclear-testing site yesterday.

But it blew up before his eyes as he watched from a 'seat of honour' in his capacity as commander-in-chief of French armed forces. Reuters news agency described it as a 'stunning failure'.

The Ariane flight safety officer was forced to destroy the launcher only ten minutes after a seemingly perfect lift-off.

Ariane's cargo of two commercial telecommunications satellites were lost and the total cost of the disaster was estimated at $145 million.

No one is sure what caused the disaster and Western European space officials have ordered an inquest.

There were reports that an ignition failure on the third and final stage had caused the failure.

A grim-faced Mitterrand spoke to journalists at the test site before pressing on with his South Pacific trip.

He said: 'It will work the next time. Yes, of course, I am confident for the future.'

The disaster on French Guyana did not augur well for his trip to the French colonial territory in the South Pacific, where a storm of press condemnation greeted his scheduled arrival.

In the angriest media response so far, Wellington's 'Dominion' newspaper said the trip was 'an outrageous provocation (and) a calculated act of defiance of international opinion'.

The paper said the French government emerged from the scandal over the bomb-blast sinking of the Greenpeace ship 'Rainbow Warrior' in Auckland harbour on July 10 as 'a sinister but also ridiculous figure dedicated to the unprincipled pursuit of its own interests'.

Provocative Star Wars test

WASHINGTON — The Reagan government yesterday tested an anti-satellite (ASAT) weapon high over the Pacific Ocean, ignoring warnings from Congress and Moscow that the shot would fuel a space weapons race.

The provocative test, targeting an old American satellite, went ahead with the blessing of the Federal Court.

Judge Norma Johnson overruled a request by four Democratic congressmen and a group of pro-arms control scientists to delay the test on the grounds that she saw no 'irreparable harm' being done.

In the Republican-controlled Senate on Thursday night, congressmen voted 62 to 34 to block a move by opposition Democrats.

The Democrats had tried to force a postponement of the test until after the November summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

In a separate move, 98 congressmen sent Reagan a letter late on Thursday, asking him to put off the test and to try, instead, to work out an agreement with Moscow at the Geneva arms talks on banning space weapons.

The test was monitored by ground radar operated by the North American Aerospace Defence Command (NORAD).

American officials said the foot-long projectile, mounted on a two-stage rocket, was to be fired at the satellite from an F-15 jet.

Neo-Nazis go on trial

SEATTLE, Washington — Eleven self-confessed neo-Nazis charged with plotting to overthrow the US government through a series of robberies, counterfeiting and two murders went on trial yesterday under tight security.

The government prosecution has detailed a string of allegations against the white-supremacist members of The Order, particularly their vow to 'destroy Jews'.

Addressing an all-white jury of six women and nine men, special assistant prosecutor Robert Ward said The Order wanted to build a racist Aryan community.

Several members of the group signed a declaration of 'war' that included a letter to Congress expressing disgust with the political clout of Hispanic and Jews in America, Ward said.

The declaration warned lawmakers that The Order would not remember 'whether you swing to the left or to the right. You will simply swing by the neck.'

Ten of the 23 people indicted in the case by a grand jury in April have pleaded guilty to racketeering.

Another is a fugitive, one is being held in Missouri on a murder charge and the 11 on trial are charged with racketeering and conspiracy.

At the core of the indictment, covering crimes committed in five states, is the June 1984 machine-gun murder in Denver of Alan Berg, a radio show host who had criticised the group.

By-election shootings

COLOMBO — Sri Lankan security forces yesterday imposed a 24-hour curfew in a southern, Sinhalese, district where two people were killed when unidentified gunmen opened fire at a polling booth.

Police said the two supporters of the ruling United National Party were shot dead and another was seriously wounded in Mulkirigala as voting began in a parliamentary by-election.

In north-eastern Trincomalee district, an eight-hour curfew imposed earlier in the week was lifted early in the morning.

Japan bankruptcy debts soar

TOKYO — Debts of bankrupt Japanese companies hit a record high in August, mainly because of the collapse of the Sanko Steamship Company Limited, the world's largest tanker operator, a study said yesterday.

Corporate bankruptcy

SANTIAGO — President Augusto Pinochet marked the 12th anniversary of his bloodstained military regime in typical fashion. He poured scorn on the current clamour for a return to civilian rule.

He accused the leaders of Chile's bourgeois parties of being 'ill with democratitis' and threatened to reimpose the state of siege lifted just three months ago.

'If necessary,' he said, 'we are going to tighten the grip because first we have to save the country from Marxism and then we can look back.'

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

He was specifically referring to the nine-page document entitled the 'National Accord for a Transition to Full Democracy' jointly presented on August 26 by nine anti-communist opposition parties.

Pressure

The ringmaster responsible for organising the constitutional opposition is Cardinal Juan Francisco Fresno, the 71-year-old Roman Catholic patriarch.

He convinced the leaders of the nine bourgeois parties to drop their long-held insistence on the resignation of Pinochet and persuaded them to put forward a programme of peaceful pressure.

The two main parties which are not signatories are the Communist Party of Chile and the Left Revolutionary Movement (MIR). But while the Stalinists have not signed the accord, they are in fact supporting it.

The nine-party group is proposing an election to a Congress as soon as possible with power to amend the constitution so a president can be chosen by popular vote.

Although a timetable is not spelled out, the members of the accord are willing to let Pinochet serve out the end of his term in 1989.

In Washington on Thursday six party leaders held talks with assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams about returning Chile to an elected government.

Process

Abrams told them the US government hoped that 'all Chileans who sincerely wanted to restore democracy would contribute to that process' and emphasised that Washington supported 'a peaceful and orderly return to democratic rule'. The fact that the Chilean politicians visited Washington to get approval for their campaign shows on whose behalf they are working.

A recent opinion poll carried out in Chile showed that 59 per cent of Chileans felt the army regime has done a 'terrible' job while 27 per cent said it was 'bad'. Less than 15 per cent said it thought the regime's record was middling or good.

As most citizens living under the dictatorship are reluctant to give their true feelings, the poll can only be regarded as damning indictment of Pinochet and his military goons.

PINOCHET

US sanctions bill hi-jacked

WASHINGTON — The 'Wild West' came to the US Senate when Republican leaders seized a sanctions bill against the South African regime and spirited it out of the chamber.

The physical hi-jacking of the draft legislation prevented senators from voting.

The extraordinary move is perfectly legal. Senate rules require that bills be physically present in the chamber on the clerk's desk for the Senate to act.

The manoeuvre was carried out by Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas and Richard Lugar, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

They smuggled the sanctions bill out of the Senate to an unspecified place on Capitol Hill where it will remain indefinitely.

Democratic Senator Edward Kennedy accused the Republican leaders of trickery and an action which was 'beneath the dignity of the Senate'.

The Republicans had used an 'extraordinary tactic' and 'a tricky use of Senate rules' unknown in his 23 years in congress, he added.

The legislation was virtually assured of passage through the Senate until Monday when President Reagan issued an executive order banning the sale of computers, nuclear technology and new loans to the Pretoria regime.

But Democrats decided to press ahead with the legislation, which included a ban on the import of Krugerrands, because it would have legal force.

After Thursday's bill-snatching operation, the Democrats vowed to introduce stronger legislation against Botha's racist regime.

● At the UN Security Council, Hamad Abdelaziz al-Kawari of Qatar, chairman of the Arab group of states, accused the South African and Israeli regimes of racist ties.

The class truth about Handsworth

THERE is a sharp difference between the Tory reflex reaction to this week's street battles in Handsworth and their response to the 1981 riots in Brixton, Toxteth and Moss Side.

The post mortems by Thatcher's ministers and the Tory press have been, without exception, a tirade of arrogant, racist attacks on the black, Asian and white youth of the area. And, by implication, of the whole of Britain.

No talk of Scarman-type inquiries this time. It is a matter for the police. 'Criminality' has been committed. The full might of the police and the courts must be brought to bear against the 'criminals'.

To escape their own criminal responsibility for the Handsworth eruption, the police and the capitalist press have invented their own crude explanation. According to them it was black racism against the Asian community.

Rupert Murdoch's 'Sun' carried this lying propaganda to odious lengths with a full-page article under the headline: 'Why the West Indians Hate Asians' by Roy Kerridge, a self-styled 'expert on black Britain'. (September 12, 1985)

This completely ignores the fact that black, Asian and white youth took part in the street unrest. The first youth convicted of an offence relating to Monday night's clashes was white, and he got 28 days' detention.

Avtar Jouhl, general secretary of the Indian Workers Association, answered the police attempts to divide the black and Asian communities when he said: 'West Indians are not to blame for the riot. It was caused by social deprivation and police harassment. This was an eruption against the whole social order.'

It should be noted how quickly the police and the Tory press rushed to stick a racial tag on the Handsworth blow-up. But when an Asian woman was burnt to death in her home in East London a few weeks ago, the police pointedly and repeatedly refused to say that it was a racist attack.

When the whole community knew that it was the murderous work of racist gangs, the police adopted a studied and forensic indifference. No headlines in 'The Sun', no visits by the Home Secretary — and still no police arrests. For a full 48 hours the police pumped out the story that four bodies had been found in the burnt out ruins of shops. Then the figure went to three, and finally two.

And very belatedly, the police also admitted that there were no signs of physical violence on the two Asian brothers tragically killed in Lozells Road post office. They had asphyxiated from smoke.

This was despite 'The Sun's' story, 'SCREAMS OF MURDER', which said: 'Two Asian brothers screamed in agony as West Indians beat them — and then left them to burn alive in their petrol-bombed sub-post office.' (September 11, 1985)

Black youth Nigel Heath told reporters: 'The men inside the post office refused to leave because they said they were protecting the queen's property. If they want to stay and die, that's their problem.'

What happened in Handsworth was not a race question, but a class question. It was provoked by the ruthless policies of the Tory government and the systematic harassment carried out by the police.

There are literally dozens of Handsworths all over Britain ticking away and their source is mass unemployment, appalling housing, cuts in social services, education and council spending and police violence.

But a series of Handsworth-type explosions won't overcome these problems. The task is the mobilisation of the whole working class to bring down the Tory regime in an all-out indefinite General Strike.

Arthur Scargill speaking at the Ollerton 'Keep Notts National' campaign rally. On the platform, Jimmy Hood, Ollerton NUM, and (right) Henry Richardson, general secretary

giving support NUM in Notts

A PACKED audience of over 400 Nottinghamshire miners in Ollerton gave rousing support to NUM president Arthur Scargill in the latest of the 'Keep Notts National' campaign meetings.

The platform on Thursday night included regional TUC organiser Pat Quinn, who said he was speaking against a breakaway organisation in the county with the authority of the TUC's national office.

Scargill warned against any belief that the Coal Board would treat Nottinghamshire more leniently than other areas.

'MacGregor's philosophy is simple, if he can divide you from the national union, he'll take you apart in the next two and a half years,' Scargill said to applause.

He said that under 1981 Coal Board plans up to 20,000 jobs would be axed in Nottinghamshire through closures, leaving only 10,000 miners in the coalfield.

He strongly refuted the allegations made by breakaway leaders that the new national rules would be detrimental to miners in Nottinghamshire.

There was no authority of the national union to call strikes without a ballot, and no intention to use disciplinary rules against miners who did not come out on strike in 1984, he said.

The fact that breakaway leaders had offered to stay in the national union under the new rules if he resigned, was proof that the argument about the rule changes was a diversion, Scargill said.

False

He added that allegations that he was opposed to five-yearly re-election were false. He considered this charge by breakaway leaders to be hypocritical when one of their leaders had threatened the NUM with legal action if his post was not confirmed for life.

Members of the audience pointed out that neither of the two prominent breakaway leaders had been elected to their current posts in any case.

Scargill also scotched the latest rumour being circulated by the breakaway organisation, that miners with current common law damages claims against the NCB would have their cases dropped unless they joined the breakaway.

He explained that the truth was exactly the opposite. It was the national union which funded and instructed lawyers for common law claims, and these would be pursued without difficulty for those remaining in the national union.

Scargill warned again that Nottinghamshire miners would not be able to sponsor local Labour councillors or MPs if they broke away.

'Whatever you are going to do, recognise that there is a principle at stake, a principle on which this union was founded, the principle of one union serving all members and defending their interests,' he said.

Kevin Richards, former president of the South Derbyshire NUM, said he was left with no honorable option but to resign after his executive instructed him to encourage support for a breakaway.

He said he could not be involved in the selling of his birthright of a single national union in the mining industry.

Appealing to the miners in Nottinghamshire, he said: 'As long as there are collieries in the South Derbyshire Area there will be members of the National Union of Mineworkers.'

'Don't be fooled, trick-ed, bribed or blackmailed into making a decision you will regret for the rest of your lives.'

He said that a breakaway today would be used by Thatcher and MacGregor to make the divisions and damage of the Spencer breakaway in the 1930's look like a 'kinder-garten party'.

'We are all miners, we all eat the same killer dust and endure the same pathetic wages — we should be together in one union.'

Conflict

Pat Quinn, for the regional and national TUC, said that two separate unions in the area would be a 'recipe for continued conflict and instability'.

'Time that should be spent improving conditions and wages would be spent on internal feuding and that is something the TUC does not want to see,' he said.

Eric Clarke warned that the proposal for a breakaway was an attempt to turn the clock back. 'The only winners in a split would be the Conservative government. That would be a criminal shame to those who sacrificed to build this union,' he said.

Little backing for breakaway

BACKING for the Nottinghamshire breakaway union continues to dwindle amongst miners, though the East Midlands Liberal Party has pledged its support.

Early reports of balloting in Leicestershire show a majority in favour of staying in the national union, whilst a mass meeting at South Derbyshire's Cadely Hill colliery voted nearly 3-1 in favour of remaining in the NUM.

It now seems likely that the ballot in the area on a possible merger between South Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire and the blackleg organisation in Durham will be delayed.

While the breakaway leaders in Nottinghamshire have blamed NUM president Arthur Scargill for the delay, he has denied any connection with problems that have emerged between the breakaway leaders and the government's Certification Officer.

The breakaway have also printed their line-up for leadership. Roy Lynk would be general secretary, South Derbyshire's Ken Toon would be president, and George Hunter from the Durham organisation would be vice-president.

The so-called Union of Democratic Miners would initially have three federated parts from the three areas, according to the breakaway 'Nottinghamshire Miner'.

The newsheet says that that each area would be permitted to retain its own buildings, officers and facilities.

However, the considerable number of miners in Nottinghamshire and South Derbyshire already pledged to remain in the national union whatever the outcome of a merger will make this projected plan by the breakaway leaders a financial impossibility.

At present, the area offices and staff are financed almost entirely by the national union. Even in the highly unlikely case that two-thirds of South Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire miners back the breakaway, it will have to finance three area offices on the subscriptions of less than 20,000 miners.

TOMORROW is the 71st anniversary of the beginning of the longest-recorded strike in history — the Burston School Strike of 1914-1939.

It is being commemorated with a march and rally in Burston, near Diss, Norfolk, organised by the Transport and General Workers' Union in co-operation with the Burston Strike School Committee.

The rally will be addressed by TUC general secretary Norman Willis, Labour MP Joan Maynard and Jack Boddy, leader of the T&GWU Agricultural Trade Group.

Remind

Peter Medhurst, of the organising committee, told News Line: 'Given the present political situation there is a need to remind people that in the past, even when times were even more difficult than they are now, working people were prepared to organise and fight.'

'Clearly today we have to fight back, we have to put our house in order and fight back.'

Dismissed

The school strike began in 1914 after 66 of the 72 children on the council school roll came out on strike against the dismissal of their head teacher Mrs Kitty Higdon and her husband, assistant teacher, Tom Higdon.

Tom Higdon had been active in organising local farm workers into trade union branches and to win election on to the parish council to ensure some improvements in local amenities.

This brought the Higdon into confrontation with the local landlords and farmers who used their influence with the Burston School Management Committee to trump up charges against Mrs Higdon and ensure the dismissal of the teachers.

Rallied

Almost the entire village rallied to defend the Higdon. A public meeting was organised on the village green and a motion of protest to the Norfolk education committee was carried unanimously.

On April 1 1914, the children came out on strike, and throughout the spring and summer attended lessons daily on the green until an empty carpenters' shop was rented and furnished as the strike school.

The Burston squararchy were vicious in their attempts to break the strike. Parents were taken to court and fined for non-attendance of their children at the council school.

Evicted

Three of the villagers were evicted from their glebe land by the local vicar for supporting the Higdon.

But news of the conflict spread nationally and the fines were paid by collections and the labourers' union defended the villagers in court.

Enough funds were raised to build a new strike school in 1917, the donations came from the labour and trade union movement, including £400 from the miners and nearly £300 from railwaymen.

Open

The school remained open for 25 years and throughout the 1920s and 1930s large annual trade union rallies were held in recognition of the courageous and inspiring fight of the villagers and their children.

MP protests over snoop phone system

A LABOUR MP protested yesterday that the new telephone system in the Commons enabled the 'big brother' parliamentary authorities to snoop on every call made by a member or his secretary.

Max Madden, MP for Bradford West, has lodged a formal complaint with the Speaker, Bernard Weatherill, over this 'sinister new development which has been introduced in total secrecy'.

Madden said that although the system had only been installed a few days ago, the authorities had already been complaining that some MPs' secretaries had been phoning Capital Radio and 'Dial-a-Disc'.

He said: 'This clearly demonstrates that it is possible for the Commons authorities to know what numbers are being dialled. On a personal level this is the authorities snooping on staff working within the Commons.'

'But it has more sinister implications for MPs. It is now possible for the authorities to know what numbers MPs are dialling and can be used to build up information about what contacts they have, what information they may be receiving, and who they are talking to.'

'It represents a major invasion of the rights of MPs and undermines the confidence of MPs with their contacts.'

Rights

'What is worse, it is an extension of "Big Brother" snooping on MPs, staff and officials, and I am writing urgently to the Speaker to ask if he is aware of the new facilities, whether permission has been given by him, and if he will give an opportunity for the Commons to consider it.'

He added: 'This has been introduced in total secrecy without MPs being aware that all their calls are logged. I am sure the majority of them will insist that it withdrawn immediately.'

Council vetoes GLC posters

POSTERS and information packs which are being used as part of the Greater London Council's information service are being vetted and rejected by Westminster council.

A number of complaints have been received by the Westminster branch of the NALGO local government union relating to incidents where documents, posters and general information produced by the GLC have been removed from display in public places by council staff.

Public information so far rejected by Westminster includes: wheel-clamp warning posters, removed from Paddington library; a number of posters bearing the initials 'GLC' and posters on the issue of racism. The latest casualty on the list is the GLC housing information pack on racism in housing.

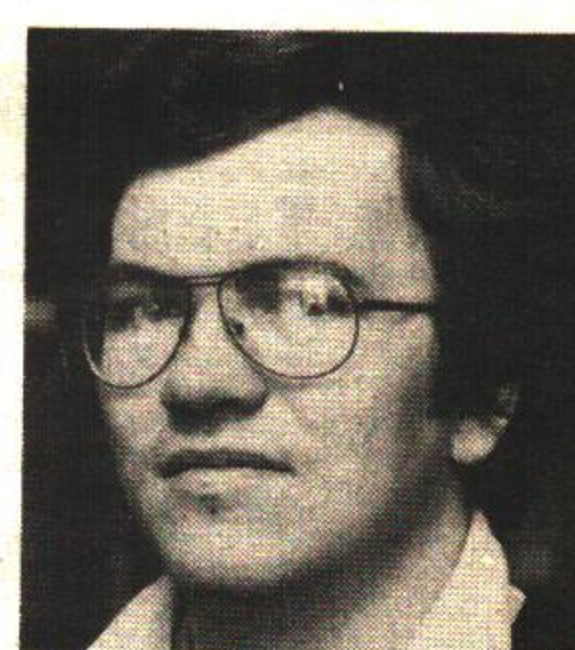

SA investment reassessed

A GREATER London Council panel has decided unanimously to reassess all GLC pension fund investments in companies with South African holdings.

The GLC has a staff pension fund of £960 million. A report to the fund panel revealed that investments in British and multinational companies with business interests in South Africa total more than £250 million.

And nearly £75 million is invested in firms on a United Nations blacklist of companies which have made a major contribution to the maintenance of the apartheid regime.

GLC deputy leader Michael Ward said: 'The South African economy is on the verge of collapse. It now makes financial as well as moral sense to withdraw investments from there and make them more profitably elsewhere.'

MICHAEL WARD

'In the interests of pension fund members it is high time we looked at these investments again. I am particularly pleased that the trades union representatives on the panel supported the decision to begin the process of disinvestment.'

● THE African singer Miriam Makeba will perform a concert for the South African liberation struggle at the Royal Festival Hall on Saturday September 28.

OH SO SHARP (3.10) and Steve Cauthen can thwart Lester Piggott's attempt to land his 30th English classic in the St Leger at DONCASTER today.

In what has become a virtual match, the final classic of the season is certain to develop into a tactical battle between Piggott and Cauthen.

Most of the pundits seem to think that Lanfranco will provide Piggott with his ninth St Leger success, but it is interesting that Oh So Sharp has remained odds-on throughout a week when she has been virtually friendless.

Oh So Sharp's critics believe the Oaks and 1,000 Guineas winner is 'over the top'. She has been beaten in her past two races, by Petoski in the 'King George' at Ascot, then by Commanche Run in the Gold Cup at York.

Commanche Run showed on Sunday at Phoenix Park that his York win was no fluke, and if Oh So Sharp has recovered from her efforts she could have too much speed in the closing stages for Lanfranco.

Bidding to become the first filly since Meld in 1955 to capture the fillies' 'triple crown', Oh So Sharp may not be much value, but she can crown a tremendous year for Cauthen.

Piggott may have better luck in the race before the Leger. He picks up a useful spare ride for Michael Stoute on Green Desert (2.30) in the Brian Swift Flying Childers Stakes.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP

Title is wide open

THE COUNTY championship was thrown wide open again yesterday as Hampshire slipped to a dramatic last ball defeat against Northamptonshire, while leaders Middlesex hung on for a draw against Essex.

With the final matches starting today, Middlesex hold a slender one-point lead over Hampshire, while long-time leaders Gloucestershire, despite not playing yesterday, cannot be ruled out of the hunt just 16 points off the top.

■ ROGER HARPER hit the last ball out of the Southampton ground for six to give Northants a one-wicket win and thwart Hampshire.

Asked to score 241 in 55 overs, Northants were set on their way as Allan Lamb smashed three sixes and four fours in his 60.

Rajesh Maru snapped up four wickets to turn the tide in Hampshire's favour, but then saw West Indian Harper hit his fourth six in an invaluable 27 not out to clinch victory.

Robin Smith and Malcolm Marshall had earlier given Hampshire a chance of victory, hitting 122 for the fifth wicket that led to the declaration at 244 for four.

■ DAVID WEST cracked his second century of the season to frustrate Mid-

Middlesex and Hants slip up

ALLAN LAMB ... Set Northants on their way with three sixes ding remaining defiant on 83 not out.

■ WEST INDIAN paceman Michael Holding steered Derbyshire to only their third championship win of the summer against Warwickshire at Chesterfield.

He snapped up three wickets in the morning for a match haul of ten for 118 — his best for the county.

Dane Ole Mortensen bagged the last two wickets as Warwickshire were put out for 265.

Then Iain Anderson and Bruce Roberts knocked off 36 runs to secure a ten wicket win and lift Derbyshire well away from the foot of the table.

■ VIV RICHARDS and Peter Roebuck guided bottom county Somerset to safety with a century apiece against Worcestershire at Taunton. Needing 186 to avoid an innings defeat, Ian Botham's men finished on 352 for three declared.

■ NOTTINGHAMSHIRE'S Chris Broad (72) and Derek Randall (73) went within striking distance of a win against Yorkshire at Scarborough, but in the end they finished 12 runs short. Peter Hartley produced a career best five for 75 to put the brakes on Notts, who needed 268 to win.

Manchester will prove

THE M

MIXED FEELINGS FOR BARNES

PETER BARNES will experience a strange sensation when he steps out for 100-per-cent League leaders Manchester United in today's derby at Maine Road.

'For the first time in my career, I'll be wanting United to beat City,' said Barnes, the former Manchester City and England winger. 'I certainly never thought I would see the day when I would be playing for them at Maine Road and it will be strange to go down the tunnel in red shirt.'

Barnes has responded to his 'last chance' move to Old Trafford with two goals in the last three games as United chase Tottenham's 1960-1961 double season record of 11 initial consecutive victories.

So far they have made seven — and Barnes will have to upset his father to make it eight.

Ken Barnes is the City chief scout. He said: 'The ideal situation would be City to win because they are my employers, but for Peter to play well.'

Barnes senior added: 'Peter has shown that he still has the skills which earned him England recognition. He has pace, can score a goal or two and is in a good side.'

Son Peter played with West Bromwich, Leeds (twice), Real Betis and PETE BARNES ... How will the fans react?

Coventry after leaving Maine Road.

'I don't know how the fans will react tomorrow,' he said.

Another quirk of the match means Barnes will be facing Sammy McIlroy in a blue shirt.

Barnes made his debut for City against United in 1974. McIlroy made his debut for United against City 14 years ago in a League game at Maine Road.

Lee chases Highbury bogey

LEE CHAPMAN, Sheffield Wednesday's sharpshooter, still remembers his nightmare days at Highbury. 'Everybody at the club were as good as gold to me, but I just couldn't get things together in London and I was so relieved when Sheffield Wednesday came in and signed me,' Chapman recalled this week.

He was signed from Stoke three years ago to boost Arsenal's strike force. But after failing to score in his first few matches, the lad from Lincoln was hounded by Highbury's North Bank.

And after just 23 games, which yielded a measly four goals, Chapman's career was rekindled by Wednesday manager Howard Wilkinson. One of Chapman's biggest moments last season, as Wednesday chased an ill-fated place in Europe, came on November 25 when he scored a goal against his old club in the 2-1 victory over Arsenal at Hillsborough.

'I must admit that goal gave me great pleasure, but I would really like to score a few at Highbury this weekend, just to show the fans down there what I am capable of,' he said this week.

Wednesday had a fine start to the new season, but in their last two matches they suffered setbacks, going down 5-1 at home to Everton and then only drawing 2-2 in front of their own fans against West Ham last weekend.

'We have been disappointed with our last two results obviously, but I think it has given us the kind of incentive we need before taking on Arsenal this weekend,' added Chapman.

ide the crowds again for intriguing derby

MAINE EVENT

FROM SHAUN PHILLIPS

MANCHESTER will yet again host the biggest attendance in the Football League this afternoon. But this time it will be at Maine Road — and not Old Trafford.

City, for so long the Cinderellas of the city, take on their arch-rivals and League leaders Manchester United in the most anticipated derby match of the season so far.

It's almost a clash of cultures — United in one corner, one of the greatest clubs in the world and the richest in Britain, versus, in the other corner, City, a club with a £3 million debt, and a team lacking real household names.

But a derby game is a great leveller — and City believe they can put an end to United's astonishing start to the season.

Reasons

'There's a hundred reasons at least why we can beat United on Saturday,' said their centre-half Mick McCarthy defiantly yesterday, 'but I'll name just three — Sammy McIlroy, David Phillips and Paul Power.'

'Sammy is still aggrieved about being let go by Ron Atkinson,' explained McCarthy. 'And now, wearing a light blue shirt after over 350 appearances for

'David Phillips is still gutted about that penalty that knocked Wales out of the World Cup in midweek. He will be determined to make up for it against United on Saturday.'

And McCarthy added: 'Paul Power has played in many Manchester derby games, but I think that this one could mean more to him than all the others put together.'

United will start odds-on favourites for the game, but McCarthy is sure that the atmosphere and determination of City could see them through today.

'The whole of Manchester is buzzing about this one,'

he added. 'We won't be going into the match feeling inferior, far from it. There's no way we are going to let our supporters down.'

Manchester City will definitely have captain Power back in their team. He missed the last four games with a pelvic injury, but played in a reserve team

United to sell Olsen

JESPER OLSEN ... offer from Feyenoord

JESPER OLSEN, Manchester United's Danish international winger signed in a blaze of glory just 14 months ago, could be on his way back to the continent.

Feyenoord, currently fifth in the Dutch League, have made an offer for the 24-year-old Dane who has not settled down in the Football League.

And Olsen, injured after just four League matches this season, is finding it desperately hard to get back into United's table-topping team.

The form of former England winger Peter Barnes is keeping the skilful Dane out — and United may now be willing to part with Olsen who cost them £800,000 from Ajax Amsterdam in July last year.

Olsen, it is believed, is United's highest-paid player, another reason why the First Division leaders might be willing to part company with the 24-year-old.

The little Dane impressed manager Ron Atkinson after he had tormented England's defence in the last European Championship. But since his arrival at Old Trafford Olsen has failed to live up to that reputation.

Olsen readily admitted last season that he found it very difficult to adjust to the faster pace of the Football League and in early performances this time — against Aston Villa, Ipswich, Arsenal and West Ham — he showed no signs of having finally found his feet.

Meanwhile Barnes, whose career was revived when Atkinson took him from Coventry during the summer, has grabbed his chance with both hands and has turned in some very impressive performances.

Atkinson also knows that he cannot make any big-name signings to strengthen his challenge for the League Championship until he offloads at least one of his stars.

News that Feyenoord have made a bid for Olsen may very well force their Dutch League arch-rivals Ajax into the frame as well.

They would be keen to bring back one of their fans' favourites to Amsterdam.

Ray's baptism of fire

BY ROBERT JAMES

RAY HOUGHTON, Oxford's midweek signing from Fulham, has been promised a baptism of fire in the First Division at the Manor Ground this afternoon.

The 'Dons' from the university town have suddenly found the going tough in the premier division after a bright start — and this afternoon's visitors, Liverpool, have no intentions of making it any easier for them.

After just seven matches of the new campaign, Liverpool find themselves where they rightly belong — up there close to the top of the table waiting for Manchester United to make a mistake.

'Before this season began all the punters were backing United, Tottenham or Everton to win the League Championship this time,' said Liverpool defender Mark Lawrenson this week.

'Only a few players were willing to stick their necks out and tip us, but already we are showing our critics that we could very well be the team to beat this season.'

And that fighting talk spells bad news for Oxford, beaten in their last four games on the trot, this afternoon.

'Liverpool appear to be right into the groove right now. We will have a hell of a job holding them this Saturday,' said Oxford full-back David Langan this week.

Squad

'They have such a great squad, and with players like Jimmy Beglin, Steve Nicol and Paul Walsh pushing for regular places in the first team competition is intense at Anfield.'

Houghton, a creative midfielder with an eye for goals, should make a difference for Oxford, but Langan has gone on record as saying that the club, promoted to the First Division just four months ago, need at least three players to make sure of survival in the toughest League in the world.

And there were some encouraging words from Lawrenson this week. 'Oxford have got to be patient with things,' he said. 'If they keep their heads then results will begin to go their way.'

'They have already played Tottenham, Sheffield Wednesday and Manchester United, three of the top teams in the country right now. Results will come their way, I'm sure. But they will have to look further than Saturday I think.'

Liverpool will make at least one change, with player-manager Kenny Dalglish bringing in midfielder Steve McMahon for his debut.

McMahon, signed from Aston Villa a week ago £350,000, is included in a 14-strong squad, but will definitely play. Also in the party, and hoping to earn selection is striker Paul Walsh, fit again after a groin injury.

THE BIG BATTLE OF MANCHESTER

MAINE EVENT

MARK HUGHES, fresh from his 100-per-cent goalscoring record alongside Ian Rush in the Wales side this week, will have even more to prove in the Manchester derby this afternoon — he will want his team to keep their Division One 100-per-cent record too.

On the right you can see him blasting goalwards during the Charity Shield in August against Everton.

And he'll have to be on strike this afternoon against a Manchester City team intent on proving that their move back into the premier division is no fluke.

The man back at their helm will be Paul Power (seen below in better days for City and Brighton in 1983). He has missed the last four matches with a pelvic injury, but manager Billy McNeill said yesterday: 'He is available for selection.'

Spaniards save face

RYDER CUP

THE 11TH-HOUR partnership of Severiano Ballesteros and Manuel Pinero inspired Europe to a tremendous fight back in the Ryder Cup match at the Belfry yesterday.

The Spanish duo, forced on captain Tony Jacklin because of the poor form of Jose Rivero, were the only Europeans to win twice on the opening day when the United States held on to a one-point lead at 4½ to 3½.

The Americans seemed set to romp clear when they won the foursome 3-1, but the fourballs were a different story after Jacklin had taken several surprising decisions.

Disgust

He dropped Open champion Sandy Lyle, much to his disgust, and also left out special selections Nick Faldo and Ken Brown — and the response was dramatic:

The Americans usually win this form of the game, but the Europeans beat them 2½ to 1½ to close the gap, with Paul Way, still the youngest member of the European team at 22, and Ian Woosnam setting a magnificent example.

They did not get a morning outing, but showed they might have been used by taking the top match by the scruff of the neck, shooting an approximate better ball score of 64, eight under par, and holding off a determined counter-attack from Fuzzy Zoeller and Hubert Green.

Jacklin said the morning session was a rude awakening. 'But I am pleased with the way we have come back. There was some great golf played this afternoon.'

'All the fourballs were close — the way I expected them to be. At lunch I wanted to know what was going on, but I didn't go in screaming. These are men at the top of their profession and they are doing the best they can.'

He said the fact that Lyle was Open champion didn't come into his selection.

Best

'We are 12 players and I tried to find the best partnerships,' said Jacklin.

US captain Lee Trevino said he used all his men because he did not want to 'sit on player out.'

'I don't have any fingernails left and I felt much better at noon than I do now. But I'm just as confident that we'll win as when I brought the team over.'
