

LABOR CALLED TO BATTLE BY LA FOLLETTE

Enemies of Freedom Control Democratic and Republican Parties, Senator Says.

By SENATOR ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE

I appeal to the men and women of America to enlist in the great progressive movement that is now forming to drive monopoly and special privilege out of control of Government and restore it to the people.

It is your fight. The rights, the liberties and the happiness of your children and your children's children will be determined by the outcome of the struggle in which we are now engaged.

The enemies of freedom have assumed control of both the Democratic and Republican parties. They have entrenched themselves in defense of vested rights and predatory interests.

We have raised high the standard of human rights and propose to fight aggressively to maintain them. We shall not be content to hold the ground we have already gained, but shall ever strive to advance the cause of freedom and democracy. We set no limit to the onward march of humanity.

La Follette Forces Appeal for Funds

Herman L. Ekern, Attorney General of Wisconsin and Joint National Financial Director of the La Follette campaign fund, who has been conferring with Eastern leaders, issued a statement through La Follette headquarters yesterday to the effect that a million individual campaign contributions were sought to carry the La Follette-Wheeler forces to victory. He expressed his belief that an adequate campaign fund would be forthcoming, and urged early contributions.

WHEELER SENDS GREETING

'Smash Monopoly' Is Labor Day Message of Senator Wheeler.

By SENATOR BURTON K. WHEELER

I venture the assertion that nothing just like this Progressive movement has been witnessed in this country since Lincoln stressed the issue of chattel slavery in 1860. Or, perhaps, we will have to go further back, to Jackson's great fight against "the Bank" in 1832.

The issue is clear. No man can be in doubt where he should stand. His brain and his heart alike declare:

Make common cause with your proven friends. Distrust and despise those who seek your favor only to deceive and betray you. Enlist today with those who are fighting your battles. For the sake of your wives and your children be counted as a man.

In a very real sense those of us who are today struggling to free our country from the grip of monopoly are the heirs of Jackson and Lincoln.

They dared to challenge entrenched privilege. So do we.

They triumphed because the plain people supported them. We will win for the same reasons.

1924 Will Bring Great Triumph to American Workers, Debs Declares

By EUGENE V. DEBS

The first Monday in September is the oneday set apart as a national holiday and dedicated to the working class of the United States.

The first of May is the one day set apart as an international holiday and dedicated to the working class of all the world.

The national Labor Day celebrated by the American workers was granted to them and made legal by their economic masters, who join largely in the celebration of the day.

The international Labor Day, celebrated by all the workers of the world, was appropriated by the workers themselves, a fact of revolutionary significance which accounts for the universal ruling class dread of international Labor Day.

Each of these days has its own significance, and each its special message to the workers of America and the world.

The intelligent observance of our national Labor Day leads inevitably to the larger observance of our international Labor Day, in which we join hands and hearts with all the workers of the world.

The capitalists, it will be observed, have no capital day, national or international, to celebrate, and it would be in order to set such a day apart for them had they not wisely provided that all the days of the round year are theirs to celebrate and enjoy.

Labor Day this year of 1924 presents themes of the most vital interest and opportunities unprecedented to the workers of the United States.

The one vital demand that confronts them now as in the past, and will in the future, sternly exacting unqualified compliance as a condition of advance, is Unity, class-conscious Solidarity—economic, political and cooperative—without which all hope is vain and all efforts fruitless.

Paradoxical as it appears, nothing in the Labor movement is so easy, so obvious, so essential and inevitable, and nothing so difficult and defiant of accomplishment.

We know that unity, which means power, has made some progress among workers, and that all we have to do is to stand staunch and hammer away until finally sufficient solidarity has been achieved to put an end to capitalism and wage-slavery and give freedom to the workers of the world.

For twenty-seven years, the entire span of its existence, the Socialist Party has stood for the industrial and political solidarity of the workers, in accordance with the fundamental demand of the international Socialist movement, as the means and the only means of overthrowing the despotic and despoiling capitalist system and emancipating the workers from wage-slavery.

During this entire period the Socialist Party has stood uncompromisingly upon its own platform, nominated its own candidates, managed its own campaigns, and carried forward its own propaganda to arouse, educate and organize the American workers to achieve their industrial freedom, to abolish class rule, and to secure to themselves and to all others the blessings of peace and social justice by establishing the Socialist Commonwealth and ushering in the reign of the people.

But notwithstanding the courage and consistency with which the party has maintained its uncompromising attitude and its loyalty to the workers, which subjected it to the vilest misrepresentation and the bitterest and most relentless persecution, only a limited degree of progress was made in attracting the workers, especially those organized in the various trade unions who had been taught to regard Socialism as a vicious "foreign importation" and to treat the party accordingly by condemning it to ostracism and isolation.

The masses of the workers, in a word, did not and would not, for obvious reasons, come to the Socialist Party, and it is a fortunate fate that has made it imperative this year for the Socialist Party to go to the masses of the workers.

The peculiar situation arising from the fact that millions of workers had been jarred loose from the old capitalist parties in consequence of the shocking exposure of their appalling corruption, (which we tried in vain for years to have them see) and had determined upon a policy of independent political action and upon the organization of a new party representing their interests and expressing their aims, made it absolutely necessary for the Socialist Party, unless it preferred to add impotency to isolation, to go to these millions of rebellious and progressive workers, make common cause with them in their struggle, enlist their sympathy, their confidence and their cooperation, and by fighting side by side with them, on their ground, joining them to us and ourselves to them, making possible not only the basis of a vastly greater solidarity, but opening the door so long closed, giving us access to the organized workers and enabling us to carry forward our propaganda and our work of organization upon a far greater and more effective scale than ever before.

To carry out this purpose and achieve success for this policy, we have this year endorsed the Presidential candidates of these independent and progressive elements and we shall in good faith give them our unqualified support, but in doing so we shall maintain the absolute autonomy of the Socialist Party and adhere rigidly to its revolutionary principles. In point of tactics alone do we depart from our usual course and in this we shall be triumphantly justified before the year is over.

Following the campaign we shall stand prepared to do our share to organize and make permanent the American Labor party to which the temporary movement is pledged. We do not expect the party to be organized by political candidates but by the workers themselves, and we are persuaded that the time has come when they are equal to the formidable task. In this new and greater party of Labor the Socialist Annual Holiday Finds Toil-ers of Entire Country Under the La Follette Banner.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—A hundred delegates from all sections of the State, representing trade unions and Socialist Party organizations, met in the Hotel Garde and organized the Connecticut branch of the third party.

A long discussion was held over the advisability of nominating a complete La Follette ticket at this conference, but Mr. Roe, who acted as chairman, ruled that the conference could take no action except to endorse La Follette for President and Wheeler for Vice-President.

"The election of Senator La Follette this year means cleaning house in Washington, a job that certainly needs being done, and which will be done this year for the first time in many years," said Gilbert E. Roe, regional director of the La Follette-Wheeler campaign.

The officers elected were: State chairman, Samuel W. Theor, New Haven; first vice-chairman, Mrs. Helen Hill Weed, Norwalk; second vice-chairman, Martin Plunkett, Wallingford; secretary, Alfred S. O'Brien, Bridgeport; assistant secretary, Nathan Miller, New Haven.

The executive committee consists of the following:

Wilson F. Herman, New Haven; Jasper McLevy, Bridgeport; H. J. Gallagher, Hartford; E. D. Partidge, New London; E. G. Shea, Danbury; Attorney Henry Weissmann, Waterbury; Dr. Francis Downing, Mossup; Roger Sherman Baldwin, Woodbury; Sarah Rosenthal, Branford; N. E. Gandeman, New Haven; Mrs. E. O. Meera, New Haven; C. H. Newton, New London.

The following presidential electors will go on the independent La Follette ticket and also on the Socialist ticket: Mrs. Helen Hill Weed, Norwalk; Dr. Francis Downing,

LABOR MARSHALS ITS FORCES TO WIN JUSTICE

FROM Labor Day to Labor Day may be more or less than a year. It depends entirely upon the record of failure or achievement. Too often, as after the reaction brought by the war, it would seem that Labor was bound to subtract from its past gains, instead of even standing still. Then come single years when so much progress is made that it does not feel as though but twelve months have passed.

The period through which we are now working is one full of expanded growth. The speed which is considered characteristic of the twentieth century has struck the Labor movement. Sparks are flying.

Let us say at once that Labor is hardly yet aware in this country of the big role it is playing. The movement which is gaining headway behind the unsullied banner of Robert La Follette and Burton Wheeler is not generally accepted as principally a Labor manifestation. And Labor is by no means claiming the most conspicuous part in that movement.

IT MAY BE admitted that this movement is more thoroughly American and national than Labor and class-conscious. Progressive may be the adjective by which it can best be described. Its identification marks are not pronouncedly, distinctly supplied by one group. It is broad and human. It will appeal to elements in all classes.

Nevertheless, to Labor belongs the primary claim to ownership. A happy meeting of the disillusioned factors in the old political parties and the awakening masses in the trades unions, with the embattled

La Follette-Wheeler Movement Will Bring American Workers a Larger Share of the Power It So Well Deserves.

By JOSEPH E. COHEN

farmers as the connecting medium, this movement is a spontaneous expression, rather than an artificial creation.

To Labor will fall a great part of the burden to be carried if the movement becomes a popular political uprising such as will produce a landslide on Election Day. Labor must not fail!

LABOR must not fail because, however sudden it has been thrust into this position of serious responsibility, it must rise to the occasion and show that it is ready to step in where the votaries of the old order are so helplessly bankrupt.

More than that, Labor cannot dare fail, because it is growing ever clearer that upon the industrial and political movement of Labor alone rests what remaining hope that civilization can be saved.

The experience of the war-shattered countries of Europe bears this out all too bitterly and amply. Had there been an iota of human understanding and sympathy among the elder mischief-makers of statecraft, the many millions across the water would not now be desolate. Had there been a particle of ability among the functionaries of the old parties, the people would not have turned to Labor, to the radicals and Socialists.

For in no country did Labor regard itself as full-fledged to cope with the problems of government. In no country did the population deem the time arrived to permit Labor to take control. But there was no other way out.

So in the more important governments of Europe the palsied fingers of the old caretakers have been removed. The strong right arm of the men of toil has grasped hold.

MISTAKES have been made. Blunders have been committed. Failures have resulted more than once. Utopia has not been realized.

But altogether the record has been clean and white. Out of the chaos has come order. Autocracy is giving way to democracy. The healing processes go on.

Better than that, only through the victories of the new spokesmen have the people learnt the method of amity and concord and accommodation. Peace is becoming possible. How much more even than the growing security against want is the secured solidarity against war! However slowly the pall of misery in material things may lift, what a flood of spiritual sunshine will come when it is known that there never again can be the fratricidal slaughter of human beings!

How strangely difficult it has been to teach Labor the lesson that only out of its own vast experience can come the wisdom to rule the world in justice and love! How self-evident a truth; how easy a way home! Yet often it has followed the false leaders, in whatever rank of life. Often it has hearkened to those who denied the essential thing of social good—that only as those who do the day's work are free and happy can civilization be.

Far from this understanding are too many in the old world and more in the new. Here the lavish trappings of prosperity flaunt the reformer and revolutionist; here a larger portion of the common wealth has trickled down to the throngs in the lower classes.

But here, too, can be the most whole-hearted will to have the nation enjoy the common opportunities.

THERE should be no mistake about the nature of the political upheaval which is going to carry the La Follette-Wheeler movement into a generous share of governmental power. That movement is going to sweep all before it. Deprived of the bought avenues of publicity, it will be carried along by the multitudes with that same speedy means of communication which in such a few minutes put the nation into rejoicing over the news of the armistice that ended the Great Crime.

The masses will be the body of the new movement. They will be its messengers. They must also be its makers. It must be wrought of their sinew and sense, if it is to be wholesome and well. It must be especially their movement.

For this will be an important engagement in the unfolding contest between the privileges of the few and the possibilities of the many. The lines are forming. The entrenched plunderers will give no quarter. They will yield to the people only when compelled. They will fight from fort to fort, from trench to trench. They will surrender only when they are overwhelmed by the united force of the new army. So alone can liberty be won for all.

This Labor Day will be a big year in the march to victory!

Labor Day 1924

Fraternal Greetings to our Members and to all Organized Workers. We sincerely hope that the solidarity of Labor will in the months to come inspire the American workers to renewed efforts for their economic and political emancipation.

Labor of World Pays Tribute to Jaures Before Huge Throng

GEORGE SLOCOMBE

PARIS.—It is ten years since the bullet of a young assassin, half-crazed by the violent hysteria of the Royalists, robbed France and Europe of Jean Jaures, who was, with Anatole France and Romain Rolland, the only outstanding moral personality in this generation of Frenchmen.

A Radical Government, among the members of which Jaures counted many admirers, is now making amends to the memory of that great Republican and has secured from Parliament authority to transfer his remains to the Pantheon, there to lie with those of Renan, Zola and Gambetta.

But a more direct and moving tribute to Jaures' memory was that offered in the vast auditorium of the Trocadero last night (August 1), when 10,000 working men and women listened reverently to the music of Mendelssohn, Schumann and Handel, and to other items in the symbolic program arranged by that great dramatic artist and producer, M. Gemier, and later echoed, with an emotion not to be equalled outside the Latin countries, the phrases in which leading Socialists of the European countries evoked the life and labor of their dead comrade.

The Belgian Socialist Party was represented by Emile Vandervelde, a first-class orator. Filippo Turati had come for the Italian Socialists, and his references to the murder of Matteotti moved the vast audience to generous indignation. Paul Loebe, member and former President of the Reichstag, spoke for the German Socialists.

Leon Blum and Leon Jouhaux made speeches respectively for the French Socialist Party and the General Confederation of Labor.

Robert Williams declared that Jaures did not belong to the French Socialism alone, but, like Hardie, Bebel, and Lenin, to the entire world's working class. Since the disappearance of these leaders the race of giants seemed to have died out, and one could only echo the cry of the English poet, "Oh, God, create no more giants, but exalt the race."

He appealed particularly to those who claimed to draw their inspiration from Lenin to re-enter the ranks of the Labor International and restore the unity without which victory was impossible.

A particularly warm reception was given to Miguel Unamuno, the great Spanish writer recently delivered from exile on the rocky island of Fuerteventura, who added his homage to the memory of Jaures. Another speaker than Bunji Suzuki, of the Japanese Labor movement.

Labor builds not for the moment, but for all time; for the hour that now is, and for the years that are to be. The issues at stake are not the winning of party victory, but the freeing of a class. The frothy element will always shout with the biggest crowd, and to pander to it is almost criminal.—Keir Hardie.

I have not a doubt that our present trade unions will be the skeletons of the future social order.—Gronlund.

GREETINGS

are extended by the Joint Board of the Cloak, Skirt, Dress and Reefer Makers' Union to all the Trade Unionists and Comrades on the occasion of Labor Day, in behalf of all its Locals, 1, 3, 9, 10, 11, 17, 21, 22, 23, 35, 45, 48, 64, 82 and 89.

Labor Day is the holiday for workers. It has been achieved through unity of our ranks and through the strength of organization. Let us all further the cause of Labor, which tends to bring better economic conditions.

BALTIMORE, Md.—The campaign for La Follette and Wheeler has been set in motion by the Maryland branch of the National Conference for Progressive Political Action.

Seven of the eight electors which constitute the electoral vote of the State were named at a convention here in the Auditorium Theatre. The formal endorsement of the nomination of La Follette and Wheeler was the occasion for a prolonged demonstration of the delegates and spectators.

Four hundred delegates were present, representing 142 Labor and political organizations. There were about 1,000 spectators, who came from all parts of the State.

A resolution condemning the proposed National Defense Day as a militarist gesture which may militate against world peace, was unanimously adopted.

A State committee was chosen, as well as a committee to direct the work of securing the necessary petitions to place the national La Follette ticket on the ballot.

The convention was called to order by Dr. Samuel Niessadt, Socialist. William H. Johnston, Chairman of the Conference for Progressive Political Action delivered the principal speech of the occasion. His appeal that the workers finance the campaign with dollar contributions was met by a substantial collection from the delegates and visitors, and assurances that a vigorous finance committee would be placed in the field.

Edward D. Bieretz was elected permanent chairman; Silverman, permanent secretary, and Joseph Kunz, assistant secretary. The convention then proceeded to pass on committee reports.

The following Presidential electors were chosen: Dr. Broadus Mitchell, A. W. Milke, Judge Jacob M. Moses, William G. Lang, Elisabeth Gilman, Rev. James L. Smiley and F. O. Larriman.

Members of the State central committee were named as follows: Dr. Donald Hooker, James L. O'Donnell, Dr. Mercer G. Johnston, Joseph Kunz, William N. Purdy, Dr. Samuel M. Neistadt, William A. Toole, William Baker, Christine Keller, Charles Bernheim, Isadore Silverman, E. F. Isaac, J. L. Rodier, W. D. Feldmeyer, J. B. Edgerton, J. J. Tehaney, C. W. Caster, R. L. Collingsworth, H. J. Holland, Joseph A. Billingslea, W. E. Thomas, Mrs. Eleanor Danziger, Mrs. Dora G. Ogle, Harry Cohen, Carl Doerschle, William F. Jones, H. Bernstein, Lewis J. Flagg, Robert McBeth, Elsie Montagne, C. L. Dunkle, Edward D. Bieretz, Henry F. Broening and M. H. Jepper.

Greenpoint Heard From

"Positively, we are solid for La Follette," declared Thomas J. Mahoney, 662 Humboldt street, Brooklyn, temporary chairman of the American Constitutional Party's original nucleus of members who launched that organization four years ago in a little room behind the cigar store of Charles Wiel.

Mahoney, who headed a Brooklyn delegation to the Chicago convention of the "Committee of 48," at the time of last Presidential campaign, stated that a local committee of fifty or sixty young men, former members of Livingston Council of the American Constitutional party, was ready to work hard for La Follette as Presidential candidate.

San Joaquin Valley Too!

From a nucleus of less than a dozen pioneering spirits, the San Joaquin Valley, California, La Follette Progressive League, launched just the week before, entered a vigorous campaign for the national Progressive ticket at its regular Wednesday night meeting at the Hotel Fresno with a charter membership of 150.

Virtually all this membership was signed up in the first day of the organization's existence as the formal cards for the enrollment of the fighting Senator's supporters were not off the presses until the day preceding the meeting.

Lower California Organized

The opening gun in California Labor's fight for La Follette and Senator Wheeler was touched off August 6. Representatives, comprising the executive boards of the Central Labor Council, Metal Trades Council, Allied Printing Trades Council, and executive board members of the four Railroad Brotherhoods, all of Los Angeles, and also representatives of Long Beach Central Labor Council and San Pedro Central Labor Council met in session in the Los Angeles Labor Temple, and formed the Los Angeles County Conference for Progressive Political Action, along the lines laid down at the California Conference at its meeting in San Francisco.

Oregon Drive Is On

Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, opened the La Follette and Wheeler campaign in Portland, Oregon with an address at the city auditorium. This meeting was the hop-off in the national campaign as far as Oregon is concerned. The appointment of Ernst Kroner as campaign manager for La Follette and Wheeler in Oregon, marks the real beginning of the campaign.

To have some wonder and curiosity about the end and proper conduct of life, however crudely that wonder may express itself, is one of the attributes that mark man off from the beast.—Manchester Guardian.

VOTE LABOR!

A fool there was, and he dug a hole,
Even as you and I;

He slid down the hole on a slippery pole,
And worked like the dickens digging coal,

Even as you and I;

He struggled away till the work was done,
And found when 'twas over he'd dug a ton,

So he pointed proudly to what he'd done,
Even as you and I.

He brought the coal to the light of day,
Even as you and I;

But he dropped his jaw, as he heard the Boss say,
"I'll give you a scuttleful for your pay,"

Even as you and I;

It wasn't the work that galled the chump,
But piling a ton upon a dump

And getting rewarded with just one lump,
Even as you and I.

So what did he do when the truth he found?
Even as you and I.

Why, he went right back to his hole in the ground,
And still dug a ton for a measly pound,

Even as you and I.

And the poor old juggins still digs that hole,
And on election day, when he goes to the poll,

He votes for his Boss—who owns the coal!
Even as you and I.

Party will have its place, but it will remain and function as the Socialist Party, and in that relation to the masses of workers it will have tenfold the influence and power for revolutionary propaganda it ever had before.

We have every reason this year to take heart of hope, and to enter the campaign with all the vigor and enthusiasm we possess and achieve such a victory as will startle the nation and send a thrill of joy around the world.

We rejoice in the militant hosts we have with us in this great battle and we likewise glory in the powers of corruption and reaction arrayed against us to challenge our advance.

We shall make this year historic in the annals of the American Labor movement and we shall also make it a banner year for the Socialist Party.

In our celebration of Labor Day we do not forget our comrades who are still held captive in capitalist dungeons for their unflinching courage in serving the Labor movement. Tom Mooney and Warren Billings, Sacco and Vanzetti and more than a hundred other Labor heroes still lie buried in foul prison cells for having stood up for the American workers against their capitalist exploiters, and every day they spend there is to the shame of the working class and to the disgrace of our vaunted free (?) institutions.

It matters not what organization these class war prisoners belong to, they are our comrades, they fought for our class, for you and for me, and they are in prison today to keep us from going there tomorrow, and it is our duty to demand their liberation in a united and commanding voice and to persevere in the demand and make it more and more emphatic until it is heeded and the last of them is given his freedom. Every Socialist and Labor speaker should lend his voice to this tragic feature of the campaign and every platform should resound with the cry of the assembled workers for the release of their imprisoned comrades.

On this Labor Day, so fraught with significance and so rich and fruitful in its possibilities, we join hands and hearts with the Socialists and workers of all nations and our greeting of fellowship and good cheer to them goes circling through all the zones that girdle the globe.

Standing erect and unafraid, touching shoulders, and hearts attuned to unity and solidarity, we march forward together as the conquering host of Labor to world-wide Victory and Emancipation.

GREETING FROM THE RAND SCHOOL

On this historic Labor Day, the Rand School of Social Science offers greetings and congratulations to The New Leader, to the Socialist Party, to the Conference for Progressive Political Action which now links us close to the whole movement of Organized Labor.

The task which was undertaken at Cleveland is no light or simple one. It involves the complete reorganization of American society—of its governmental policies, its industrial relations, its social institutions. It will require all the devotion and all the energies of all who care to make liberty a fact instead of a word. And it will be worth every sacrifice it costs.

For ages men have talked of the educated classes and the working classes, as if the two must forever be distinct. So they have been in the past—with the result that science and learning have been used as means to oppress and exploit Labor. So they must not be in the days to come. Labor must educate itself. The working-class movement must equip its own members with knowledge, broad and deep—knowledge for the sake of power, and power for the sake of freedom, of justice and of peace.

The Rand School has been a pathfinder in the field of Workers' Education. Eighteen years ago it stood alone. Today it is happy to be but one among many institutions devoted to the same good work. It disputes precedence with none of them. It welcomes them and wishes them all success. In harmony with them it goes on with its task of bringing the results of science and culture to the service of the broad and many-sided movement for human emancipation.

ONWARD TO A POWERFUL PARTY OF LABOR!

The outstanding message to Labor on this Labor Day is one of congratulation for the great forward step it has taken politically. The magnificent progressive movement under the splendid leadership of Senators La Follette and Wheeler is not yet definitely a third party or Labor party movement, but it is Labor's own. It is the conscious, political action of the farmers and workers of America, who constitute the producing masses. It is Labor's organization on the political field analogous to Labor's organization in its own unions on the economic field. It is the answer of the workers to the hypocrisy, corruption, inefficiency and class interest of both the old parties.

Once there was some justification in America for Labor's non-partisan policy. That day has gone. Labor can no longer trust merely to "good" politicians any more than it can trust to "good" bosses. It must trust itself politically as it has long trusted itself economically. There is no other way. Progressives have passed laws only to see them thrown out by the autocracy of a few old men who, seated on the judicial bench, read their own social and economic prejudices into law. Labor has seen the injunction evil spread until in large areas in the United States and in important industries it is impossible to organize legally. The farmers and workers alike have seen the chains of private monopoly and special privilege fastened upon them. Coal, super-power, the railroads so necessary to the common life of the people are controlled by industrial autocrats in the interest of absentee owners. This is a situation which Labor can end if it will. This year has given to the masses of the farmers and workers new energy and determination. They have seen the strides of their brethren in Britain and in Europe. They have watched the unfolding panorama of corruption in high places revealed by the oil scandal. They have seen the cowardice of both old parties. They know that the Democratic and Republican parties alike are the tools of business interests. They have marked the insanity of a system which reduces the farmer to bitter poverty while the city worker is paying for the food the farmer produces three times what the farmer gets. It is in answer to facts like these that the progressive movement of 1924 under leaders of true devotion has arisen. It will not stop until it has fulfilled the ambitions of those pioneers and dreamers who have gone before.

The function of Socialists in this

By NORMAN THOMAS,

League for Industrial Democracy.

new development is exceedingly important. They may be the inspiring and educating force in the developing Labor party. Socialism heretofore has been in America somewhat of a disembodied spirit. Now it has a chance to become the living soul of the producers' movement embodied in a well organized party of the farmers and workers. This end we Socialists can never attain by mere cleverness of strategy or skill in argument, still less by coercive power. We must persuade, we must carry conviction by our interpretation of events and win approval by the loyalty of our cooperation.

Specifically in this election we must roll up a big vote for La Follette and Wheeler while not neglecting our own State tickets where we have them. When it comes to arguing the case, after election, for a new party the size of the definite vote for our State tickets will speak louder than our words. Now is our time, we may not soon have such another opportunity. It is an opportunity for Jimmy Higgins; for those who will distribute literature, canvass election districts, do the hard digging for lasting foundations. I believe our comrades realize the challenge of the hour.

In this expression of satisfaction over Labor's forward action in politics I do not mean to suggest that our salvation and the creation of a better world for our children depends solely upon political action. Indeed, political action is a vain hope unless farmers and workers press their economic organization. After this political campaign is over the steady campaign of organization on the economic and political fields must go on. It will call for ever increasing stores of that energy and self-sacrifice which the workers have heretofore displayed. But there can be no doubt of their ultimate success.

One Word of Warning
The workers cannot be defeated

unless by their own blunders. The evil significance of organizations like the Ku Klux Klan lies in the fact that they divide on racial and religious lines those workers who have the same needs, the same sorrows, the same hopes and aspirations. The appeal to religious and racial bigotry is the last resort of the scoundrel. Prejudices hurt those who share them as much as those at whom they are directed. By our prejudices we fasten our own chains upon us.

On the onward march of the workers there are difficulties to be surmounted and perils to be overcome. The skies are not always bright. But our faces are toward the dawn, and if we march shoulder to shoulder we shall gain much for ourselves and for our children's children, we shall win the Promised Land.

The neckwear workers' union hails Labor Day, 1924, as the dawn of the greatest day in the history of the American Labor movement.

For the first time in the history of this country, all Labor forces are united behind a candidate for President. For the first time in the history of this country, all Labor is of one mind politically. For the first time, Labor Day does not find the workers divided over one of the most important questions before it, the political question.

May the omen of this Labor Day be fulfilled! May the unity of the workers, united as they are in today's political battle, continue and grow until the millions who do the world's work are indeed united as brothers and sisters; and may their struggle continue victoriously until the world is made free!

By MARIE B. MacDONALD
Organizer, American Labor Party

The American Labor Party greets Labor and its chosen spokesmen and champions and hopes that the situation facing Labor both political and economic will be met by them with hope, courage, understanding and a will to fight and achieve.

The onward and upward struggle of Labor against oppression and its gradual march toward greater power is history.

In mine, mill and factory, on land and sea and now in the air, Labor has toiled patiently and faithfully. In the face of untold suffering and deprivation Labor has conquered the resources of nature that the human family may be clothed, housed and fed.

It has accepted the burden and obligation of toil, and given over the great resources and the fruits of its Labor into the hands of the few. They have used their power to oppress Labor and aggrandize themselves and hold their untold wealth as the special privilege of the few for the few.

The great masses today are crying out to get back what is theirs. The cry becomes more insistent and the voices more audible. From farm, mine, mill, and railroad, the workers are calling for proper reward for their toil, for greater opportunity, for economic security, better food, shelter and clothing—a greater share in our civilization and more social justice. The two old parties are deaf to these cries, answering only with worn out platitudes and promises.

The American Labor Party is fully alive to this situation and welcomes the understanding and awakening or organized Labor as expressed by the July 4 convention held in Cleveland where La Follette and Wheeler were chosen its standard bearers.

Behind this convention are the purposeful forward looking elements in our nation some with a larger and some with a lesser vision but all going the same way for the same things.

The American Labor Party expresses the hope and aspiration of a large percentage of the American people who have toiled while others have reaped and who are now aroused to action. They see this as a movement blazing the way to a better world for themselves and posterity.

The American Labor Party can give no better message than to urge Labor and all friends of humanity to ally themselves behind these forces of progress and contribute moral and financial strength to fashion a political instrument to fight the battles of Labor as an independent party of Labor for civilization and humanity.

Let us live up to our historic mission!

Yet I doubt through the ages one increasing purpose runs,
And the thoughts of men are widened with the process of the suns.
—Tennyson.

The thought for years past had been how to use the earth so that the few might be enriched by the many. But what they had to solve now was how to use the earth for the good of mankind at large.—Sir George Grey.

Far dearer the grace or the prison,
Illumed by one patriot name,
Than the trophies of all who have risen
On Liberty's ruins to fame.

TOILERS OF LATIN AMERICA GREET A. F. OF L. AND THE SOCIALIST PARTY

THE Mexican organized Labor movement, as represented by the Crom (Confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana), is happy to congratulate the organized workers of the United States in their celebration of Labor Day. We are with the workers of your country not only in their joys and pleasures, such as they have this day, but also in their fight against capitalism. We wish them success in this fight.

We wish that the fraternal bonds that have always existed between the Crom and the American Federation of Labor will grow even stronger than they are at present, if that be possible, and that these bonds be extended to embrace the workers the world over.

We hope that by next Labor Day we will celebrate the victory of the working class toward which so much has been contributed by the American Federation of Labor and its President.

To the Socialist Party of America we can only reiterate the same sentiments of friendship and gratitude and good wishes that we have expressed so often in the past through our delegates to your conventions.

The enemies of the American Federation of Labor and of the Socialist Party are also the enemies of the Mexican Labor movement, and the stronger becomes the American Labor movement the sooner will American capitalism be abolished and we shall have peace in Mexico.

If we could do it, we would cross the border en masse on election day and help you to elect your candidates!

(COL.) RICARDO TREVINO,
Sec'y-Gen. of the Mexican Federation of Labor.

ON this day, consecrated to the celebration of Labor and Socialism in the United States I give a fraternal embrace from the organized workers of the Republic of Columbia to the organized workers of the United States. It is with sorrow that we must admit that we are only slightly organized in Columbia, but the vivid example of what organized Labor in the United States has obtained will guide us on the road that we are to follow in the near future.

The needs and goal of the working class permit of no national frontiers, and we know only one enemy—capitalism.

Viva el obrerismo organizado del mundo!

DR. CARLOS MELQUIZO,
Rep. Colombia Fed. of Labor.
Delegate to Pan-American Federation of Labor.

WE have been instructed to bring to the organized workers of the United States, and to the American people in general, a cordial and fraternal greeting on this day consecrated to Labor, from the Nicaraguan Federation of Labor.

We are engaged in Latin America, and particularly in Nicaragua at this period of our history, in recovering our economic freedom from evil foreign capitalism, and in obtaining our civil liberties from the corrupt politicians and barbarous military leaders that have usurped Government and have made possible our economic oppression by foreign vested interests.

In this double struggle we sense fully the value of international Labor cooperation. But we are not moved by these reasons alone; we are moved especially by our deep-rooted feeling of the great oneness of all workers. To this sentiment the American Federation of Labor has full-heartedly responded in this country, and it is eminently to this great body of organized workers and to their great President, Samuel Gompers, that this message is addressed.

The Labor movement and the Socialist Party are now engaged in the United States—and we rejoice in it—in a struggle similar to ours. Their victory here cannot but be our victory. For this victory we fervently pray.

SALOMON DE LA SELVA,
Special Representative
ERNESTO NOEL PALLAIS,
Labor Member of the Congress

The poverty of the worker, the business of the middle class and the wealth of the upper class are but three forms of bondage. Socialism has its message of freedom for all three. To the worker it offers release from thankless toil and harassing poverty; to the business man it promises freedom from the tyranny of the market; and to the rich it holds out the promise of joy in a life of useful service in exchange for an empty idle existence.

—Keir Hardie.

PAN-AMERICAN LABOR WILL MEET IN MEXICO

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The executive committee of the Pan-American Federation of Labor has issued a call for the next convention, to be held in Mexico City, December 3 next.

The last convention voted to meet in Guatemala, but the call states that "conditions in Guatemala make it impossible for our next convention to be held in that country."

The call cites the election of General Calles, Labor candidate for the Mexican presidency, and the December 1 inauguration of General Calles, thus making it appropriate for the convention to be held at that time, that representatives of all Latin-American Labor may rejoice with the workers of Mexico.

A Memorable Labor Day

By ALGERNON LEE,
Educational Director, Rand School of Social Science.

This Labor Day of 1924 will be a very memorable one. At hundreds of gatherings, throughout the length and breadth of the land, millions of working people will hear the voice of Robert M. La Follette, opening a great political campaign against the domination of high finance and capitalist monopoly—the first national movement of an avowedly independent and political nature in which Organized Labor of the United States has participated.

We may be sure in advance that Senator La Follette's words will be wise and brave and inspiring—that they will rouse thought in the minds and stir hope in the hearts of that great mass of men and women who bear the burdens of our civilization and have so small a share in its triumphs and rewards. But, however eloquent our standard bearer's address may be, more eloquent yet is the bare fact of this great awakening of the American working class.

In Great Britain, all over the European Continent, in Mexico and Argentina, in far-away Australia and New Zealand, thoughtful workingmen now have their eyes upon the United States. They have long wondered why our Labor movement was so slow to find adequate expression on the political field—why in this country alone, of all the great nations of the earth, the majority of the working people continued to divide their votes between two parties both of which were clearly dominated by organized Capital. They can never understand—only by close study can we ourselves come to understand—the peculiar economic, social, and political conditions which caused this anomaly. But we see, and they see, that a change has begun.

It may take long years to complete that change. But the spell has been broken. The lethargy, the heart-breaking dissension, the political paralysis of the past can never return.

The decades of patient but seemingly fruitless labor of the pioneers was after all worth while. We of the Socialist Party, and others who have partaken in that preparatory work, may look back with joy and pride to what we have done. We may at the same time look forward with joy and hope to what we still have to do.

Now is the Lexington of American Labor. Its Yorktown is sure to come. And we shall not shrink at any Valley Forge that may lie between.

Victory Lies Ahead

By WILLIAM KOHN,
President, Upholsterers' International Union

Labor Day in 1924 affords us an opportunity for reflection on the genuine progress made by Labor the world over.

Labor progress means Human progress and it is as necessary to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness as the air is to keep body and soul together.

During the past year progress has been made; the post-war conditions of Europe are much improved. Where darkness prevailed but a short while ago, light is breaking through the clouds. The mass of workers who were on the verge of starvation are beginning to assert themselves. McDonald, Labor's representative and choice is the Premier of England, and Herriot, a man of the people, the symbol of France's return to sanity, has routed Poincaré, the sabre-rattling idol of the militarist. The hold of Mussolini on Italy is no longer what it was. Our neighbors to the south, the Mexicans, have placed in power by the votes of the organized workers a Labor President.

We, too, for the first time are showing the solidarity that has been lacking in the past. The great mass of organized workers stand united, determined to drive from power the two old parties of the capitalist class and to hold the powers of Government in the hands of the people through the instrumentality of La Follette and Wheeler and to lay the foundation of a permanent and all powerful Labor Party.

In general, Labor has made wonderful forward strides. It has made the Open Shop Movement ridiculous, improved working conditions, and established the shorter work day on a firm basis.

The Upholsterers' International Union has done its part in common with the other Labor organizations. We have shirked no duty and have responded to every call for assistance. Our membership is on the increase and the scale of wages in our industry is constantly being improved, bringing greater comforts to the members. I can say with pride that we stand firmly for all that is best and most progressive in the Labor movement.

We join with the workers of America in celebrating Labor Day. We have gained much but our goal has by no means been reached and therefore we stand ready to battle on and on until the time when Labor shall be free. Free from oppression, free from economic bondage. Labor Day, 1924, finds us on the threshold of the final step, so let every class conscious worker rededicate himself or herself to fight on with renewed vigor until the Dawn of Victory and Emancipation.

Break Labor's Shackles

By PHILIP ZAUSNER,
Secretary, District Council 9, Painters' Union.

Labor Day this year is, perhaps, the most significant anniversary of that holiday which the American workers have ever before had the privilege of celebrating.

For the very first time in its history, the movement of the organized wage-earners is united in an effort to protect and secure its rights through independent Labor political action.

The endorsement of the candidates of La Follette and Wheeler by the American Federation of Labor marks the arrival of a new epoch in the history of American Labor. This step, representing a unity of action such as organized Labor has never before achieved in its political activities, means infinitely more than merely aiding tried and true friends of Labor.

The American Federation of Labor has begun to break down the shackles in which the nation's producing masses are held by the special interest-ridden old parties.

The New Leader is to be congratulated for the advanced position it occupies in this new movement of the wage earners. Having pitched its tent among those of the politically awakened hosts of Labor, the future of The New Leader need give its friends no cause for fear or doubt.

The instruments of production and distribution, which must be used cooperatively, must also be owned by the individual. They can now be owned extensively only by small combinations of individuals in the form of trusts, or collectively by the people as a whole.—Rev. W. T. Brown.
